FORCIBLY detained Tuesday from boarding a flight to Lima, Peru, is ousted president Fernando Belaunde Terry who was taken from the airport in Buenos Aires. He later was allowed to return and caught a flight to New York. He said in an interview today he wanted to return to Peru where he hoped to lead a movement against the army leaders who ousted him last week. (AP Wirephoto.)

Army Coup Fails In South Vietnam

Saigon Ready For Any Move

SAIGON (AP)—A coup against the South Vietnamese government of President Nguyen Van Thieu was thwarted Tuesday night, a reliable government source said today.

THIEU
. . . called alert

Other informed sources said several ranking South Vietnamese marine officers, ranging from majors to colonels, had been arrested.

The disclosure of the coup attempt follows by hours an announcement that South Vietnamese armed forces were placed on full alert Tuesday afternoon.

The high government source said: "You can expect a lot of people to be arrested in the next few days, all as a result of the coup attempt that failed."

This source said details of the coup attempt were still incomplete and it was not yet known who was behind it or how widespread it was.

OFICERS HELD

The fact that several marine officers were arrested could indicate the involvement of Lt.-Gen. Le Nguyen Khang, the marine commandant and a close political ally of Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, the president's political rival. This could not be confirmed: Khang's whereabouts were not known.

Marine units in the Saigon area recently were replaced by Rangers at the order of Thieu, reports said, because he feared a coup of Khang.

Since he became president last October, Thieu has been consolidating his power, mostly at the expense of Ky. As part of this, Thieu stripped Khang of his posts of 3rd Corps commander and commander of the capital military district.

Khang kept his marine command, however, but it was thought that Thieu would take that away eventually.

SIX BELIEVED ARRESTED

The exact number of marine officers arrested was not immediately known, but it was thought to be about six.

U.S. embassy sources said they had no information to indicate a coup attempt against the Thieu government.

"We'll just have to hold tight and see what comes out of this," one embassy official said.

Sources earlier had attributed the military alert to everything from jitters over the return from exile of former chief-of-state Gen. Duong Minh, known as "Big Minh," to possible major developments at the preliminary U.S.-North Vietnamese peace talks in Paris.

The high-level government source said the government feared that anti-government Buddhists, who revere the general, might try to use him as a rallying point for actions against the government.

UN Sees Tension Easing

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — United Nations diplomats expressed guarded hope today for an easing of East-West tension in Europe following the surprise meeting between the foreign ministers of the Soviet Union and West Germany.

Delegates were heartened that the half-hour talk Tuesday between Andrei A. Gromyko of the Soviet Union and Willy Brandt of West Germany was initiated by the Soviets.

The meeting was described by Brandt as useful. Later the West German mission in a communique said the talk dealt with "the well-known questions of Germany and Europe which are of interest to both partners." The Russians had nothing to say.

The meeting, first contact between Moscow and Bonn in six years, was seen by some as a possible move by the Kremlin to establish a detente in a Europe still shaken by the Communist bloc thrust into Czechoslovakia.

It was the first such contact since Gromyko met West German Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder in Geneva in 1962.

Danish Foreign Minister Poul Hartling echoed the views of many delegates when he said his countrymen following with sympathy West Germany's desire to negotiate with the Russians.

REMAIN DUBIOUS

American officials remained dubious, noting that Moscow had not noticeably changed its threatening posture toward West Germany.

Delegates recalled, however, that Gromyko's comments on West Germany in his policy speech before the General Assembly last week had omitted the usual Soviet reference to UN Charter provisions pertaining to enemy states. The Russians had been citing these articles as justification for any unilateral move against Bonn.

Diplomats also noted a recent speech to the West German parliament by Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger who said that the aim of the Bonn government is to pave the way "for a new political climate of understanding and, wherever possible, co-operation" with the Kremlin.

The Brandt-Gromyko meeting came a few hours before the Soviet foreign minister returned home.

Meanwhile, hopes for progress toward a Middle East peace settlement remained in the balance as delegates studied a "program for peace" presented to the General Assembly Tuesday by Israel.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban called for a renewed effort through UN envoy Gunnar Jarring within the next few weeks.

NOBEL PRIZE for contributions to the cause of peace was awarded today to Rene Cassin, 81, French writer and president of the European Court of Human Rights. The $70,000 award was for his work in writing the United Nations Declaration On Human Rights. It was the first peace prize award since 1965.

U.S. House In Muddle On TV Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States House of Representatives fought and muddled its way through almost 20 hours of delaying tactics before taking up today a bill to facilitate a Hubert H. Humphrey-Richard M. Nixon-George C. Wallace television debate.

Records and precedents fell like tenpins during the continuous day-and-night struggle between Democrats bent on passing the bill and Republicans staging the House equivalent of a filibuster.

For the last 2½ hours of preliminaries, members were physically locked in the chamber by majority vote—the first such instance, veteran members said, in more than 50 years.

The Democrats had charged Republicans with trying to prevent the presidential debate and at the same time shield their candidate from blame for ducking the encounter.

House Speaker John W. McCormack said he was bound by the majority vote in support of Adams' motion and insisted that the doors would remain locked until the business before the House was completed.

Nixon has said he might be willing to debate Humphrey if the equal-time provision is suspended, as it was in 1960 when he went on the networks against John F. Kennedy.

But, Nixon says he would not take part in a three-way debate involving Wallace.

Soviet Trial Opens

MOSCOW (Reuters)—Pavel Litvinov, physicist grandson of Maxim Litvinov, Stalin's long-time foreign minister, went on trial today for publicly protesting the Soviet-led occupation of Czechoslovakia. Also on trial were four other protesters — including Lariss Daniel, wife of imprisoned author Yuli Daniel. They were arrested after a brief demonstration in Red Square Aug. 25.

BANNISTER WARNS OF OLYMPIC DANGERS

The 19th Olympic Games will open in Mexico Saturday and Roger Bannister feels the decision to stage the world's greatest sports spectacle at a high altitude is "ludicrous."

First man to break the four-minute barrier for the mile, Bannister warns of dangers involved in high-altitude competition while previewing the Olympics for The Daily Times. The first of four exclusive articles by Bannister will appear on The Times' sports pages Thursday.

RESCUE of child required firemen to dig through nine feet of rubble after explosion in a Toronto residence early today. Child was unhurt except for bleeding nose and sratch but nine other persons were injured, two critically. Damage was set at $75,000. Only one wall was left standing. Firemen and gas company officials are conducting investigation.

'Full Role' Pledged Rebuilding Nigeria

By KEN PRITCHARD

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Sharp today declared Canada's intention "to play a full part" in providing relief immediately needed in Nigeria and in reconstruction when peace comes to the strife-torn African country.

He also said the Canadian United Nations delegation "acknowledges and fully understands" the Organization of African Unity request that world governments not take any action which might jeopardize the unity, territorial integrity and peace of Nigeria.

Sharp, delivering for the first time Canada's keynote speech in the General Assembly, also branded the Soviet-bloc invasion of Czechoslovakia as "naked power politics"; called for progress toward world disarmament, and announced a 25-per-cent increase in Canada's contribution to the United Nations Development Program.

Sharp did not ask for UN action to bring about a ceasefire in Nigeria, despite pressure from some Canadians on the Trudeau government to take such a step.

The Liberal government has been on record as opposing any political intervention in the country where the Ibo tribe is fighting an apparently losing battle for secession from the Nigerian federation.

On Tuesday Sharp rejected appeals here from two opposition MPs that Canada sponsor a UN resolution on Biafra. The appeals were made by David MacDonald, Conservative member for Egmont, and Andrew Brewin, NDP member for Toronto Greenwood, who last week spent 36 hours in Biafra on an unofficial fact-finding mission.

The external affairs minister bore down hard on Canada's willingness to relieve suffering in the country where the United Nations Children's Fund at the end of September estimated between 8,000 and 10,000 persons a day were dying of malnutrition and disease.

Canada has given the International Red Cross $1,000,000, and substantial contributions have been made by Canadian voluntary agencies. As was announced in Ottawa Tuesday, Canada is providing Hercules aircraft and crews to help the Red Cross deliver relief supplies to areas held both by Nigerian and Biafran forces. Nigeria has agreed not to interfere with the flights to Biafra's diminishing territory.

In his general remarks, Sharp asked the 125 members to work

'LBJ Has Time To Help Talks'

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

PARIS (AP) — Ambassador Xuan Thuy of North Vietnam said today U.S. President Johnson "still has enough time and power" to open the way to a Vietnamese peace by halting attacks on North Vietnam.

North Vietnam's chief delegate spoke at the 25th session of the peace conference.

The meeting ended with U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman telling correspondents the American position has in no way been changed and that today "we made no progress at all."

Harriman told Thuy the United States is willing "to move far and fast" toward peace the minute "your government gives us reason to believe it is also prepared to act."

The American professed growing concern over what he called "Hanoi's intransigence" in the conference—an attitude he suggested that arises from "a misguided belief it can gain its ends in South Vietnam through military force."

Harriman said he is worried too by Hanoi's refusal to accept U.S. assurances that American aims in Southeast Asia are strictly limited.

"We know that Hanoi is being provided with misinformation from its commanders on the battlefields of South Vietnam," he went on. "It would be tragic if Hanoi's strategic estimate were not based on fact."

Thuy, who spoke first, said "many American senators, politicians and other personalities" had called recently for an unconditional U.S. bombing halt.

"If President Johnson really wants peacefully to solve the Vietnam problem he still has enough time and power now to do so, so as to open the way to a joint settlement of the Vietnam problem, a settlement that would be beneficial to the Vietnamese people, the American people and world peace," he said.

Before going into the meeting, Harriman in talks with reporters had called on North Vietnam to show some sign of a serious wish to scale down the war and begin "fruitful peace talks."

Wilson Cites Two Principals

GIBRALTAR (AP) — British Prime Minister Wilson predicted today that if he can win approval on two major principles from Premier Ian Smith of Rhodesia it will not be difficult to reach agreement on a return the conference — before Smith's breakaway African colony.

Wilson met with correspondents aboard the Royal Navy warship Fearless—the site for the conference—before Smith's arrival. He listed the two principles as:

—Unimpeded progress toward majority rule for the blacks who are ruled by a white minority.

—Guarantees that no future Rhodesian constitution will contain any mechanism that would allow Smith's regime to restrict black rights at a later date.

"The really important question is guarantees of the first and second principles," Wilson said. "If we can get them, a return to constitutional rule will not be difficult."

GOVERNMENT ILLEGAL

The Wilson government regards as illegal the Smith regime which unilaterally declared independence from Britain in November, 1965.

Before leaving Rhodesia, Smith declared he is committed to preventing black rule "within my lifetime."

Wilson said the talks will be "aimed at discovering whether it would be possible to arrive at a settlement of the Rhodesia problem which would be acceptable to both sides."

Canada Sending Planes To Carry Aid to Biafra

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Two Canadian air force Hercules transport planes are tentatively scheduled to leave here Thursday to fly relief supplies into Biafra for the International Red Cross.

But whether they will ever reach there is in doubt, informed sources say. Biafra had no suitable airfield left to accommodate the big planes and they might be able to get no farther than Nigeria.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced in the Commons Tuesday that Canada has obtained Nigerian permission to fly food into shrinking Biafra for the Red Cross. Nigeria reportedly had previously withheld such permission.

Mr. Trudeau said the agreement was worked out by External Affairs Minister Sharp and Nigerian officials in New York. Mr. Sharp is attending the United Nations general assembly.

Under the agreement, Canada will lend planes and crews to the Red Cross to mount a relief airlift into secessionist Biafra, locked in civil war with Nigeria for more than a year.

Previously, the Canadian government had offered the Red Cross one Hercules transport and crew but for flights within Nigerian-controlled territory only.

Mr. Trudeau said he believes the Nigerian change of heart about flights into Biafra might have resulted from Nigeria's desire to show it is not bent on genocide.

Opposition Leader Stanfield said the Canadian government has belatedly discovered that Nigeria had no objection to Canadian relief planes operating in any area affected by the civil war.

He added in an interview on the CBC television program Twenty Million Questions that the agreement with Nigeria appeared to him not so much a matter of negotiation as one of discovering the position of the Nigerian government.

This should have been done weeks ago, Mr. Stanfield said.

Meanwhile, the Commons external affairs committee began urgent meetings on how Canada could get aid to Biafra.

Scheduled to testify this afternoon are two MPs who were in Biafra last week—Andrew Brewin, NDP member for Toronto Greenwood, and David MacDonald, Conservative member for Egmont.

They said Tuesday in New York they had failed to convince Mr. Sharp that Canada should sponsor a UN resolution calling for an immediate ceasefire in Nigeria's civil war.

McCarthy Won't Back Humphrey

The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Sen. Eugene McCarthy refused to endorse the Democratic presidential ticket Tuesday nigt and told his audience that the party unity was no more acceptable today than it was a year ago.

The Minnesota Democrat, who lost the nomination to Vice-President Humphrey, chose a fund-raising dinner for New York Senate candidate Paul O'Dwyer to break the political silence he had maintained since the Chicago convention.

"The call goes up now for party unity," McCarthy told 1,500 guests at the New York Hilton Hotel, "but this is the same thing urged on us a year ago when we first began to challenge . . .

NOTHING CHANGED

"I see no reason why if the cry for unity then was not acceptable, it's any more acceptable today," he said, sending a large section of his audience to its feet.

McCarthy's long-awaited position statement was a blow to the Humphrey camp, which over the last few weeks have painstakingly nudged toward the peace position in the hope of relaiming disaffected followers of McCarthy and the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Humphrey's Vietnam speech in Salt Lake City last week, in which he indicated he was more receptive to the idea of a bombing pause, was interpreted as a direct bid to peace-movement Democrats and independents.

THREE CONDITIONS

But McCarthy did not buy this. Instead, he set up three conditions, which he implied if accepted by Humphrey might win 'is support.

He stated them in his speech Tuesday night as:

Acceptance of a new government in South Vietnam. "We're not to be satisfied with a declared intention of free elections sometime in the future," he said, "but a clear presentation that we have to be willing to accept a new government in Vietnam because that's what the war's been about."

- Draft reform in the United States that would spread the responsibility of "moral judgment" over the entire population. He was vague but seemed to be referring to system that would select its draftees more equitably and give youths the right to refuse induction on the basis of moral opposition to the Vietnam war.
- Reform of the Democratic party "so that we shall not have another Chicago."

Heart Tests Over Phone Planned

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A modern computer language has been developed at Queen's University which will enable computers to interpret heart rhythms over long-distance telephone lines.

Dr. J. A. Milliken of Kingston told delegates to a workshop on computers and electrocardiography such a system will be possible here within the next two months.

He said a cardiogram from a regional hospital will be sent by means of a telephone line to a computer centre where it can be recorded and converted to the new computer language.

The computer will then be able to analyze and interpret a diagnosis and send an answer in a matter of minutes, he said.

Dr. Milliken said the system would first be instituted on a trial basis and estimated it would be at least a year before doctors could consider relying on it.

Holyoake Arrives In Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson said today "aggression has suffered a clear and significant defeat" in Vietnam and that the Communists will fail to achieve their political goals by military means.

Johnson expressed his continued strong Vietnam policy views at red carpet welcoming ceremonies for Prime Minister Keith Holyoake of New Zealand who arrived for a two-day state visit.

Johnson made no mention of his bombing position.

towards strengthening the UN's authority.

"Our yardstick ought to be the capacity of the UN to perform the functions which are its proper responsibility and on which there can be at any time a reasonable measure of agreement."

In condemning the Soviet Union and four Warsaw pact allies for occupying Czechoslovakia, Sharp declared:

"No international order can exist on the self-appointed right of any government or group of governments to impose their policies on other sovereign states by force."

The Commonwealth to which Canada belongs, Sharp noted, takes for granted the freedom of its members to develop ties with any other states, regardless of ideology.

"The concern of the members of the UN for Czechoslovakia, its leaders and its people will inevitably continue until the soil of that country is once again free of foreign troops."

Sharp said Canada sees no merit in Soviet claims of "an alleged unilateral right of intervention" in West Germany, where the Kremlin recently claimed to detect increasing signs of Nazi resurgence and a trend toward revenge-seeking.

'FIND ARMS RACE'

But Europe's problems must not stop the world from pressing for an end to the arms race, said Sharp.

"Progress on this front will benefit all nations, including Czechoslovakia."

Sharp suggested a return to the old League of Nations idea of publicizing statistics about weapons and other armament types transferred between states.

He said Canada had noted with approval indications that the Soviet Union favors under certain conditions "the implementation of measures for regional disarmament and reduction of armaments in various parts of the world, including the Middle East."

The minister reaffirmed Canada's support for the Nov. 22, 1967, Security Council resolution calling for peace in the Middle East based on Israel's withdrawal from occupied Arab lands and Arab suspension of their long-standing state of war with Israel.

A solution to the Palestine refugee problem will only be feasible, Sharp said, in the context of an Arab-Israeli settlement.

Sharp called for increased tangible support to the UN Relief and Works Agency, responsible for the refugees. Canada this year had maintained its voluntary pledge of food and cash valued at $1,200,000, and in addition made the equivalent of $650,000 in special donations.

PROMISES INCREASES

The minister said Canada will increase by 25 per cent its contribution next year to the United Nations Development Program and also make "significant increases" in its gifts to the UN Children's Fund and the UN high commissioner for refugees.

"There is no hiding the fact that the level of international assistance to developing countries is inadequate," he said. Canada would increase its aid program year by year to reach the goal of one per cent of gross national product as quickly as possible.

The first development decade had shown some achievements and taught valuable lessons—including the one that improvement of agricultural techniques is critical to the drive to eliminate poverty, ignorance and disease.

On the eve of the second development decade, Sharp noted, Canada's Lester B. Pearson, former prime minister, is heading a World Bank commission which is charting a long-term path for development assistance and related trade policies.

Other points made by the External Affairs Minister:

—Canada continues to believe the United States must halt all bombing of North Vietnam as a first step to peace in Vietnam and that North Vietnam must demonstrate willingness to contribute to a general military de-escalation.

—Canada, which is exploring the prospects of establishing diplomatic relations with mainland China, continues to believe Peking should be in the UN, with Formosa, seat of National China, also represented.

—The UN's capacity to act as an agency to control conflicts and mediate disputes must be strengthened.

—Canada plans to establish an institution "devoted to the practical application of science and technology to the fundamental social and economic problems of development."

—The UN must find some and the Portuguese colonies in South-West Africa, Rhodesia and the Portuguese coloniesin Africa.

Fire Scare At Empress

Smoke from a welding operation that drifted into the Empress Hotel early today caused a fire scare that turned out to be a false alarm.

Hotel officials said welding took place around the outside of the conservatory shortly after 10 o'clock but no flames broke out. Victoria fire department attended and checked the area for sparks, wetting down several places.

Shooting of Jaywalker Sparks Racial Violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — A neighborhood still bearing the scars of last April's riots was hit by a brief but violent racial disorder Tuesday night after a white policeman killed a Negro man he had stopped for jaywalking.

Helmeted police moved in quickly to saturate the slum neighborhood after word spread rapidly on the streets that Elijah Bennett, 22, had been "shot for jaywalking."

Moving from corner to corner in shotgun-armed cars, they fired tear gas to disperse crowds of 250 persons or less in a half-dozen-block area.

This is an area that was hit by riots following the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Tuesday's damage was confined to one fire-gutted three-storey auto supply store, and two dozen or so smashed windows, notably those in the showroom of an automobile display room.

By midnight, the streets had been cleared of all but a few stone-throwers. Only one arrest was reported.

Acting Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson said the policeman, David A. Roberts, was riding his motorcycle to the scene of an accident when he saw a truck stopped blowing its horn at a man crossing in front of it.

When he reached the curb, Wilson said, Roberts asked the man to stop but he kept walking. The patrolman then parked his motorcycle and walked up to the man, the acting chief said, telling him "Sir, I want to talk to you."

At that point, Wilson related, the man struck Roberts in the shoulder, still saying nothing, then pummelled the policeman's face and mouth. Roberts, feeling he was losing consciousness, drew his pistol and fired once, the acting chief said.

MEDICARE ON AGENDA AT OTTAWA MEETING

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Medicare will be on the agenda of the meetings of the federal finance minister with provincial treasurers and health and welfare ministers, if the provinces want to discuss medicare, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday.

The meeting will be held late in October or early in November. It will cover two days. On the first day the health ministers and finance ministers meet separately. On the second day they meet together. On the agenda are fiscal arrangements and the rising cost of the shared-cost programs between Ottawa and the provinces.

The meetings with the provincial treasurers will discuss the open-ended programs that have been entered into between Ottawa and the provinces, with a view to controlling soaring costs.

Israel Offers To Withdraw

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters)—Israel offered Tuesday to withdraw its occupation troops from Arab territory to "permanent secure and recognized boundaries" which should replace the present United Nations-imposed ceasefire lines.

This was a principal proposal in a nine-point "Program for Peace" presented to the UN General Assembly by Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

But he said the establishment of secure, recognized boundaries must be "within a framework of permanent peace."

Eban called for "a new effort" of co-operation with UN mediator Gunnar Jarring of Sweden in the coming weeks "in his task of promoting agreement on the establishment of peace."

CANAL RIGHTS

Eban also proposed that he and Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad agree on a joint declaration recognizing that the Suez Canal and Gulf of Aqaba, "being international waterways," provide equal rights for passage of their countries' ships.

On the controversial refugee question, he proposed a conference of Middle East states and governments contributing refugee aid for the purpose of drafting a five-year plan to solve the problem.

The conference could be called in advance of peace negotiations.

'JEWISH INTEGRITY'

Eban said Israel does not seek unilateral jurisdiction over the holy places of Christianity and Islam in Jerusalem but is willing to work out a status in each case to "give effect to their universal character."

He called for specific contractual engagements between Israel and the Arab states acknowledging and recognizing the sovereignty, integrity and right to national life of the Jewish state.

In the clearest statement yet by Israel of acceptance of a Nov. 22 UN Security Council resolution which set up the Jarring mission, Eban said Israel declared its readiness to "promote agreement on all the principles mentioned therein."

STUDENTS HELD BACK

MEXICO CITY (Reuters) Guards prevented students from holding a rally in Mexico City's National University Tuesday night to commemorate the death of Cuban guerrilla hero Ernesto Che Guevara.

Wooden barriers were thrown up at the main gate of the university which lies across the road from the main Olympic Stadium.

'Atrocities —But Not Genocide'

OTTAWA (CP)—Arnold Smith, Commonwealth secretary-general, said Tuesday night charges that Nigeria's policy toward Biafra is genocide are "entirely unfounded."

He told the Commons external affairs committee that there has not been genocide in the Nigerian-controlled sections of Biafra though there have been atrocities by soldiers on both sides.

Smith, a Canadian, said that the fear inside Biafran lines that Nigeria wants to destroy the Ibo tribe of Biafra is real.

Smith also said it would be dangerous for "outsiders"—including Canadians—to try to force a political solution on Nigeria and Biafra.

Papers, Periodicals Hit by Postage Hikes

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Postage rates on Canadian newspapers and periodicals will rise sharply, in some cases more than 100 per cent, under legislation given first reading in Parliament Tuesday night.

The new law would also disqualify Canadian editions of foreign publications, such as Time and Readers' Digest, from classification as "Canadian periodicals."

This would mean that they would not be entitled to the partially subsidized rates for Canadian periodicals under the new bill, but would be subject to special regulatory second-class mail rates set by Postmaster General Eric Kierans.

Mr. Kierans' bill also raises the rates for first-class mail, as he had announced earlier, to six cents for the first ounce on letters for both local and out-of-town delivery. The present rate is four cents for local letters and five cents for out of town mail.

SIMPLIEIFES RATES

The legislation simplifies the now-complex classifications of newspapers and periodicals, raising the rates for all of them.

For daily newspapers (including all newspapers published more often than once a week) the rate goes up to five cents a pound for the non-advertising promotion of the newspaper and 15 cents a pound for the advertising portion. Present rates are 2½ cents a pound for the non-advertising portion and four cents for the advertising portion.

The rate for weekly newspapers and other newspapers and periodicals will be five cents a pound.

The present rates for weeklies vary from 1½ cents a pound for those of less than 10,000 circulation to three cents a pound for those of over 50,000 circulation.

FREE MAILING

Free mailing of up to 2,500 copies of weeklies under 10,000 total circulation will continue if the newspaper is published in a municipality with a population of no more than 10,000 and if they are mailed to post offices with no letter carrier services within a distance of 40 miles from the place of publication.

Under the new rates, Canadian publications would continue to enjoy partially subsidized mail delivery but the subsidy would be sharply reduced.

At present, the post office recovers only 22 per cent of the cost of second-class mail operations, Mr. Kierans said Tuesday.

He had said earlier that his aim was to increase this to 50 per cent.

First reading of the bill came after a day of debate at the resolution stage in which opposition parties united against Mr. Kierans' announced plans to raise the first-class letter rates and drop Saturday mail delivery.

Mr. Kierans, in an opening statement, said that present fees and postage rates would leave the department with a deficit of $99.5 million in the current fiscal year, according to departmental forecasts.

He insisted that "for a just society we must not only have a thriving economy but modern institutions" and said that the post office must bring its costs and revenues into a reasonable relationship and modernize to keep step with the demands of the age of electronic communications and satellites.

Heath MacQuarrie (PC-Hillsborough), later endorsed by other opposition spokesmen, said the proposed amendments to the post office act should be referred to a special House committee for study.

He challenged Mr. Kierans view "that this department must pay its way."

Stanley Knowles (NDP-Winnipeg North Centre) and David Orlikow (NDP-Winnipeg North) also argued that the post office deficit could be met by higher taxes or cost-cutting elsewhere rather than higher postal rates.

"Does the department of health pay its way?" Mr. Orlikow asked.

He argued that second and third-class mail was the source of the post office deficit, in particular direct-mail advertising or "junk mail."

"These have been and are the freeloaders," he said.

All opposition participants in the debate attacked the elimination of Saturday mail delivery.

"I condemn in the strongest terms this arbitrary elimination of service to the public," Mr. MacQuarie said.

Barry Mather (NDP-Surrey) said the consumer was being asked to "take less for paying more."

Wallace Nesbitt (PC-Oxford), speaking for rural newspaper subscribers, criticized both increased postage rates for newspapers and eliminating of Saturday delivery.

He said residents of rural newspapers would receive their weekend newspapers late.

"People like to read their papers on Sunday," he said.

Swift Couriers at Home

TWO BASIC CONSIDERATIONS are involved in Postmaster General Kierans' bill to alter the scope of postal services and their costs to the public. One is the level of charges and the degree to which they make the services self-supporting; the other is the function of the postal service not only as a means of communication but also as a unifying force in our widely dispersed population. The latter has always been an important consideration, even to the point of spending many millions of dollars annually—as on the CBC—to achieve a closer contact among our people.

Few government services, if any, play a more important role in national communication than does the delivery of letters. Hence it is important to keep the charges for postal operations at a level which will not act as a deterrent to easy and frequent use of the mails, and also to ensure that the service is of a speed and frequency to provide the maximum of public benefit.

By such criteria Mr. Kierans' increase in charges for first-class and other categories of mail should not prove too onerous; but his proposal to eliminate all Saturday deliveries could impose a considerable impediment to appropriate service. He has not yet made it clear whether Saturday deliveries are to be dropped only as a means of cutting costs, or whether the move is designed entirely to better the lot of the postal workers.

A wait from Friday to Monday for letters containing cheques or urgent material will not be relished by anxious recipients; Friday newspapers now received by mail on Saturday will lose much of their value by Monday; perishable goods will not be improved by the proposed long weekend, and other dislocations may be cited to indicate the inconvenience, not to say hardship, which the Saturday shutdown could cause.

In an era when the whole trend of business is to provide more hours of the week when the public may obtain service, the restriction of so important a facility as mail delivery seems to be a questionable measure which may require some compromise.

A Basis For Talks

THE NINE-POINT PEACE PLAN for the Middle East, advanced in the United Nations by Israel's Foreign Minister Abba Eban, appears to provide a logical and feasible basis for negotiation. As Mr. Eban sees it, the "central issues" of the dispute are the establishment of a permanent peace and the determination of secure and recognized borders. But a necessary preliminary to the settlement of these key questions—indeed, to the settlement of any workable Middle East peace—is the willingness of Egypt to negotiate directly with Israel.

The Arab refusal to participate in the direct talks which Israel demands is based in a refusal to grant the Israelis diplomatic recognition as a sovereign state. And it is this recognition which Israel rightly sees as the crucial criterion of Jewish existence and security in the Middle East. If the Israeli people are always to be considered by the Arabs as intruders who must eventually be driven out or exterminated, then there can be no peace in the area; only as now, a temporary cease-fire.

The Arab position is not logical, but rooted as it is in traditional religious hatred which has been fed for the past twenty years by the carefully preserved Arab refugee problem, it has a strength and tenacity which will be difficult to overcome. Until so fundamental a change can be evolved, or a reasonable compromise made, there will be no progress toward consideration of Mr. Eban's other peace proposals.

These include some highly controversial items, but they constitute a realistic approach to the problems. Mr. Eban declares that the war of 1967 must be "the last of the Middle Eastern wars" and calls for a "lasting peace, duly negotiated and contractually expressed." It must delineate secure and recognized boundaries for the Israeli state, provide for free port facilities for Jordan on the Mediterranean coast, open the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Aqaba to all countries, provide for permanent access to Jerusalem's holy places by all religions involved, acknowledge Israel's sovereignty and right to life, and lay the foundations for a Middle Eastern community of sovereign states.

Obviously much of this is repugnant to the Arabs, and, indeed, has been repeatedly rejected by them. But equally obviously these provisions embody the basic factors of peace in the Middle East which sooner or later must be recognized. Under such circumstances it is reprehensible for big powers to arm the countries involved, and particularly to keep alive in Arab minds the possibility of an eventual military descent on Israel which will put it out of existence.

While that prospect is kept alive by armaments supplied from abroad the most recalcitrant elements of the Arab world will continue their implacable opposition, and the threat of a Middle East war—and a world war—will hang over United Nations efforts to effect a settlement.

Pins Are People

IT WAS INTERESTING TO NOTE that the Community Planning Association of Canada at its convention here this week has included speakers on its agenda who challenge some of urban planning's basic precepts. Even planners are occasionally to be reminded that those pins on the wall map and the statistics on the chart represent people.

Programs of urban renewal to provide grouped, low-rental housing in place of dilapidated individual homes have won general acceptance, but questions now are being raised about the desirability of some of the long-term effects. As one of the speakers pointed out, it tends to perpetuate an economic caste system.

This was the argument raised recently in Sidney by opponents of a low-rental housing project proposed in that community. They said it would contribute to a ghetto frame of mind. The Saanich program of spotting low-rental houses in various neighborhoods avoids this pitfall. So, too, do plans for including a few assisted families in otherwise independent apartment blocks.

The point has become an issue in some cities of the United States where plans have been drawn for razing Negro slum areas and rebuilding new accommodation on the same site. Concern is now being expressed that this will do nothing to combat the blight of racial segregation.

One aspect of the problem is the need for direct consultation with the people affected by urban renewal schemes. Residents should be given the opportunity to express their hopes and plans. It is important that decisions made in the name of the people have the consent of the people.

Toppling From the Balanced Budget

WHEN Mr. Drury was questioned by correspondents about the implications of the revised and sharply higher spending estimates, he let slip a remark which may be highly significant. More emphasis has been placed on a balanced budget, he suggested, than is actually warranted. There is always a tendency in government to identify the unavoidable with the virtuous. The temptation to do so now, when Mr. Benson is shaping a budget for submission this month, must be very strong.

Western

Two sets of circumstances combine to push the government in a particular direction. It is apparent that, in spite of departmental economies, expenditures have broken through the spending ceiling set last spring. On the other hand, as Mr. Drury has disclosed, economic expansion has not been sufficient to make a comparable increase in tax revenues at all likely. It would appear then that, unless taxes are increased, the prospect is that we will run another substantial deficit.

Change In Climate

Since last winter and spring, however, there has been some change in the economic climate. The commitments to a balanced budget reflected a general concern about inflation and the more specific concern last February about the dollar drain and the general unsettlement of the world's currencies. Latterly there has been some slowing of economic expansion and a marked easing of the pressure of interest rates.

Union leaders have been expressing concern over prospective winter unemployment and some economists have been arguing that the situation justifies a budget deficit large enough to act as a stimulant to the economy.

In other words, the path of least resistance as indicated by Mr. Benson's table of prospective revenues and expenditures, can be made to appear the path of wisdom in the light of changing economic circumstances. It would appear from Mr. Drury's remark that he has already been converted to this point of view.

Salutary Impression

An argument can be made that what counts in an inflationary situation is the posture of the government. While Mr. Benson may not have reached his objective, at least the ministers throughout the spring and early summer made such a conspicuous effort to put the House in order that they were successful in creating a salutary impression on business men both here and abroad. The game is the thing and we ought not to worry too much about the final score since a new game has already started in which we are shooting in a different direction.

The trouble is that any such argument would gravely impair the credibility of the Canadian government. What will happen when we face the next inflationary surge? How will the government talk it down? The story of the boy who cried "wolf" has an applicability to governments as well as to individuals. It may be said in defence of the government that the assurances were made in good faith and that the increased expenditures are due in large part (although not entirely) to programs over which ministers had no control. But as part of his effort to impress the business community and Parliament, Mr. Benson devoted glowing speeches to the remarkable improvements and refinements of technique which had made possible far more reliable long range expenditure forecasts than those of the past.

This is not all. For the government which protests its inability to control expenditures on these joint programs is now taking us into another and huge program—medicare. By its own policies it is sapping its power to use the budget as an economic regulator.

In theory, the government still believes in Keynesian economics. As Mr. Trudeau has stated the matter: "I think that the theory of the balanced budget over the whole cycle is the right approach." There are those who do not share this view; who believe (although they may not admit to the conviction) that a steady, controlled inflation is a good thing. The inflationists will now perhaps conclude that they have escaped the first serious threat of a balanced budget in more than a decade and that Keynesianism in consequence has about as much future as the passenger pigeon.

Could Take Hard Step

For if it is not possible in this year, after years of expansion, to balance the budget, when will it be possible?

It remains possible that Mr. Benson, in spite of the hint from his colleague, will take the hard steps necessary to bring the revenues into line with expenditures. There cannot now be a balance at the level of his spring guarantee but he has the option of balancing by other means at a higher level. Whatever the political difficulties, this would appear the most promising method of salvaging his credit with the business community.

Letters

Our Water

From time to time you very properly emphasize the fact that rivers and lakes in this country have supplies of fresh water which Canada will utilize to an ever-increasing extent as development proceeds. You also take the reasonable position that no consideration should be given to its export until Canada knows what its future needs will be.

It might be of interest to you and your readers to note the case advanced by Jim Wright of Texas in a book "The Coming Water Famine" available at the public library.

The man from Texas notes the supply of currently surplus water now unused in Canada's far north and suggests that it be channelled down the Rocky Mountain Trench to supply the Americans. The idea isn't new, but the Wright thesis is presented in such a way, in my opinion, as to make it seem that the Americans, not the Canadians, will decide how the water and British Columbia real estate shall be used. I think it important to keep reminding them whose water it is—as you have been doing.—Canada First.

Worth Publicizing

Having greatly enjoyed the CBC production "Poacher's Honeymoon" by Victoria playwright and author, Peter Caley, over a local radio station last Friday, I am wondering why this excellent historical documentary about the West Coast of Vancouver Island was not given more advance publicity by our local news media.

This was beautifully produced with top-flight Vancouver artists and broadcast on radio across Canada. I have written the CBC asking that if possible "Poacher's Honeymoon" be rebroadcast, and if this is done, it is to be hoped that it will be well publicized in Victoria beforehand.—J.K.

OAS Involvement

Re your article of Saturday, October 5, under the heading "Unsolicited Advice"—Why mention Kennedy when our own former external affairs minister, Paul Martin, attempted to have Canada involved in the OAS in 1963?—H. J. Hansen, 830 McClure.

"If" Is the General

Globe and Mail

The causes of the Quebec-Ottawa and Paris-Ottawa imbroglio are subtle and complex. But perhaps it is not a gross amplification to say that at least some of the misunderstanding has grown from an incredibly bad failure to communicate. As soon as dialogue gave way to the habits of furtiveness and parallel monologues, trust, the truly indispensable element of co-operation, was destroyed.

If Mr. Bertrand's initial mood and methods are confirmed, it is in rebuilding trust in the Franco-Quebec-Canadian triangle that he could make his most valuable impact.

At the risk of adding to the store of "journalistic folklore", it is necessary to qualify the prospect of such an impact with an "if". And the "if" is General Charles de Gaulle.

FROM WASHINGTON

By CHARLES BARTLETT

Mr. Nixon Spins Away From Inflation

THE discomforting tendency of Richard Nixon's campaign to cloud the great issues is nowhere more pronounced than on the crucial delicate question of combatting inflation. Nixon has a need to be convincing on this subject because he is making much of the price rises under the Democrats. Yet the statistics show that costs of all the commodities and services which comprise the national product have risen slightly less since 1961 than they did during the eight Eisenhower-Nixon years.

Bartlett

The key uncertainty is whether Nixon is prepared to apply more imaginative weapons against inflation than the fiscal management which brought slow growth, high unemployment, and three recessions during the Eisenhower tenure. The question is how much he has learned from the Democrats' success at levelling the peaks and valleys of the business cycle.

The evidence of his responses to queries on economic issues by Business Week and Fortune is not convincing. He talks confidently of inducing price stability, low unemployment, and economic growth but he rejects wage-price guideposts or anything similar as part of his strategy against inflation.

"Excessive price and wage increases are the symptoms of economic mismanagement," he told Business Week. "Guideposts merely focus on these symptoms rather than on causes of the problem. They tend to divert policy-makers' attention from coming to grips with the fundamental causes of inflation—namely budget deficits at a time of full employment and increases of the money supply that outrun capacity to produce goods and services."

Controls Brushed Aside

Similarly he resists the idea that a President should have the right to make small adjustments in tax rates to stabilize the economy. He brushes aside wage and price controls. "The way to stop the inflation," he told Fortune, "is to reverse the irresponsible fiscal policies which produce it."

Recent history does not raise hopes that fiscal policy alone can control inflation. The damaging wage-price spiral of the fifties, generated by lenient pricing policies and wage contracts in the steel industry, certainly did not defer to the fiscal policies of the Eisenhower administration.

In fact Mr. Eisenhower's final economic message acknowledged: "There is need to supplement these government policies with appropriate private actions, especially those affecting profits and wages." He argued that productivity advances should set the outer limit for wage increases and that industries enjoying productivity gains should consider price reductions.

Guidelines Yardstick

When the wage-price spiral persisted into 1961, the Democrats formulated their wage-price guidelines from Mr. Eisenhower's thesis. The guidelines were simply another step in the process of impressing management and the union with their responsibility toward the public. They were a yardstick by which labor's gains and industry's profits could be measured against the public interest.

Inflation finally overran the yardstick because of the fumbling that began between the White House and Congress on the issue of a tax increase in 1966. But the recent contretemps with the auto industry illustrates that concern with the public interest plays an increasing part in private business decisions.

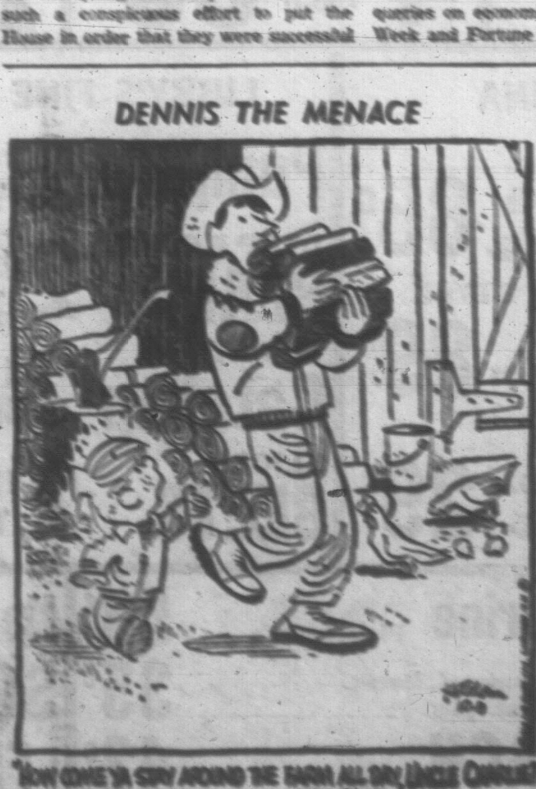
Four years ago General Motors turned a deaf ear when the administration pressured quietly for a reduction in the price of cars to ease the wage demands of the auto workers and avert a new spiral. Faced now with an inflationary rise in costs, a more publicly-minded GM chairman, James Roche, has wisely heeded government warnings on the scope of his price hikes.

Combined Effort

As Mr. Eisenhower put it, inflation-free economic growth will only come from blending public policies and private actions. His precept has been heavily underlined by all the experiences of the past eight years.

It is disingenuous and damaging to this spreading sense of private responsibility for Mr. Nixon to maintain now that the fight against inflation is merely a matter of budget balancing.

DENNIS THE MENACE



"HOW COME YA STAY AROUND THE FARM ALL DAY, UNCLE CHARLIE? DON'T YA EVER HAVE TO GO TO WORK?"

Looking Back

From the Times, Oct. 9, 1908.

The Board of Trade at its quarterly annual meeting today decided to call a joint meeting of the Island boards of trade to discuss the question of the Island's advancements by the building of a railroad communication to the north end of the Island.

Several members in the past have expressed the opinion that the northern passenger and freight trade was sufficient to warrant the railway line suggested.

Too Yonge

Toronto Daily Star

This has been a banner year for municipal foolishness in Metro Toronto, but the prize for silliness must surely go to the proposal that the borough of North York change its name to Yonge.

This has been seriously suggested by a man who was hired to pick a new name for the borough. It was the result, he claims, of eight months of "think sessions" and we can only wonder what a full year would have produced.

Surprisingly, the idea has won some support among councillors who claim that it is a "swinging name" and that it will make the borough famous across Canada.

How pathetically parochial! In fact, it would be difficult to think of a less euphonious name for a municipality than Yonge.

One of the less dazzled aldermen suggest it sounded like a Chinese province. ("Mao Tse-tung's Red Guards have just captured Yang, Ying and Yonge.") And what would the residents be called—Yongians, Yongites, Yongii?

But the prime objection to the change was voiced by Controller Paul Hunt, who pointed out that most people in North York regard themselves as Torontonians.

North York and the other boroughs are, in fact, not genuine communities but artificial political divisions of Metro. Sooner or later they will inevitably disappear under amalgamation of the Toronto area into one big city.

The North York Council should be preparing for that day, rather than trying to arouse an artificial "municipal loyalty" with fancy names.

Cuba Cleaner And Relaxed

By RICHARD GOTT, The Manchester Guardian

HAVANA—First, and this should never be forgotten, Cuba is the most astonishingly beautiful island, set in a James Bond Caribbean Sea.

Havana could never look entirely drab, however hard it tried, and the Cubans are irresistibly enthusiastic and gay.

FIRST OF TWO ARTICLES

If this is communism, one soon begins to think gazing out over the hot sea, the white sands, the bathers ranging from blackest black to whitest pink—give me more.

Gone are the solid citizens of Eastern Europe, the ugly architecture, and the unimaginative art which have characterized communism for so many decades. In its place are new buildings, ranging from peasant houses to blocks of flats to restaurants and schools which could quite happily grace the pages of any reasonably avant-garde architectural journal.

Bright Posters

There is an attention to detail and design almost totally absent elsewhere in Latin America. Cuban posters are the most imaginative to be found anywhere, even though there is an occasional soupcon of Madison Avenue or Greenwich Village. The cultural influence of the United States bit very deep into Cuban life.

The second point to remember is that Cuba has a ruler who will unquestionably be ranked as one of the great political figures of the twentieth century.

And Fidel Castro is still wildly popular.

After an absence of five years I have been revisiting Cuba, partly in order to note the changes and partly to see how it compares with the rest of Latin America.

My first impression is that the place is cleaner, better organized, and more relaxed. Fewer machine-guns and almost no beards, though there are still the most beautiful girls in battledress stationed at the hotel entrance.

The British-made Leyland buses have made an enormous difference. In the early days of the revolution it was a common sight to see broken-down buses with their stranded passengers standing forlornly beside them. Invariably about a dozen people hung on to the outside as the evil-smelling machines that passed for buses careened down the narrow streets of old Havana.

Good Buses

Nowadays, Leyland's powerful coaches move the population about efficiently, with a minimum of bother. Havana probably has the most adequate public transport system of any city in Latin America.

It is still crowded, for fuel rationing appears to have cut down the number of buses in use, but the service is regular, reasonably comprehensive, and it is no longer the subject as elsewhere in Latin America for endless adverse comments.

On Saturday evenings Havana is almost its old self again, everyone is on the streets, and there is dancing and open-air film shows.

True, the old bars and nightclubs have been closed since the beginning of the year, and I met with some complaints even from the more revolutionary younger generation at the ending of such a traditional part of Havana life. But people seem to adapt remarkably quickly to other forms of entertainment.

The official reason for the closing of the bars and clubs appears to have been threefold. First, a moral objection; like most revolutions, the Cuban has its puritanical aspect. Secondly, a feeling that it was inappropriate for a minority to drink away their free time while others were out in the country planting coffee. There were nearly a thousand privately-owned bars in Havana when a count was made earlier this year.

Thirdly, there was a genuine desire to stop the drift from country to town, a problem which besets all developing countries. The attraction of Havana is now kept to a minimum, while everything is done to make the countryside a place in which peasants' sons will feel happy to remain.

Even so, after nine years of revolution, Havana province, with 27 per cent of the country's population, accounts for 38 per cent of the wages, 35 per cent of the consumer goods and 49 per cent of the commerical services.

Another thing that struck me on this trip was the change in the attitude of Havana dwellers to the prospect of work in the country. Five years ago I went out on Sunday with a brigade of secretaries from the ministry of foreign trade to work in the banana plantations.

City Types

They had never been into the country before, except to go to the beach, and they had no idea what to do with a banana tree.

Within minutes I was the expert, explaining what had to be done and the quickest, simplest way of doing it.

Now this has completely changed. The most urban lass has acquired a profound knowledge of rural ways, and can conduct an erudite conversation on breeding bulls and the latest type of quick-growing coffee plant.

I spent one evening recently doing voluntary work in the fields with one of the local street committees. We went out by truck to a new coffee plantation in the Havana green belt, which surrounds the city.

There were about fifty of us altogether, we spent three hours under arc lights filling small plastic bags with earth, ready for coffee planting. Then we formed a human chain across a great field lined with palm trees, moving bags of earth from hand to hand to their final destination.

We entertained ourselves with steady conversation about whether the Yankees were going to invade (most people thought not) and whether we would be able to achieve the record total of 10 million tons of sugar planned for 1970—most people thought so.

Songs of Love

Then quite suddenly the Negro girl who had been quietly filling bags of earth beside me got to her feet and, swaying slightly to the rhythm, burst into luscious song. In real life she was a trainee opera singer with all the markings of a second Dorothy Dandridge, and here she was throatily challenging the tropical night air with her songs of love, while we stolidly continued packing earth into our little plastic bags.

The episode irresistably reminded me of Israel and life on a kibbutz. The same internal jokes, the same commitment, and the same fierce enthusiasm.

In innumerable ways, Cuba is very like a huge collective farm, with seven million members rather than a thousand, and embracing industry as well as agriculture. There is the same attention to health and education, a scale of priorities that puts the children before adults, and an ability to mobilize the population for productive work when the occasion demands that is truly impressive.

But one of the crucial questions is how long can utopian societies survive in a hostile environment. Already in Israel the kibbutzim have begun to feel the chill winds of external disapproval, and in Cuba the passionate desire to internationalize the revolution clearly has its roots in a wish not to be for ever isolated.

HOUSING PROJECTS such as this one in Havana East lead even the most pessimistic to claim the Cuban government has laid the basis for progress in a number of areas.

CHILDREN PLAY in one of Havana's free nursery schools, bearing out government literature that calls the island a "giant school". Nursery schools care for youngsters from the age of two months and they learn as toddlers how the revolution changed their lives.

A Lonely Voice Of Common Sense

By ART STOTT

Stott

Currently popular reading for the "old pros" of education hereabouts is a concise article by J. O. Wypsianski, Ph.D. He is a professor of psychology at the University of Ottawa whose piece "Discipline (is) vitally important to young people now" appeared earlier in the publication "Health" and has since been reprinted and circulated, at present in three-and one-half single-spaced mimeographed sheets. In tones of moderation and common sense, the article presents an impressive rebuttal to voices shouting freedom for children without regard to responsibility.

"It is imperative," he says, "that such concepts as 'freedom,' 'responsibility' and 'discipline' and their exercise in a 'free' society be clarified in the minds of our youthful citizens as well as ours, in order that we be ready in adolescence and adulthood to appreciate and enjoy these rights and duties. The clarification and understanding of these concepts and their formation into firm attitudes and beliefs is of paramount importance in a democratic society such as ours where 'freedom of the individual' is so much emphasized for children and adults alike, where discipline and self-discipline are becoming archaic, almost forgotten terms and where individualism is becoming rampant to the exclusion of respect of wisdom in old age. Educators must guide youth towards avenues of more examined and insightful life in the atmosphere of which youth will grow to appreciate their rights and duties."

* * *

Dr. Wyspianski says little that is new in his treatment of the issue. Educators have been saying the same to one another throughout the continuing dialogue. The difference between the two is that the educators have been talking to each other, while Dr. Wyspianski speaks out loud to everyone.

The Ottawa professor appreciates the changes and problems that occur in adolescence. Very realistically he relates these changes to the particular conditions of this part of the 20th century which tend to emphasize the frictions of hostility between the young and the mature.

Dr. Wyspianski notes the "progressive glorification of the adolescent in the last two decades" and expresses the view that it has reached heights beyond reason and common sense.

"Discipline," he writes, "nowadays, often seems to be confused with such lofty ideas as deprivation of democratic freedom or blunt cruelty. Thus, the child is allowed to grow without firmly structured restraints and guidelines. He is left to experience life in a trial and error manner, encountering the burdens of freedom, unprepared by gradual learning, at too early an age to cope with all its concomitant responsibilities and duties to himself and society at large."

Dr. Wyspianski ties his thesis into education. He makes the point—with which many agree—that a teacher's job is not to win popularity but to instruct his students in the specialties in which he is competent. We used to say it was more important to gain the children's respect than their affection, though the two are not incompatible.

* * *

It seems to me that the professor makes a needle-sharp point when he says "It is about time that society realizes that psychotherapeutic principles of tolerance and acceptance at any price must not be applied to the human race at large but their use be restricted to persons suffering from behavioral disorders." Why, in other words, treat the normal youngster as if he were abnormal?

Several old truths are restated in the article and welded to conditions of the day in the society which exists. It is not, to me, a hidebound argument for the retention of the status quo. Rather is it advice to avoid throwing the baby out with the dirty bath water. When I had read it I felt that we were short-changing youngsters in our society by encouraging them to create formlessness, to ignore the fact that people, living together, have to follow certain procedures which make life together tolerable.

We are not, as Dr. Wyspianski points out, created entirely free. We're interdependent. And if we don't recognize that point, and help our young people to appreciate it, we're inviting chaos.

My friends in education, who have been talking the same way within their own ranks, have hesitated to broadcast their point of view because of a natural reluctance to be branded the mouthpiece of the "establishment". They applaud Dr. Wyspianski. Perhaps they should emulate him. If they don't speak out loud, they may find themselves victims of the new "establishment" which yells "Freedom, freedom, freedom," meaning no restraint, and expects that incantation alone to produce Utopia.

Roman Script More Difficult Than Japanese?

By ROBERT SHIELDS

LONDON — The abstract nature of the Roman script used in writing most European languages is mainly to blame for the severe difficulties in reading experienced by between 7 per cent and 11 per cent of Western school-children of average intelligence.

This has emerged from research recently carried out in Japan.

A number of explanations have been advanced for backwardness in reading: inexpert teaching, excessive anxiety in the child, over-anxiety on the part of ambitious parents and left-handedness.

During the last decade some medical men and educational psychologists have postulated a number of physical reasons: brain-damage at birth, malfunction or faulty development in the brain, "cerebral immaturity" and "congenital world-blindness."

•

In view of the research in Japan, these physiological theories may have to be reassessed.

Professor Kiyoshi Makita, of the neuropsychiatric department of Keio University, Tokyo, investigated the reading standards of nearly 10,000 Japanese children. The results showed that fewer than 1 per cent had any difficulty in reading.

This extraordinary statistical discrepancy in the incidence of reading difficulties in western and Japanese children is not easy to explain. But it is wildly improbable that "brain-damage" and "cerebral immaturity" are 10 times more common in Western countries than in Japan.

The answer to the situation, Professor Makita suggests, lies in the kind of reading script which Japanese children learn at school.

•

European languages are based on the Roman script, using 26 letters. The Japanese language is built up largely of some 1,850 "ideographs" or "characters" taken from Chinese. This would seem to give the European child a distinct advantage. In practice this does not seem to be so.

The Roman alphabet appears to be too "abstract" for many children to master, and several of the letters are easily confused with one another, some being mirror images of others, such as b and d, p and q.

Though there is a theoretical phonetic equivalent for each letter, pronunciation often appears haphazard, depending on the position of the letter in a word or its combination with certain vowels.

•

For example, the sound "ai" may be represented by: I, y, igh, eye, ay, ei, aye, ye, ie, or ais.

For the child who is learning to read it is also easy to confuse words which can be misread as a whole; e.g. no and on, was and saw, left and felt.

None of these complications arise for the Japanese child. If a Japanese student writes a word in mirror writing (which frequently happens), the meaning of the word is not changed, and it does not become confused with any other word. The teacher ignores the mirror-writing and it soon disappears from the child's efforts.

A second, and perhaps even greater, advantage for the Japanese child is the fact that Japanese script is primarily composed of classical "characters" which have been derived from hieroglyphs.

The ideograph for "bird" still incorporates a recognizable beak plus wings and feet. The ideograph for "mountain" still looks like a mountain.

Some Interesting People Are Playing the Radio Game

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

Fisher

Crowe

A little known (though not hidden) piece of Newfoundland past exposed in Richard Gwyn's biography of Joey Smallwood is the role played against confederation and for economic union of Newfoundland with the U.S. by Geoffrey Stirling and Don Jamieson.

The latter is now the sole Grit MP from the island and a Cabinet minister, a former director of CTV and associate (perhaps former associate) of Mr. Stirling in some of his radio and television enterprises which burgeoned from a small start in Newfoundland to something much more substantial.

In writing about the corruption of the Smallwood regime, Gwyn states: "Two Cabinet ministers were confidential shareholders in radio station CJON, co-owned by Stirling and Jamieson, which got its license through good Liberal offices." That would be "good offices" in Ottawa where Jack Pickersgill was vital man for the little premier.

Blocked By Uproar

Many Torontonians will remember that Mr. Stirling was the public-spirited chap who was determined to move the Channel 3 into service for Metro viewers. He almost pulled it off. It took uproar and an insurrection by Toronto Liberal MPs to block it.

Shortly after Mr. Pickersgill retired from politics into the $30,000-a-year job he shaped for himself as head of the Canadian Transportation Commission and since then the Barrie caper has died.

In 1964 Mr. Stirling was the program adviser to young Royce Frith, another dedicated Liberal (presently battening on the Bi-Bi Commission per diem rate of $100) as he won a radio licence for CKWW in Windsor. Mr. Frith told the BBG that almost all his life had been a preparation for this responsibility.

He came into public life as a radio quiz kid but within a year he was preparing to unload the licence to Mr. Stirling.

Calls the Shots

The BBG approved that, too, and since then seems to have acquiesced at another Stirling arrangement through which a fairly recent station licence in Ottawa, CKPM, is held by a Mr. Bill Stewart but Mr. Stirling calls all the shots.

Why this long recapitulation on radio tycoon Stirling, friend and associate of Messrs Smallwood, Pickersgill, John C. Doyle and Royce Frith? Well, there's another fascinating development on Parliament Hill in which Mr. Stirling seems to have a role.

Mr. Stirling returned to Newfoundland in the forties, after acquiring a university education there and showed his feelings for old glory by campaigning to bring Newfoundland under that banner.

In recent years he's been resident much of the year in Arizona. In sum, he's like a lot of Canadians, attracted by our southern neighbor. We guess that he's one of those Grit continentalists whom George Grant damned in Lament For A Nation.

A firm with the name of Stephens and Towndrow, subtitled CBS Radio of Canada Limited, is establishing an Ottawa-based Canadian radio news service. It will be geared to supply regular reports on parliamentary and governmental activities to those radio stations which subscribe.

The big "plus" in the service offered by Stephens and Towndrow will be the major U.S. and international stories picked up by the splendid, world-wide facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Stephens and Towndrow presently claim to represent a dozen odd Canadian stations, among them those for which Mr. Stirling has open or effective suzerainty. The firm also claims that majority ownership is held by Canadian broadcasting companies or individuals. In other words, dear Canadian Nationalist, don't worry about an American takeover: CBS Radio is only a minority shareholder.

Dozen Stations

Stephens and Towndrow, i.e., CBS Radio, are going to hook Canada up to its global network through Canadian subscribers and vice-versa.

Not much wrong with that, is there? Well, we'd feel a bit happier about it if the Canadian Radio-Television Commission took a close look at the plan and the real relationship between CBS and entrepreneur Stirling. We came to this conclusion after having the opportunity to read a copy of a letter written three years ago by a Fred Ruegg, then vice-president for station administration, CBS Radio, New York.

It's an innocent, straight-forward kind of letter. You will wonder what significance a letter that old might have. A good question, and we can only say it sometimes takes time to get things moving well in developing radio communications what with government regulations, politicians, etc. The letter was addressed to Mr. Stirling at his offices in Montreal.

The gist of it centres on ownership of Canadian radio stations, something our Secretary of State, Mr. Pelletier, issued an edict about last week, stressing that the Government was going to tighten up the barriers against foreign ownership of our radio and TV stations.

STIRLING

Perhaps this letter will excite the curiosity of Mr. Pelletier and the CRTC.

"Dear Geoff:

CBS Radio would be interested in exploring the possibilities of our getting involved in ownership participation of radio stations in Canada. Mr. Walter Rozett is the gentleman who would be involved in our organization.

"If you are going to be in New York in the near future, I would be happy to set up a luncheon so you could get acquainted with him. If not, Walter could perhaps come to Montreal or to some mutually convenient place. After this initial step, we shall just have to see what develops. Let me know your pleasure. Very best personal regards. Sincerely, Fred."

MAZDA 1500 SEDAN

$2320.00 You're taking your first look at the car Japanese drivers trade up to. After you read about and drive it, you'll know why.

Styled by Bertone. We'll let the artistry of this famous Italian automotive stylist speak for itself. But we'd like to say a few words about the care we've taken in detailing the Mazda's fine lines. The panel fit is worthy of a car costing twice as much.

So's the paint. Deep. Smooth.

Mazda is pretty.

Inside, Mazda is pretty and practical. For example: Mazda's curved glass side windows are a tasteful styling feature, but they also add inches to interior space. The sloping hood and large glass areas make for great visibility. And great looks. Beneath the attractive rear deck, you'll find room for four or five big suitcases. Sit in a Mazda, and you'll sit behind round, readable instruments. Lots of them. And the instruments sit in a woodgrain dash. Just like on an expensive European GT. Remember, this is a $2300 car.

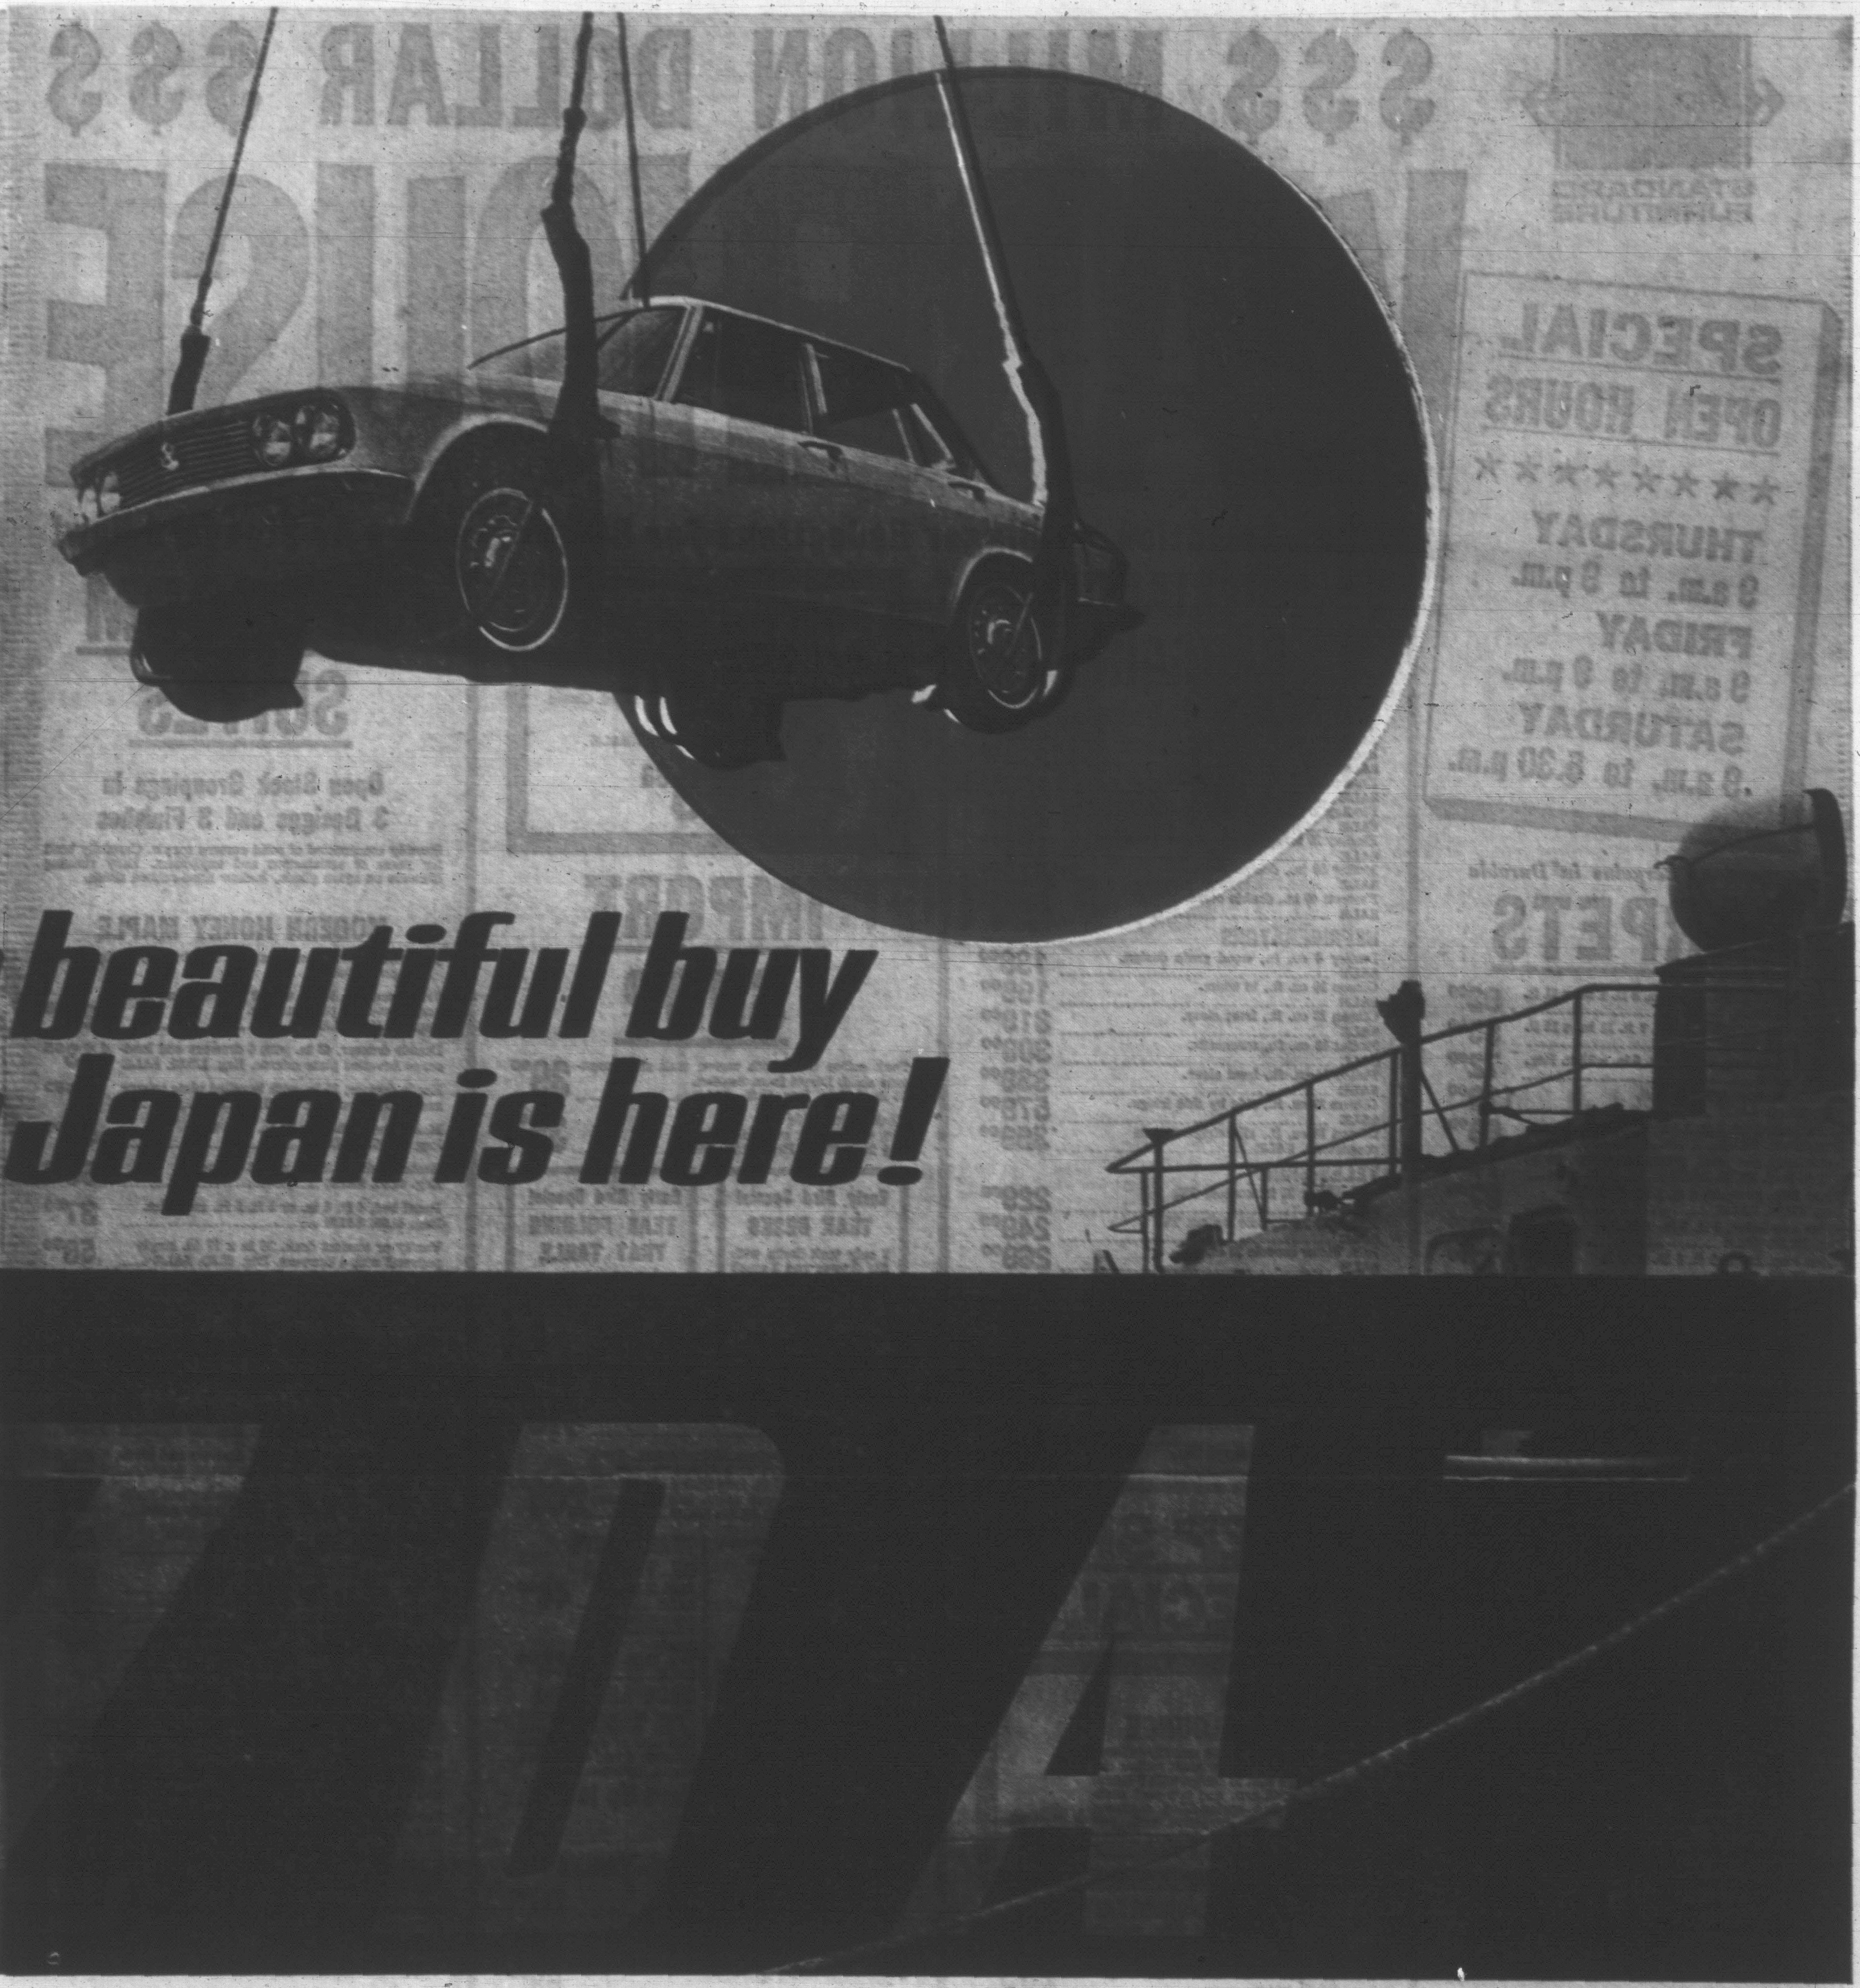
Seats that recline. Standard equipment, we remind you. The interior is carefully tailored in tough, attractive vinyl. There's room for four passengers and one smiling Mazda driver.

MAZDA 1500 PICKUP

This medium sized hauler comes loaded at only $2220.

VICTORIA Argyle & Storrs Ltd. 2929 Douglas St.—383-5651

COURTENAY Chalet Motors R.R. No. 1.—334-4163

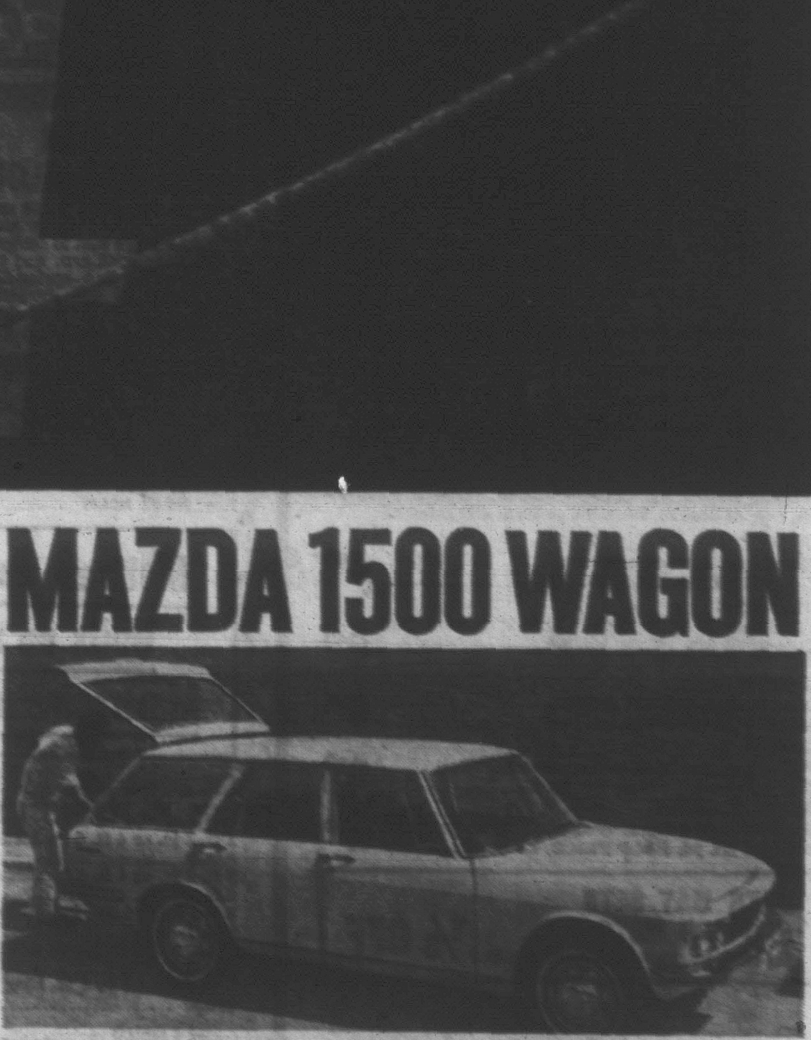


Mazda has heart. And it begins with a smooth, responsive overhead cam engine. The kind of powerplant you'd expect from the people who developed the famous Wankel rotary engine. The gearbox is the nicest in the business: a slick, 4-speed all synchro masterpiece that would do justice to a $15,000 import. For the shiftless, there's an optional 3-speed automatic. The only other options are a radio and a power aerial. Mazda stops smartly with a power assisted front disc, rear drum brake setup. And it goes 20,000 miles between lube jobs. Even the cooling system is sealed.

Thoroughly tested in Canada. Mazda is currently being sold very successfully in many countries throughout the world. Some of them present pretty rough driving conditions. Australia for example. But before we decided to introduce Mazda to Canada, we spent over a year testing it and adapting it specifically to Canadian driving conditions. What we learned shows up in the heating and ventilating system. And in our elaborate rust-proofing measures. The Mazda you buy will be built to order for the driving you do.

Words, words, words. You'll still have to see it. If you're in the market for a car costing around $2300, see Mazda. In fact, if you're in the market for any 5 passenger sedan, regardless of price, you should at least look at Mazda. You may save yourself a couple of thousand dollars. Or, you may decide to buy two Mazda's.

MAZDA 1500 WAGON



Which is prettier—sedan or wagon? Decisions, decisions. $2590.

It may be the last car you look at. It could be the first one you buy.

1969 Rebel.
Too economical for a luxury car.
Too expensive for an economy car.
Too roomy for a sports car.
It's not easy to classify.
That's why we call it the sleeper.

Roomier than any other car in its class. With plenty of power. And unique options like a new 'Command Air' heating-ventilating system.

Rebel. Single-unit constructed. Rustproofed to an almost ridiculous extreme. A magnificent carryback to the time when what you wanted for your dollar was a sedan that held firm on hard roads while it gave out the go.

If you want comfort and room, power and ride, without paying through the nose, see your American Motors dealer and put your money on the sleeper. Rebel.

'Let All of Vietnam Become United Nations Property'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A former South Vietnamese government official has proposed that Vietnam become the property of the United Nations for an "experiment in international government."

Nguyen Huu Chi, a professor of political studies at Queen's University here, said in a weekend interview that he has been nourishing his scheme for a unified Vietnam since 1962.

He was a special assistant to Dr. Quat, the last civilian prime minister of the country, and was governor in 1966 of the province of Quang Nam near Da Nang. He left Vietnam after surviving the coup that deposed Dr. Quat and becoming "disillusioned with the entire situation."

Dr. Chi said "the United Nations as a good organization that has not used its potential.

"I think we should use Vietnam as experimental ground for a system of international government, and if this were a success the UN would have a tremendous future," Dr. Chi said.

He suggested that a representative of the UN secretary-general head a presidium supervising a federation of North and South Vietnam.

Leaders of North and South would act as advisers to the president of the presidium but would have no powers.

The presidium would decide on matters of general interest to a united Vietnam such as foreign policy, security, and monetary policy.

Under this would be a national congress of two houses, the upper house consisting of all ambassadors to Vietnam from every country in the world, and the lower house of North and South Vietnamese elected in proportion to the population in each.

The upper house would have the right to veto, be responsible for such things as the printing of currency and distribution of foreign aid.

UN WOULD HANDLE

"The biggest condition, and the most difficult, is that the big powers agree to the neutrality of the whole area," Dr. Chi said.

Elections to the lower house would be supervised by the UN.

Both North and South regions would have their own executive and legislative bodies.

Standing at the same level as the presidium and in judgment of all non-civil laws of the country would be a world court composed of non-Vietnamese professionals. It would act as the final court of appeal for the judicial system, and would review all laws passed in the provincial governments to determine their constitutionality.

North Vietnam could remain Communist if necessary, but there should be freedom of movement between the two regions.

HELLYER EYES PENSION FUNDS

SUDBURY (CP)—Transport Minister Paul Hellyer said today large international corporations and their pension funds must bear a social responsibility to invest in local development.

Americans Trust Canada The Most

TOKYO (AP) — Americans consider Canada the most trustworthy foreign country, says an opinion survey conducted by the Gallup organization for Yomiuri Shimbun, one of Japan's largest newspapers. The paper says that the poll was conducted at the request of Yomiuri in September.

Asked to name five countries from among a list of 30 countries which they regard as most trustworthy, 72 per cent of the Americans placed the United States first on the list.

Sixty-three per cent of Americans chose Canada as the most trustworthy foreign country, followed by England, Australia and Switzerland.

Because only eight per cent of the sample listed Japan as among the five nations considered most trustworthy, the newspaper comments that "the current attitudes of the U.S. public toward Japan seem to be dominated by a feeling of distrust."

The attitude was said to relate to memories of the Second World War.

Of the group questioned, 10 per cent found Italy trustworthy. Nine per cent had confidence in France. Preferred countries were Denmark, Finland, Holland, Mexico, New Zealand, Norway, Sweden and West Germany. No one in the sample found the Soviet Union or Yugoslavia trustworthy. One per cent had confidence in China.

Lawyer Frowns On Frills And Flowers

VANCOUVER (CP) — City prosecutor Stewart McMorran said Monday he questions the value of fancy school grounds, counsellors and radical university professors who stir unrest.

"There's no need for all this beautification of schools outside—shrubs, flowers, grass and so on," he said. "This has to be paid for by somebody. It has no real value."

Mr. McMorran, one of several speakers at a panel discussion at the B.C. School Trustees Association convention here, said schools have no business trying to solve social problems.

"They have accepted and taken over control from the parents in this field, and this is bad, for it abrogates the responsibility of the family as an important unit in the community."

Mr. McMorran criticized university professors "who preach revolution for the sake of revolution."

"These university activists teach teachers who go out into our schools, often to act as counsellors."

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, OCT. 9, 1968—PAGE 13

Second Section
Pages 13-26

Arthur Mayse

One opening of the British Columbia Legislative Assembly is much like another. The party swords are sheathed, or almost so. There are reunions and greetings, brilliant pageantry, frothy hats and crowded galleries. Most years, one or two of the polished brown desks on the floor of the House will have new faces behind them.

These belong to freshman members whose entry to the red-carpeted cockpit was won in election or byelection.

Among the legislature's new boys at the 1963 opening was a young neurologist whose name woke an echo, McGeer. Dr. Patrick L. McGeer. He had taken one of the two Vancouver-Point Grey seats the previous December, and as seen from the press gallery, he looked more like a new-fledged university graduate than an MLA.

But he was a nephew of Gerald Gratton McGeer, unquenchable Vancouver mayor of the depression years, who gave his town a new city hall and took his tough red Irish mug to Ottawa as MP and later as a senator.

In his earlier years, Gerry McGeer had been a provincial member, and a rambunctious one. Perhaps some of his Irish had rubbed off on his spectacled nephew.

★

It had, and the proof was not long in coming. Opening day fuss and feathers over, legislators turned to their speeches. Pat McGeer's turn came. He rose, to the round of desk-slapping that greets a new member's maiden effort.

From the start it was apparent that he meant to do more than merely chase the devil around a stump. He took aim at Attorney-General Robert Bonner, who had regained the other Vancouver-Point Grey seat for Social Credit, and loosed shaft after shaft.

The performance, as I noted at the time, reminded me of a hound-pup rushing in on a cougar. The House held no more formidable opponent in debate than Mr. Bonner. With cold precision, the A-G proceeded to give the newcomer a verbal bloodying.

It was plain, however, that the cocky little Liberal group had gained a sturdy recruit, and one worth keeping an eye on.

Pat McGeer fitted well into Liberal leader Ray Perrault's commando of redhot individualists. He might lead with his chin rather too frequently, as shrewd Gordon Gibson once observed to me, but he gained stature with each session.

I suspect that even then, Ray Perrault saw qualities of leadership in him.

Ray, a man in whom kindness and dogged courage are blended, told me once by an alder fire that he would hold the B.C. leadership of his party only until the "right" man appeared to take it over.

If Pat McGeer is that man—if he can indeed lead B.C. Liberalism to its promised land—let Ray Perrault be remembered as the durable foot-slogger who brought his people through the wilderness.

★

Everyone in any way connected with a legislative session emerges from it bone-weary. Once when a session was well along, Pat McGeer, his house leader, and a couple of newsmen decided that a forenoon on a golf course would have a tonic effect.

Pat, a golfer, had his own clubs. The rest of us rented equipment at a local course, stowed light refreshment in our bags, and straggled forth on a bright spring morning.

The newsmen's performance is better overlooked. Ray Perrault played a canny game. It was plain from the first tee, however, that our fourth brought the same approach to golf that he did to politics.

He played with controlled exuberance. He drove hard, and lacking competition elsewhere, he competed against himself.

Now, a veteran of the house and provincial Liberal leader at 41, Dr. Patrick L. McGeer faces the entrenched and wily Goliath of B.C. politics.

It's a stern challenge, but I venture to think that he is up to it.

'Dear Student' Letters Dashed Off by Premier

Premier W. A. C. Bennett has sent letters to 1,400 students at Centennial High School in Coquitlam defending his government's school construction policy.

The letters, costing $70 in postage, are in reply to 1,600 letters Centennial students brought to Education Minister Brothers Sept. 30, urging the government to release funds for 10 new school sites.

The students were also critical of overcrowding which forced 4,200 in the Coquitlam School District on shift classes.

Mr. Bennett's letters were to arrive at the school today, a day after his announcement that the government is releasing $421,000 for the purchase of six school sites in the district.

He said in the letters:

"Before dealing specifically with the situation with regard to classrooms in Coquitlam, I would like to remind you that we are living in a highly inflationary period in which it is difficult to obtain money and extremely difficult to obtain it at a reasonable rate."

Of 731 classrooms approved for construction in B.C., Mr. Bennett said 146 or 20 per cent were in Coquitlam district.

"The shift system is not necessarily bad," the premier said.

TEACHERS SUPPORT GOVERNMENT CENSURE

Tom Hutchison, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, has announced support of the B.C. School Trustees Association in its censure of the provincial government for failing to lift the freeze on school construction.

Mr. Hutchison said the implications of the freeze were recognized last Easter when the teachers agreed to a $3 assessment to pay for a campaign aimed at informing the public on the effects of the government's education finance policies.

"We have been attempting ever since then to let the public know of the implications of the freeze and we heartily commend the action of the trustees," he said.

Mr. Hutchison said he was pleased the government released $422,000 for school site acquisition in Coquitlam, a Vancouver suburb, but said "it was a pity that teachers and the school board had to involve public pressure to bring government attention to an obvious educational need."

AMBASSADOR IN TOWN

Ireland Struggles To Slacken Exodus

Ireland is trying to keep her men at home.

More than 2,000 Irishmen migrated to Canada in 1967 and a similar number entered the United States.

"That is too many for our own good," says Hon. William Warnock, Ireland's ambassador to Canada, now visiting Victoria for the first time.

"We are striving to give our men the kind of living standards that will keep them home," Mr. Warnock said, "and by 1970 we hope emigration will be reduced to a mere trickle.

"Our industries have increased tremendously over the past 20 years and there is much more incentive for Irishmen to marry and settle down in their native land.

"Historically, Ireland was a poor country and our men had good reason to seek opportunities abroad."

The Irish ambassador and Mrs. Warnock were entertained at lunch at Government House today by Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John Nicholson.

This afternoon Mr. Warnock called on Premier Bennett at the Legislative Buildings.

'USEFUL CONTACTS'

"My purpose is to make useful contacts with the B.C. government and leaders of industry with a view to improving balance of our trade with Canada."

In 1967 Ireland bought $5,100,000 worth of goods from Canada, while Canada bought $1,800,000 from Ireland. Her chief Canadian imports are lumber, paper, wheat and aluminum. Canada imports Irish textiles, surgical goods, glass and footwear.

Ireland is also importing an increasing number of tourists from Canada.

"I haven't seen the figure yet," Mr. Warnock said, "but this could be a record year for our tourist industry. We encourage visitors to Britain and Europe to stop off at Shannon Airport (near Limerick) and tour Ireland before resuming their journey.

"The best way to do this is to hire a car, and our car rentals have increased enormously over the past two years."

Mr. and Mrs. Warnock will attend a reception given by Irish immigrants in Vancouver Thursday. They return to Ottawa Sunday.

Life Membership For Mayor Stephen

The community Planning Association of Canada Tuesday made Mayor Hugh Stephen an honorary life member of the organization.

Mayor Stephen, active in planning long before he entered civic politics, accepted the life membership at a banquet at the Empress Hotel.

Document Details Tenure Provisions

The University of Victoria has adopted a new statement on academic freedom and tenure.

The Faculty Association ratified the document at a general meeting Tuesday. Its contents, previously approved by the Board of Governors, now become university policy.

Procedures are spelled out for the appointment, promotion and dismissal of faculty members, and for decision-making on contract renewals and the granting of tenure.

The document is the product of a special committee named last year after a crisis developed over the non-renewal of contracts for three popular and controversial teachers.

Tenure is described in the document as "the most important step in the relations between the university and the faculty member"—a traditional guarantee of permanent employment, subject only to formal dismissal proceedings "for cause."

It is designed to protect academic freedom from outside pressures, where faculty have proved their worth as scholars and shown high responsibility in their teaching.

The document says granting of tensure must be considered for each full-time academic appointee within his first five years of university service. Any rank above that of lecturer may carry tenure.

GET ONE YEAR

When a decision is made during a final contract year not to grant tenure of offer reappointment, faculty will be entitled to a one-year terminal appointment.

Decisions, made on the recommendation of committees drawn from the individual's own teaching area, will be subject to appeal to an all-university review committee.

The committee will consist of five members elected annually — three from the faculty of Arts and Science, one from the Faculty of Education, and one from the School of Fine Arts.

The document also provides for hearings in cases involving dismissal. These will be handled by a three-man group to be known as the standing arbitration committee, selected each year by the university president and the president of the faculty Association from faculties outside the university.

All teaching appointments, the document states, "term or tenured, are entitled to academic freedom."

This is defined in part as "the right of a faculty member, free from the threat of institutional reprisals and without regard to outside influence, to teach, investigate, publish and speculate without defence to prescribed doctrine, to participate in the formulation of Academic policies, and to criticize the university."

'AS HE SEES IT'

The responsibilities that must accompany adcademic freedom are outlined in a statement on professional ethics. Included is the duty of a professor "to seek and to state the truth as he sees it," to encourage the free pursuit of learning in his students, and to respect and defend the rights of his associates.

Dr. James E. Hendrickson, president of the Faculty Association, described the tenure document as "the product of many months—even years—of work by numberous colleagues."

Dr. Hendrickson and Dean R. T. Wallace, the university's acting president, agreed that the document would vitally affect every faculty member and spur university development.

Skipper Pleads Not Guilty To All Charges

By JOHN SLINGER

Three charges of negligence today were read against Cmdr. Norman S. Jackson, skipper of HMCS Saskatchewan, a destroyer-escort damaged September 8 in a collision with a submerged rock in Active Pass.

Cmdr. Jackson was paraded before a court martial convened in the wardroom at CFB Esquimalt. He pleaded not guilty.

In the grey, packed courtroom, Cmdr. Jackson, a heavy-set ruddy-face 42 year old, unbuckled his ceremonial sword and ritually placed it on a green-draped table before the court.

In the collision, Saskatchewan's hull and propellers were badly damaged and the ship required $15,000 temporary repairs to continue in service.

The court president, Capt. Frederick C. Frewer, Esquimalt base commander, and his four-man court, heard charges that Cmdr. Jackson "negligently hazarded" the ship, "negligently suffered to be hazarded" the ship and "negligently performed a military duty imposed upon him."

TRIED ON ALL

Cmdr. H. C. Ferne of Ottawa, the judge advocate, told the court that although the second charge is laid as an alternative to the first, Cmdr. Jackson will be tried on all three.

Particulars of the first two charges are identical.

They state that between 10:30 and 11 a.m., on passage from Vancouver to Esquimalt, the accused "failed to take adequate precaution to ensure the safe approach to and transit of Active Pass."

The third charge states that on Sept. 7 or 8, the accused "failed to exercise adequate supervision of the preparation and execution of the passage plan . . ."

It says such supervision "was his duty as captain to do."

Defence counsel is Cmdr. J. L. Henderson of Ottawa.

The court martial is expected to last several days.

FIRE-FIGHTING TRIO PRESENTING AWARDS

Miss Fire Prevention — 15-year-old Elaine Wurban — is carrying the 1968 Fire Prevention message to local residents during Fire Prevention Week.

She and her attendants, Marlene Olson and Lorraine Hobbe, are presenting awards to some of the 1,000 students competing in an essay, slogan and poster contest sponsored by the Department of National Defence Fire Department at the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt.

They presented 66 awards to students at John Stubbs Memorial School, Belmont Park, Tuesday, when entertainment was provided by Jerry Gosley and accordionist Al Denoni.

Today they presented awards at the Canadian Services College, Royal Roads. Thursday at 2 p.m. they will make presentations at the Ammunition Depot, Rocky Point; Friday at 2 p.m. they will visit Metchosin elementary school.

Accused Known To Theft Victim

A 21-year-old Toronto man charged with theft of a car from Melvin R. Butler at 4590 Sumner Place was formerly a guest in his home, it was stated in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday.

Peter Simpson is on trial in Assize Court for robbery, breaking and entering and car theft on May 10 last.

Mr. Butler, a seaman, testified that Simpson and another man, were overnight guests in his home last April. He said the accused had seen firearms in his home, which were stolen on the night of May 10-11.

Simpson is charged with breaking, entering and theft from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Monty Aldous, 4590 Sumner Place; theft of a car belonging to Mrs. Aldous' son, Butler; and theft from Raymond Victor Moorhouse, an employee of Ernies' Fine Foods.

He is the only survivor of a car crash that killed two other men May 11 when the car slammed into a tree at View Royal while being chased by Esquimalt police.

When the trial resumed today, Mrs. Aldous, testified that two rifles, two pistols, a pair of binoculars and several bottles of liquor were stolen from her home between May 10 and 11 last.

Mrs. Aldous said she and her husband left their home on Friday, May 10, and returned Saturday afternoon, May 11.

The house had been broken into and a number of articles stolen.

Two revolvers were produced in court and Mrs. Aldous said one was identical with one owned by her son, Butler.

"Can you positively identify it as your son's property?" asked defence counsel David Skillings. "Are there any special marks on it that you recognize?"

"No," Mrs. Aldous replied, "but it looks the same."

Earlier, Mrs. Aldous testified that her son owned a Chevrolet convertible very similar to the car which crashed at View Royal. She said the car disappeared from in front of their home during their visit to Vancouver.

Crown prosecutor Louis Lindholm said three men, masked with sweaters, held up a male employee at Ernie's Fine Foods on May 10 and escaped with $150.

A similar sum was recovered from the car after it crashed into a tree.

When the trial opened Monday, Simpson conducted his own defence because he said he could not get free legal aid.

But on Tuesday, Mr. Skillings appeared for the defence. Crown prosecutor Lindholm said Mr. Skilling has been retained on behalf of the accused by the attorney-general's department at the request of Mr. Justice J. S. Aikens.

The trial continued this afternoon.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you tell me what year th Uplands (Oak Bay) was developed, who were the owners and who put the restrictions there?—E.C.F.

A. The old Uplands Farm, a 300-acre section of land south of Cadboro Bay and fronting on the sea, was first owned by the Hudson's Bay Company. A Times article of Feb. 28, 1907 records the sale of this "delightful tract" to J. H. Oldfield and W. H. Gardner of Winnipeg for development as a residential area. The sale was made by C. C. Chipman, chief commissioner for the company in Winnipeg. The initial plan was for a subdivision in which the original owners would have certain policy-making powers. It was not until 1935 that statute law gave power over the area to the municipality of Oak Bay. Any restrictions, therefore, prior to 1935 were placed on the land by the owners at the time.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. [illegible]

Majority Drink in Grade 12 At Oak Bay High, Panel Told

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The majority of Grade 12 students at one Victoria school drink and have been drunk, a panel discussion was told Tuesday.

Two-thirds of the boys and one-third of the girls gave yes answers to these questions in a survey while five per cent "said they weren't sure," reported student Pat Wolfe.

He was speaking at a panel entitled Youth and Adult Viewpoints on Human Values Today organized by the annual convention of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

The survey was taken among Grade 12 students at Oak Bay senior secondary school.

Other results showed that 60 per cent believe in God, 12 per cent have taken drugs and 10 per cent of them would take drugs again.

Mr. Wolfe said, however, that the RCMP has a list of 180 students at Oak Bay High who have taken drugs "and that's 20 per cent."

Ninety per cent thought students should have more say in education and 85 per cent believe there is a generation gap and it will probably continue.

Thirty per cent said violence could be justified and 35 per cent said they thought free love "was all right, it was good."

He added that "the males were more daring, females were more cautious."

Another panelist, Bruce Fryer of Mount Douglas Senior Secondary School wondered if the results of the survey are accurate.

"The poll might not be taken too seriously by the kids," he said. "Will young people show true values in a test like that?"

A graduate student at the University of Victoria, Elizabeth Meiken, reported the results of a survey she did among 150 high school students in Courtenay and 150 high school students in Victoria.

Describing the results as "not startling," she said in both areas scenery and outdoor recreation were the two aspects which high school students tended to value most.

Next came people, and youth tended to like old buildings. Many valued the cleanliness of air, land and water. They found Victoria streets "very clean" and felt there are areas in the Inner Harbor and Esquimalt which need urban renewal.

In an adult panel later in the day, a Vancouver teacher urged the development of a sense of involvement among high school students.

Charles Bryfogle, who teaches social studies at Sir William Churchill Secondary School, said that for every committed and interested person there are 10 who are not.

The reason people don't generally become involved as adults is because they feel incompetent "so they do nothing and leave it to the politicians," he said.

High school students can deal with issues and problems and most of them won't go on to universities where this is a feature.

"Students have points of view and these should be brought out in secondary schools," he said.

"If they know how to do it at high school, a good many will carry it on later."

MARKET SUMMARIES

Prices Move Lower

Prices moved lower today in active trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The Montreal stock market continued to slide narrowly downwards in moderate active late trading. Gains and losses were about even in the mining section at Vancouver.

New York was closed today.

AT TORONTO golds were up. Among industrials, B.C. Sugar fell ½ to 45, Seagrams ⅝ to 47⅝ and Bank of Nova Scotia ⅜ to 21½. B-A Oil rose ⅜ to 47⅝ and Great West Life ⅛ to 77½.

Dickenson rose 10 cents to $3.60 in golds. Madsen was off 3 cents to $1.60.

In base metals, Denison rose to 76½ while Patino declined ¾ to 37¼.

In Western Oils, Canadian Superior was off ⅜ to 57, and Central-Del Rio ⅛ to 16⅝. Canadian Vridoil was up ⅝ to 14⅝.

AT VANCOUVER Arctic gained .10 from Tuesday's close to $3.25 on 4,300 shares. Grandue put on .30 to $9.50 while Northlode was unchanged at $3.80.

Lornex dropped .35 to $9.10 and Dynasty went down .25 to $10.75 on 10,500 shares. Churchill was down .15 at $6.15.

In industrials White Pass was up .50 at $45, Cunningham dropped .50 to $14 and MacMillan Bloedel was down .50 to $26.

In oils, Giant Reef dropped .07 to $1.31 and Stampede lost .05 to $3.

AT MONTREAL—Cominco slid ½ to 32, B.C. Forest and Canada Steamship Lins 2 to 24 and 31¼ respectively while Alcan lost ⅛ to 27½.

Bell Canada edged up ¼ to 45⅝ on sales of 2,675 shares.

Papers were mixed with Southam down 1 to 53 and Rolland A gaining ½ to 7⅝.

Home A and B both fell, ¼ to 28 and ⅜ to 29⅝ respectively.

Ougemines led gains in speculative mines and oils on the Canadian Stock Exchange with a 9-cent addition to 66 cents on a 61,500-share turnover.

AT LONDON stock market activity was at a low level today, and most of the leaders drifted lower.

Gilts also lacked interest to record a few insignificant changes.

Dollar stocks moved irregularly. Among Canadian issues, Imperial Oil rose 5 to 226, while Trans Canada Pipe, Consolidated Paper and Massey-Ferguson also improved. Cominco, Pacific Petroleums and Noranda showed losses. Among banks, Nova Scotia, Royal Bank of Canada and Toronto and Dominion progressed.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Oilseeds offers drew little support and commercial interest today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange in a light trade and erratic price pattern.

Flax and rapeseed was mostly a local and commission house action with rapeseed running into a fairly heavy volume of hedge selling.

Rye drew good interest by exporters and 20,000 bushels were sold to Japan.

Oats and barley received a small domestic shipper operation.

Total futures trading volume Tuesday: flax 1,234,000 bushesl, rapeseed 221,000 and rye 88,000.

Safeway Opens Discount Store

Canada Safeway Ltd. today reopened its supermarket at 2635 Quadra after converting it to a discount operation.

One of three "Disco Centres" in B.C., the 14-year-old store has been largely undercorated and filled with bulk stocks of merchandise, most of which is displayed in cut-down shipping cartons.

Store Manager is Doug Glover, who has been with Safeway in Victoria for 16 years.

Store hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday to Friday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Firm Has Staff Learning French

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for Woods Transport of Montreal said the firm has decided to send 10 of its employees to the University of Montreal to take French courses as a tribute to Daniel Johnson, the late premier of Quebec.

Mrs. Irwin Woods said the company believes French can be made the working language of the province without initiating legislation to force it upon the people.

Oil Statement Taken

The Vancouver Stock Exchange said Tuesday it has accepted a filing statement of Northlode Explorations dealing with its oil exploration plans in California.

The exchange Friday ordered the Vancouver-based company to file the statement by noon Monday following a Los Angeles news release which said Northlode had acquired San Juan Capistrano basin property with a $353 million potential.

Exchange president Jack Van Luven said Northlode, which has an 85.5 per cent interest in the property, submitted an engineering report to support the claim that the property contains 113,000,000 barrels of recoverable oil.

Reinstatement Bid

A spokesman for Cambri Mining and Development Ltd. said Tuesday steps have been taken to have the firm reinstated as a registered company.

The Vancouver Stock Exchange was told Monday by the British Columbia Securities Commission to halt Cambri trading because it was struck from the register of Companies Sept. 19 for failing to file notice of annual meetings.

The spokesman for Cambri said the company had held annual meetings since its incorporation in December, 1965, but failed to report them.

He said the company has successfully applied to a judge of the B.C. Supreme Court for reinstatement.

The firm's shares traded in over-the-counter transactions on the VSE recently at about 22 cents.

Big Transaction Shapes On TSE

TORONTO (CP) About 8,300 shares of Victoria and Grey Trust Co. of Lindsay, Ont., were tendered and taken up by Wisener and Partners, bidding for an unidentified client, before the opening of regular trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today.

The number of shares offered fell short of the 135,000 which Wisener said its client had hoped to buy at $17.50 a share.

However, Wisener said it would repeat the bid for the balance of the shares before the opening of trading Thursday and might bid Friday as well.

The purchase would represent about 10 per cent of Victoria and Grey's 1,390,000 outstanding shares.

Richardson Resigns 13 Directorships

OTTAWA (CP) — James Richardson, minister without portfolio, resigned 13 company directorships on being sworn into the Privy Council July 6, a Commons return showed this week.

The return was tabled in reply to a question by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre).

Mr. Richardson, Liberal MP for Winnipeg South, resigned as director of the following companies and corporations:

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Hudson's Bay Company, The Investors Group, Investors Mutual of Canada Ltd., Investors Growth Fund Ltd., Investors International Fund Ltd., Investors Syndicate Ltd., Provindent Mutual Fund Ltd., International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., Canadian Pacific Railway Ltd., United Canadian Shares Ltd., Canadian Indemnity Ltd., James Richardson and Sons Ltd. and its associated companies.

DROPS FOUR POSTS

Don Jamieson, minister of defence production and Commons member for Newfoundland's Burin-Burgeo riding, resigned four directorships: Newfoundland Broadcasting Co. Ltd., CTV Television Network Ltd., CANET Holdings Ltd. and Bavarian Brewing Co. Ltd.

Robert Andras, another minister without portfolio and MP for Port Arthur, still holds directorships in four firms, the reply shows. They are Gibson Motors 1962 Ltd., Gibson Lease and Rentals Ltd., Andras-Hagoe Ltd., and Strathwin Ltd., all of Port Arthur.

Gold War Increases

LONDON (Reuters) — Gold dealers stepped up the bullion price war this week following failure to reach international agreement on South Africa's future gold sales policy.

When dealings opened they added 90 cents an ounce to Friday morning's rate, bringing it up to $39.80 (U.S.)—4.80 an ounce above the official price. Business was brisk, one London dealer said.

The rate also was increased in Zurich, Switzerland and Beirut, Lebanon.

Negotiations in Washington for a policy agreement ended without a settlement last week. The gold price battle now centres on the free market.

Since establishment of a two-tier price system in London last April, the free market price has been consistently above the $35 official rate.

SEEKS HIGHER PRICE

The United States would like to see the free market price drop to around $35, while South Africa, the world's largest gold producer, wants to see it rise. South Africa thinks this would give a high price for that part of its production sold on the free market and would also put pressure on the U.S. to concede an increase in the official price.

When it looked as though an agreement between the U.S. and South Africa was likely last week, gold hoarders, both investors and speculators, became somewhat frightened and the free market rate here slumped to $38.30—its lowest level since mid-July.

Imperial Offer To Slater Fails

MONTREAL (CP) — Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada Tuesday night confirmed reports that it made an unsuccessful $23 million offer to Slater Steel Industries Ltd. for its controlling interest in Salada Foods Ltd.

An Imperial spokesman said "the matter is closed." The $23 million offer was "the maximum amount assigned to the value of Salada."

The bid for 1,326,569 common shares of the food company—50 per cent of the outstanding common stock—worked out to $17.34 a share and was made by Imperial's wholly-owned subsidiary, Innotron International Ltd.

Broker Acquitted

TORONTO (CP)—Stockbroker Robert James Breckenridge 62, was acquitted Monday on two charges of wash trading in 1964 in shares of Consolidated Golden Arrow Mines Ltd., of Toronto.

Wash trading is an attempt to give a false impression of a stock's value by manipulating the market.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Pitfalls of Amateur Trading

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, C.A.

(This is a service provided by The Times and the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

A recent report revealed how a young man managed to invest and trade in "blue chip" securities and lose almost all his capital during a period when his investments were, generally, rising in value.

The sad tale is a ridiculous example of an ignorant investor following the counsel of an incompetent adviser. He tried to act like a professional trader in securities but he did not know how.

He made almost every mistake in the book, except that he did not buy speculative securities as if they were high grade investments.

His general error was, of course, to buy when he should have sold and vice versa but even the most experienced investors do that sometimes. This particular man just did it too often, far too often; the aggregate amount of his trading during a one-year period was about 10 times the amount of his capital.

If he had simply made his initial purchases and put the securities away in a box the end result would have been to, at least, preserve his capital if not to make a reasonable gain. But he traded in "panic." If a stock went down slightly in price he waited just long enough to see that it was really going down and then sold it, naturally about the bottom of that market swing.

Then, of course, on the upturn he waited until the same stock reached a new high and then jumped back in. This is very easy to rationalize at the time but after a few bitter lessons most people are a little more prudent and learn to stop trading in and out, and to wait. Patience is a primary requisite for any investment program.

Then, our amateur trader became even more bold and began to buy on margin; that is, he bought more securities than he could afford to pay for. He wanted to use the effect of leverage to increase his profits if the stock rose but he forgot that leverage works both ways and when the stock fell his loss was proportionately greater in relation to his capital.

The margin investments also forced him to sell out at the bottom of every market swing because stockbrokers are required to ensure that their clients' accounts do not become under-margined (i.e., too little paid for or secured by the market value of the stock in realtion to the total amount owing by the client). Consequently, if the market value fell the stockbroker had to demand more payment or sell out the stock to cover the unpaid account.

To compound his error our foolish investor committed the ultimate stupidity of "selling short." He sold stock he did not own in the hope that the price would fall and then he could buy it later at a lower cost and cover the delivery of shares he owed upon his original sale. The trouble with selling short is that if the stock goes up in value it must still be bought back and there is no limit to which a price may rise.

At least, on the stocks he owned and had paid for he could only lose the amount of his investment but on his margin purchases he could, and did, lose more than he had paid, and on his short sales his losses could have been enormous.

NOTICE OF REDEMPTION

HOME OIL COMPANY LIMITED

5¼% Convertible Subordinated Debentures
Due December 1, 1984

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, as provided in Article Four of the Indenture (hereinafter called "the Indenture") dated as of December 1, 1964 between Home Oil Company Limited (hereinafter called "the Company") and Crown Trust Company and The Chase Manhattan Bank [now The Chase Manhattan Bank (National Association)], as Trustees, that the Company has elected to redeem on November 4, 1968, all of its 5¼% Convertible Subordinate Debentures due December 1, 1984 (hereinafter called "the Debentures") at 104.6% of the principal amount thereof, together with accrued interest thereon to November 4, 1968, in lawful money of Canada. Payment of the redemption price of Debentures which are not converted into Class A Shares of the Company on or prior to October 25, 1968, and accrued interest thereon, will be made, at the option of the holder, at any branch in Canada of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce or at the principal office of The Chase Manhattan Bank N.A. in the Borough of Manhattan, the City and State of New York, upon presentation and surrender of such Debentures. In the case of The Chase Manhattan Bank N.A., Debentures should be surrendered at The Chase Manhattan Bank N.A. (Corporate Agency Department), 80 Pine Street, New York, New York 10015. All interest on the Debentures shall cease to accrue on and after November 4, 1968.

In accordance with Article Five of the Indenture, holders of the Debentures may at their option at any time prior to, but not after, the close of business on October 25, 1968, convert the Debentures into Class A Shares of the Company at the price of Twenty Dollars ($20.00) per share in lawful money of Canada by surrendering the Debentures to be converted at the principal office of Crown Trust Company in any of the cities of Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary or Vancouver, Canada, or at the principal office of The Chase Manhattan Bank N.A., in the Borough of Manhattan, the City and State of New York. In the case of The Chase Manhattan Bank N.A., Debentures should be surrendered for conversion at The Chase Manhattan Bank N.A., (Corporate Agency Department), 80 Pine Street, New York, New York 10015. The applicable forms on the reverse side of the Debentures should be duly completed for this purpose.

THE RIGHT TO CONVERT THE DEBENTURES WILL TERMINATE AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS ON OCTOBER 25, 1968.

As promptly as practicable after the surrender of any Debenture for conversion, the Company will deliver at the office of the Crown Trust Company or The Chase Manhattan Bank N.A., as the case may be, at which the Debenture was so surrendered, to or upon the written order of the holder of the Debenture so surrendered, certificates representing the number of Class A Shares into which such Debenture may be converted.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Indenture, Debentures will not be transferred, exchanged or converted subsequent to October 25, 1968.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Indenture, no adjustments in respect of accrued interest on the Debentures or dividends on the Class A Shares shall be made upon the conversion of any Debenture.

VSE Trading

The Vancouver Stock Exchange said Monday trading during September showed an increase of 60 per cent over the same month in 1967. Trading was up 26 per cent for the first nine months of 1968 over a comparative period a year ago.

There were 46.9 million trades against 28.6 million a year ago, with a value of $62.7 million compared with $27.8 million.

Nine-month totals were $26.3 million (380.5 million) and $321.4 million ($263.8 million).

Edmonton Merger

Banister Pipeline Companies of Edmonton and Continental Computer Associates Inc. of Wyncote, Penn., announced Tuesday then plan to merge.

A joint announcement said Wyncote would pay Banister about $10 million in a combination of stock, debentures and cash under the agreement.

The proposal still requires the approval of Continental's board but the announcement said the merger is expected to be completed within two months, Banister continuing operations under present management.

Oil Acreage Bought

CALGARY — Home Oil Co. Ltd. today announced that it has acquired extensive acreage on the north slope of Alaska.

In a special report to shareholders, President R. A. Brown Jr. said Home's U.S. subsidiary, Home Oil Co. of Canada, has acquired a 100-per-cent working interest in oil and gas leases and priority applications for leases totalling 269,345 acres.

Most of the acreage ranges from 100 miles to within 28 miles of major oil discoveries at Prudhoe Bay and Sag River.

Mr. Brown said Home intends to begin exploration at an early date and now is contracting for a seismic crew to begin operations in the area during the 1968-69 winter season.

Mr. Brown also announced that Home Oil sold certain securities in 1968 for a total of $14.224 million realizing a gain of $3.271 million.

Rothmans' Profits

TORONTO (CP) — Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. had net income of $4.07 million or $2.54 a share in the 12 months ended June 30, compared with $3.763 million or $2.35 a share in the previous year.

Value of sales rose to $173.64 million from $166.014 million, despite a drop of 1.5 per cent in unit sales.

The company said industry sales were hurt by an unprecedented series of price increases since last December, resulting in an over-all decline in sales of 3.2 per cent in the year ended June 30.

The increases, brought about by higher excise and provincial taxes and manufacturers' prices, ranged from a low of seven per cent in New Brunswick to a high of 19.6 per cent in Newfoundland.

$ EXCHANGE

VICTORIA—Purchase of U.S. funds in terms of the Canadian dollar was quoted by the Royal Bank today at $1.07 1/2 for cheques, $1.07¾ for cash, $1.07¾ for silver. Sales were $1.07¼ for cheques and $1.07¼ for cash.

MONTREAL (CP)—The United States dollar in terms of Canadian funds was up 1/32 at $1.07 3/16. Pound sterling was up 3/16 at $2.56¾.

NEW YORK (CP)—The Canadian dollar was down 3/64 at 92 21/64 in terms of U.S. funds. Pound sterling was up 1/32 at $2.38.

Freight Rate Appeal Lost

OTTAWA (CP) — An increase in railway freight rates on lumber shipments from the Maritimes to Quebec and Ontario will be allowed to stand, it was announced Tuesday.

An appeal against the increase, lodged by the Maritimes Transportation Commission and the Maritime Lumber Bureau, has been dismissed by the Canadian Transport Commission.

In its ruling, the commission's railway committee rejected arguments that the rate increases of between 3 and 6 per cent were in violation of a Maritime rate freeze imposed last year in the new National Transportation Act.

The increases were upheld on the grounds that lumber exports from the Maritimes are a competitive situation.

Business Warned About Moral Duties

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday he would ask the federal government to consider legal action if business does not face the moral responsibility of technological change.

Speaking to the Toronto Personnel Association, he said: "Big business today has a moral responsibility to make sure these change cause a minimum of disruption, that they are revealed soon enough to make certain employees have the time and opportunity to adjust to those changes."

He wanted the moral obligation reflected more in collective agreements.

'NO HESITATION'

If it is not, then "I will have no hesitation to recommend to my colleagues in cabinet that this moral obligation becomes a legal one."

The labor minister also objected to the attitude some unions take to technological change.

"It is in the best interest of union members as the elite of our labor force to recognize technological change for what it is—something inevitable, something that must be lived with, something that eventually results in greater prosperity, new opportunities and a more prosperous nation."

He said that without technological change Canada will fall behind other countries which depend on exports for their high standard of living.

Decalta to Handle French Oil Funds

CALGARY (CP) — Western Decalta Petroleum Ltd. has announced that it will manage a Canadian investment program for two French companies.

C. S. Lee, president of Western Decalta, said the two French firms, Petrorep and Corexcal, will jointly invest about $2 million a year in the Canadian oil-producing industry for the next two years.

Petrorep is an exploration and production subsidiary company of the French group Petrofrance, which his direct and indirect interests in production, refining, marketing and transportation of petroleum in Europe.

Corexcal is a subsidiary of three French companies, Coparex, Finarep and Genarep with both direct and indirect investments in petroleum in several parts of the world.

Buyers May Be Told How Safe Is a Car

By VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Starting with 1970 cars, auto-makers will have to tell potential buyers how safe and effective their tires, brakes, bodies and headlights are—if a set of new federal rules proposed this week becomes effective.

The department of transportation issued an advance notice of proposed rulemaking and gave manufacturers until Nov. 8 to comment.

The car-maker, if the plan remains intact, would have to give customers a booklet with facts, figures and diagrams revealing "performance statistics" in nine areas.

The idea is to put the information in a form "understandable to the average person," a department spokesman said.

The nine areas:

- Tire performance, and whether tires equal or exceed federal standards.
- Brakes, including stopping distances under various loads and conditions.
- Illumination produced by headlights in relation to speed (fast drivers may not be able to stop within the areas some lights illuminate) —as well as data on glare produced by the car's lights on other drivers and pedestrians.
- "Lateral intrusion" of the passenger compartment—how well the sides of the car will resist caving in in a crash.
- The driver's field of view, including areas covered by mirrors and blind spots.
- Acceleration and passing ability, over various surfaces and grades.
- Steering ratio—how rapidly the steering wheel turns the front wheels.
- Performance when towing trailers.
- Flammability of interior materials.

Dr. William Haddon Jr., head of the national bureau of highway safety, admitted that car-makers will not have an easy time collecting the facts. But the "consumer must be provided with meaningful information."

The next step—if the rule-making federal highway administration decides to go ahead—will be a "notice of proposed rulemaking," putting the proposal into technical language.

Car-makers could then be required to distribute the information by August, 1969, in time for 1970 models.

Potash Value Decreases

REGINA (CP) — Potash production in Saskatchewan increased in volume but declined in value during the first six months of 1968, compared with the same period in 1967 the province's department of mineral resources said Tuesday.

Volume of potash produced from January to June, 1968, was 1.54 million tons, compared with 1.16 million for the first six months of 1967. Value of the potash declined to $43.18 million from $43.52 million in the first half of last year.

Total value of all mineral production during the first half of 1968 was $178.49 million an increase of $488,000 over the same period last year.

Crude oil production was 44.24 million barrels, down 1.4 million from the first half of 1967, while natural gas production was 64.66 million cubic feet, compared with 57.24 million for the first six months of 1967.

The department said there were 5,731 wells producing crude oil at an average 45.8 barrels per day in June, 1968, compared with 5,707 wells producing 46.7 barrels per day in the same month last year.

Copper and zinc accounted for $15.79 million worth of metallic mineral production during the first half of 1968, up from $12.84 million during the same period last year.

NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE READY . . . . . . 52nd SEASON OPENS FRIDAY

Acceptance of Expansion Teams Delights Campbell

MONTREAL (CP) — With the growing pains of expansion one year behind it, the National Hockey League opens its 52nd season Friday night with an expanded 76-game schedule for each of the 12 teams in the two-division loop.

The six teams in each division play teams from their own section a total of eight times, including four times at home. They play the six teams in the other division six times, including three at home.

Last season, with a 74-game schedule, the ratio was 10-4.

As was the case last season, the 24-week schedule runs through 25 weekends, ending with 10 of the 12 teams playing Sunday, March 30.

Friday night's openers have Detroit Red Wings at Boston Bruins, St. Louis Blues at Chicago Black Hawks and Minnesota North Stars at Oakland Seals.

The other six teams swing into action Saturday and Sunday.

Last year the league added Minnesota, St. Louis, Oakland, Los Angeles Kings, Pittsburgh Penguins and Philadelphia Flyers as a Western Division. The Hawks, Wings, Boston, Montreal Canadiens, Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers, represent the established Eastern Division.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, predicts the coming season will add stability to the sophomore division clubs.

"I'm amazed at the development of the organizations of all the new clubs after just one year of operation," Campbell says of the off-ice personnel recruited in the new division. "They've taken hold in amazing fashion."

With the six teams of the old division playing to capacity crowds and turning away prospective customers, Campbell has his attention focused mainly on a pair of soft spots that appeared on last season's expansion terrain.

The Pittsburgh franchise now is in the hands of Don Parsons and a group of seven associates, while Potter Palmer heads a group of three at Oakland—in place of the cumbersome 53 partners of last season.

The Penguins and Seals last year finished out of the Western Division playoffs, and had difficulties at the box office—a problem Campbell feels will be overcome by solid playing performances and good promotion.

However, he doesn't think the division will be able to accumulate as good a won-lost record against the established teams as it did last season.

The newcomers won 40, lost 86 and tied 18 season games against the old division.

"They will be fortunate if they achieve as good a record this season," Campbell says. "They have sacrificed points for the opportunity to play (more games) against the old division."

Last season the old division clubs were the major drawing cards in the Western Division arenas. However, the NHL president says the early disparity in attendance tapered off toward the season's end.

"Certain rivalries were generated between the teams in the expansion cities—natural rivalries that will carry over into the coming season."

Campbell says each of the new clubs has expanded regional television coverage of its games and the added exposure will build an interest which will eventually show at the box office.

Last season two clubs—Los Angeles and Philadelphia—experienced arena difficulties. The Kings were unable to get into their new Forum until late in the season, while the Flyers were ousted from the Philadelphia Spectrum late in the season by wind damage to the roof.

There will be several innovations this season.

Each division will play for its own championship trophy over the regular season, before entering the post-season playoffs leading to the Stanley Cup.

The Eastern Division will continue to battle for the Prince of Wales Trophy as in the past, but the Western Division teams will be striving for a new award —the Clarence S. Campbell Bowl.

The format for this season's All-Star game, scheduled for Montreal Jan. 21, has also been changed.

The East will play the West, with 12 members of each division being selected by members of the news media to take part in the annual affair. In the past the selected All-Stars met the defending cup champions.

Who Will Pay To Hand-Shake A President?

By SHIRLEY POVICH
From The Washington Post

DETROIT—That rarity, a "for sale" sign on a major league baseball franchise, is now swinging in the breeze in the unlikeliest of all cities, Washington, D.C.

There are no takers, as yet, at the price which has been termed exorbitant. But that the Washington Senators will be sold before a new season begins is reasonable belief.

BOB HOPE

The fact that there are no takers at the price does not mean that there are no bidders. The desire to sell and the desire to buy have already been established. Now it has become simply a matter of accommodating the price to the purchase.

Bill Veeck wants the team. So does Frank Lane. Bob Hope has showed interest. A group of monied men in St. Louis are preparing an offer. But all are balking at the size of the investment as proposed by the estate of the late James H. Johnston and by James Lemon, equal co-owners of the team's stock.

If the price appears high, and to practiced economists it is indubitably so, there is a reason. There is more than one reason for the initial figure of $10 million set by the attorneys for the sellers as a starting point in negotiations.

The figure derives from the fact that the two new National League franchises awarded to San Diego and Montreal did command that price. This figure is well supported by the facts. But the attempt to link the two new American League franchises awarded Seattle and Kansas City to the same $10 million figure is unsupported by the facts.

Nearness of White House Ups Cost

Yet the Washington franchise is a special one and is not to be measured by the same-type balance sheets as in other cities. The Washington franchise is a prestigious one. In the nation's capital, the going price for a major-league franchise is not to be confused with the price put on other franchises.

Only in Washington does the owner of a baseball team make the annual pilgrimage to the White House to invite the nation's president to the opening game and get his picture taken in the executive office. Only the owner of the Senators can bask in the bunting-bedecked box seat at the side of whomever is the nation's president, and thus achieve instant status on the networks, social and national.

This is the bonus, the dividend of being the owner of the Washington baseball franchise, and the price is pegged to the belief that somewhere in this broad land there must be, and probably is, a man with both the ambition and the means to afford to pay more for the Washington club.

But the pros of baseball are not taking the bait. Bill Veeck, who would like to take over the franchise, says he offered $5,750,000 for the team one year ago, and was turned down.

"It's not worth that much now," said Veeck, who had told friends his new offer would be for only $5,250,000, a half-million less. "It's a bad team," said Veeck, who envisions an immediate expenditure of $1,500,000 on players as a beginning operational cost.

Hand-Shake Not Worth the Risk

Frank Lane, a promoter like Veeck, termed the $10 million figure cited by the estate's attorneys "ridiculous." "It isn't worth 10 million, or 8 million or 6 million. When they get down to the five-six million range, I might be interested.

"Who wants to buy the right to lose money in Washington? A hand-shake with the President of the United States isn't worth the kind of money they lose."

The kind of money the Washington franchise loses is, for example, $300,000 according to a club spokesman. The Washington attendance in 1968 was 542,052, a drop of 228,816 from last season when the club showed a small profit — its first in eight years of operation in the expanded league.

What does intrigue Veeck and Lane is the big possibility of easily attaining the break-even point of 800,000 home attendance with the kind of promotion and enterprise they say the Senators have lacked. They believe it is worth a 5-6 million dollar gamble, but no more than that.

His Lawyers Were Hoping for Bob

Bob Hope, in Detroit for the World Series, told this reporter, "A couple of weeks ago my attorneys, who happen to be in Cincinnati, did try to interest me in buying the Washington team. But it was mostly their idea, not mine.

"Here and there, I have given a thought to buying a club but the more thought I give it the more I am frightened by my other commitments and business interests. I couldn't give it my time and the only man I would choose to run a team for me, Buzzy Bavasi, already has bought into San Diego."

It could be a stalemate for many months. As attorneys for the Johnston estate and club president Lemon have pointed out, "we would like to sell, but this is not a distress sale. We are not forced to sell to meet inheritance taxes, or other obligations sometimes associated with an estate."

But in these matters, time runs with the buyers and makes it less a sellers' market. So at some point the team will be sold, probably to a Veeck-type when the price comes down, but not necessarily so. The price could yet be met by a monied status-seeker yearning for the opportunity to hand-shake the President of the United States, and then bend from the waist with the invitation to "be my guest at the opening game".

Aussie Golfers Grab Early Lead

MELBOURNE (AP)—Australia led Britain and Ireland by two strokes today with the United States two strokes farther behind after the first round of the Eisenhower Cup golf world teams event for amateurs.

Australia has a total of 216, Britain and Ireland 218 and the U.S. 220.

A total of 100 players from 26 countries are competing with the three best scores daily counting for an aggregate of 72 holes.

Canada and South Africa tied for sixth with a 225 total.

Kevin Donohoe, 28, a slim six-footer from Sydney, led the Aussie charge with a five-under-par 68 over the 6,946-yard layout at the Royal Melbourne Club.

Peter Oosterhuis, 20, last of the British players to hit off, rattled in putts for two birdies at the last two holes to finish in 70, second-best round of the day.

Perhaps the unluckiest on the tree-studded course was Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont. He was out in 35 with two birdies, then at the 10th he hooked a drive into the rough. He went into the long grass and played a ball. Then he said the ball was discolored and not his, although it was of the same make and number.

He went back into the rough, found his own ball, took a two-stroke penalty and finished the hole with a three-over-par seven and had a 73. The wrong ball he hit apparently was lost days ago from a practice fairway.

Robert Wylie of Calgary, one of Cowan's teammates, was two over par after four holes and never recovered to take 39 each way for a 78 total.

John Johnston of Vancouver had a 74 and the other Canadian golfer, Jim Doyle of Winnipeg, had a 79.

Detroit Pilot Kept It Secret

(Times News Services)

ST. LOUIS — When Mayo Smith, manager of Detroit Tigers, arrived at Busch Memorial Stadium for today's sixth game of the World Series, he knew who his starting pitcher would be. But he was the only one.

Smith didn't announce his starter until all the Tigers arrived at the park. Until then, the guess was one of three hurlers—31-game winner Denny McLain, Earl Wilson or Joe Sparma.

The nod finally went to McLain.

McLain, shelled in his first two Series starts, had a cortisone shot to treat an ailing shoulders and but pronounced himself ready.

Wilson, loser in the third game, is nursing a pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg, but reported some improvement.

Sparma, hit hard in relief in the fourth game, has spent much of the season in Smith's doghouse.

Cardinal catcher Tim McCarver is one of the first to admit that Detroit catcher Bill Freehan faces an almost impossible task in throwing out Lou Brock.

"There may be no way to defend against him no matter what you do," McCarver said Tuesday in praise of Brock and defence of the criticized Freehan.

That was the problem the harassed Freehan faced today.

The Tigers and Freehan were able to keep Brock from stealing a base in game No. 5 Monday and won 5-3 after losing three of the first four as Brock stole a record-tying seven bases.

* * *

"The whole subject of Lou doesn't require much deep thought," said McCarver. "Lou runs like heck and if he gets a little jump when he's stealing, no arm is going to stop him.

"People really spend too much time trying to analyze it. . . . Lou has outstanding speed, is a good base runner, is daring, challenging.

"I don't think it's important that any one take a rap. Everyone should just understand the problem of Lou Brock. He should get the credit and no one should be faulted.

"It may sound silly, but the only way to stop him is to try to keep him off base. He just doesn't seem to have any flaws."

* * *

When Mickey Stanley switched from centre field to shortstop, he also switched his thinking. Now he believes infielders deserve higher pay than outfielders.

"Maybe other people don't agree, but after playing shortstop I believe it," Stanley said.

Stanley is recognized as one of the best defensive outfielders in the American League, but Smith asked him to play short against St. Louis so the Tigers could have the benefit of Al Kaline's potent bat.

"There's a lot more mental strain for an infielder. Ball games depend on him more.

"An infielder who has a comparable year with the bat should make more money than an outfielder. He's worth more."

Casper Going British

LONDON (AP) — American pro Billy Casper said Tuesday he has applied for membership in the British Professional Golfers Association and would like some time to play a whole season on the British circuit.

Casper, 37-year-old former U.S. open champion and the leading money-winner on the U.S. tour, said: "I simple like playing golf in Britain. I like the people in the game and the way you get on and play it."

Casper is preparing for the start Thursday of the Piccadilly world match play championship.

Als' Coach Still Having His Problems

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders will rely heavily on Peter Liske's passing accuracy tonight when they attempt to regain the lead in the Western Football Conference.

Liske threw four touchdown passes and set a WFC passing record of 533 yards last week when Calgary defeated Saskatchewan Roughriders to move temporarily into first place. The Stampeders would like a comparable performance from Liske tonight in their Canadian Football League game against Montreal Alouettes.

Tonight's CFL game between Calgary and Montreal can be seen on channel 8 starting at 8 p.m.

A victory for Calgary would put the Stampeders one point ahead of Saskatchewan which moved into first Sunday by defeating Montreal 11-7.

The Stampeders have been inactive since the Roughrider encounter, but have added a quarterback and cut a running back.

Ron Vanderkelen, who played in the National Football League for five years, will be dressed as backup to Liske. He will be designated as the 14th import, but is not expected to see any action. Bob Paremore, who joined Calgary from the Alouettes two years ago, was cut.

DROP ANDY WALTON

The Alouettes, who cut defensive back Billy Woods Sunday, will only dress 13 imports.

Coach Kay Dalton said Tuesday that Andy Walton, a halfback activated after Wood's dismissal, has been dropped.

The coach said Walton wanted a no-cut contract for the rest of the year and pay for the game he sat out Sunday. Dalton said these terms were unacceptable.

He now is "an unemployed free-agent football player," said the coach.

GEORGE ARMSTRONG
. . . calling it quits

Army Packs It Up

By The Canadian Press

George Armstrong once again has announced his retirement from National Hockey League competition, and it looks as if he means it this time.

Toronto Maple Leafs' manager-coach, Punch Imlach, tried Tuesday to talk Armstrong out of it, but the 38-year-old team captain had made up his mind.

A right winger with Toronto for 17 years, Armstrong announced his retirement after the 1966-67 season. He later changed his mind and last season scored 13 goals, assisting on 21 others.

Armstrong, who said he possibly will enter the hotel business, joined the Leafs in 1952 and is the only Toronto captain to accept four Stanley Cups.

BATHGATE LEAVES TOO

Another established right winger also said farewell to the NHL Tuesday. Andy Bathgate joined Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League after being placed on waivers by Pittsburgh Penguins.

"My wife is from Vancouver and I told the Penguins that was the only place I'd play this year," said Bathgate.

Pittsburgh retains NHL playing rights to Bathgate, 35, who had 20 goals and 39 assists last season, best in the expansion division.

Meanwhile, coach Harry Sinden of Boston Bruins said All-Star defenceman Bobby Orr will play against Detroit Red Wings in Boston Friday in the season opener for both teams.

Orr, 20, underwent knee surgery last summer but has recovered sufficiently to see at least some action Friday.

Elsewhere, with the start of the NHL season just two days away, Chicago Black Hawks continued negotiations to sign Bobby Hull and Stan Mikita.

Hull, reported to be asking for $100,000, said it "looks like we're making some progress."

In another salary dispute, right winger Leon Rochefort of Philadelphia Flyers left the team and returned to his home at Cap de la Madeleine, Que.

Rochefort, who had 21 goals and 21 assists last season, said he wanted a raise. Management apparently disagreed.

Detroit Red Wings came to terms with defenceman Gary Bergman, goalie Roy Edwards and defencemen Ron Harris and Bart Crashley.

TEARS IN HIS EYES . . . . . . OLD FRIENDS AVOIDED

Emotional Return to Games for Emil

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Czechoslovakia's Emil Zatopek, one of the all-time sports heroes of the Communist world, told today how he risked imprisonment and perhaps death in speaking out against the Soviet-led occupation of his country six weeks ago.

"I talked on the street corners and on television," he said. "My friends warned me of the danger—that the intruders had been instructed to shoot to kill at the rise of any demonstration.

"I was not afraid. I told my friends that the Russians were more frightened than we were. They were acting out of fear. They were afraid that their political system might fall under the weight of freedom and social progress.

Zatopek, in 1952 at Helsinki, captured gold medals in the 5,000 and 10,000-metre runs and the marathon—a feat never equalled. He is a guest of the International Olympic Committee at the 19th Games here.

He and his wife, Dana, winner of the women's javelin in 1952, are reluctant to go to the Olympic Village.

"It is very bad for me," Zatopek said. "The Russians were my friends and fellow competitors in many Olympics. They come up to me and say, 'Emil, we are glad to see you. Come visit with us.'

"The Soviet track coach, Gabriel Korobkov, visits me and wants to talk. I can't say, 'go away.' I am a sportsman. I smile and try to be nice.

"One of the heads of the Soviet delegation says, 'Emil, Vladimir Kuts (famed Russian distance runner) is coming into the airport Thursday. He is most anxious to see you.' Vladimir and I run in many races together. But I cannot be seen at the airport greeting him. Then I am a collaborator."

Zatopek is a major in the Czechoslovakian Army and an important member of the Ministry. He now is bald and at 154, 20 pounds heavier than when he broke the tape at Helsinki with thousands yelling in unison: "Zat-o-pek! Zat-o-pek!"

His blue eyes welled up a bit with water as he talked of his harrowing experiences after Warsaw pact tanks roared into Prague Aug. 21.

"I was instructed that I might be a marked man," he recalled. "I went to the home of a friend and dropped from sight for three days.

"After three days, it became obvious that there was not too much danger. The Czechs were united. 'Don't worry, Emil,' a Ministry official told me, 'if the Russians try to arrest you, we will arrest them.'

"The Russians were very grim and tough at first. Then they changed. They hid their tanks and tried to be friendly. Not a single Czech picked up a weapon. It would have been useless. Our army is small. They could overpower us."

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

Golfers who strive for berths on B.C.'s Willingdon Cup team next summer will be required to play in eight rounds, but an excellent showing still is no guarantee of selection.

Directors of the B.C. Golf Association have designated eight trial rounds as a "must" for players wishing to claim one of the four berths on the provincial team. At the same time, the directors indicated they are reserving the right to finalize the selections.

In other words, the directors are leaving a loop-hole.

Gorge Vale's Ced Holland, the provincial president, said the 144 holes of the selection rounds "will determine the team's makeup 90 per cent of the time." The only exception foreseen by Holland "may be in the case of a golfer whose conduct may not be deemed worthy of selection."

Personally, I find no fault with the loop-hole.

In fact, remembering the antics of a Seattle-area golfer in the B.C. Amateur at Gorge Vale last June, the loop-hole may be advisable.

The BCGA's new format is aimed at encouraging golfers from throughout the province to campaign for berths on the team. Up to now, the Willingdon Cup chances belonged, almost exclusively, to Victoria and Lower Mainland golfers.

The eight qualifying rounds include the four in the B.C. Amateur; two in the province-wide zone championships, and two in a new 36-hole B.C. invitational tournament.

Winners and runners-up in the eight zone tournaments, along with the eight B.C. Amateur qualifiers, will be invited to the invitational, which will be played on two Victoria courses next summer.

The B.C. body also has decided to stick with its existing format in the provincial tournament—a 72-hole medal qualifying test with the low eight advancing into match play.

●

Al MacLeod received his just reward and young Brian Carbery kept a promise when they became the first to claim club championships Sunday.

The club champions at four other courses—Royal Colwood, Uplands, Cedar Hill and Glen Meadows—will be decided this weekend.

MacLeod defeated Jim McColl, 7 and 6, to inherit the Gorge Vale title he refused to accept by default last year. MacLeod had the chance when George Murphy was injured in an auto mishap, said "no thanks," and waited until his opponent was well enough to play. Murphy responded by winning.

This year's final was played as scheduled, and MacLeod had no difficulty in winning. Despite the fact he scored a seven-over 80 for the morning round, MacLeod led three up after 18.

Gorge Vale's B championship went to Bob Copeland, who defeated defending champion Andy DiGirolamo 6 and 4.

The 20-year-old Carbery made good on a promise to himself . . . and a few friends. He insisted he would win, and then proceeded to go to work on his game all summer. The dedication paid off. Brian stopped Doug Munro, 6 and 4.

Oak Bay's "B" championship went to Charlie Keenan, who defeated Dudley Carter.

●

Colwood's playoff will be between Laurie Kerr and Joe Evans. Kerr had to go to the 21st to sideline Ron Howard, Sr., while Evans scored a one-up victory over Vic Painter in the semifinals.

At Cedar Hill, Greg Barnes defeated Gerry Smith and Greg Cahillish upset defending champion Ray Harrington to set up Sunday's final. Glen Meadows' finalists Hal Jacobsen and Brian Staggett delayed their final, scheduled last Sunday, until this weekend.

Uplands, hoping to instill greater interest in the club final, has switched from a Sunday playoff to Saturday. A windup dinner goes along with the championship and flight finals. The main-event finalists are veterans Claude Heggie and Gord Pellow.

●

The Royal Canadian Golf Association will conduct its first turfgrass conference in British Columbia Thursday and Friday at the Blue Boy Motor Hotel in Vancouver.

Golf course superintendents, golf club representatives, landscape contractors and students will hear lectures by leading turfgrass authorities in the United States and Canada.

Damage to courses from play during wet winter weather, long a problem for many British Columbia courses, will be discussed by Dr. James B. Beard, professor at Michigan State University. Dr. Beard will also talk on turfgrass research.

Other subjects include weed control, public relations, electrical underground heating experiments at Banff Springs Golf Club, care and maintenance of equipment, public golf course design, thatch, trends in fairway alignment and mowing patterns, putting green soil modification, and the use of fibreglas and cellulose blankets for winter green protection.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Believing in getting an early start, Keith Snelling landed in men's tenpin circle as first winner of Times - sponsored "Bowler-of-the-Week" competition. Keith bowled flashy 213-223-203—639 series in Friday Niters League at Mayfair Lanes, where he serves as assistant manager.

Dutch Golfer Leading

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Holland's Martinus Roesink shot a 65 Tuesday to take a stroke lead over Robert Shaw in the American Professional Golfers's qualifying school tournament.

Roesink has a four-round total of 291 at the midway point of the 144-hole tournament. Shaw came in with a 72 Tuesday.

Ross Randall held down third place with a 73 Tuesday and a 294 total, followed by Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver and Curtis Sifford at 298. Vollmer had a 72 Tuesday.

The results of two other B.C. golfers — Bill Wakeham of Victoria and Vancouver's Bob Cox — were unavailable.

Meanwhile, at Palm Beach Gardens, Grier Jones, with a tour player's card already nailed down, shot a par 72 day to maintain his over-all lead in the Professional Golfers Association's 144-hole, two-part qualifying tournament for rookies.

Jones, of Wichita, Kan., had a 90-hole total of 357, good for a three-stroke edge over Jim Hardy of Waukegan, Ill.

The PGA school at Palm Beach Gardens is being run separately from the APG class in Miami.

Room For Fans On O'Keefe Bus

Limited seating is available for fans wishing to accompany Victoria O'Keefes to Vancouver for Sunday's Pacific Coast Soccer League game with Columbus.

The players' bus will leave Sunday morning and return early in the evening. Fans interested must contact manager Jack Metcalfe (384-9854) or Jack Evans (477-1721).

Pin-Holders Click

Pete McIntyre and Bob Anderson of Victoria Golf Club were successful in their first defence of the senior buttons, defeating Royal Colwood's Don Ross and Harry Pike on the 16th hole of their match at Uplands.

Fast-Shooting Salmonbellies Riddle Detroit

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—New Westminster Salmonbellies went on a shooting spree Tuesday night to defeat Detroit Olympics 23-15 in the third game of the National Lacrosse Association final.

New Westminster's 73 shots, most fired by a Western Division team this year, earned them a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven final. Fourth game will be played here Thursday night.

Salmonbellies took advantage of porous goaltending and were up 8-3 after one period before 2,200 fans. They kept up the pace for a 19-8 second-period lead, then coasted home.

"The boys played so well in the first 35 minutes I can't really blame them for taking it easy," said playing coach Cliff Sepka who scored four goals.

Detroit coach Jim Bishop just said the series isn't over.

FIVE FOR ODDY

Ken Oddy contributed five goals for New Westminster and Sepka added three assists to his four goals. Larry Henry followed with three goals and two assists in the assault on goalie Merv Marshall.

Paul Parnell scored two goals and set up six. Ray Bennie and Dave Tory each scored two. Single goals came from Al Lewthwaite, Mac Tyler, Wayne Goss, Ed Goss and Wayne Shuttleworth—another six-assist man.

Salmonbellies limited superstar Gaylord Powless of Detroit to three goals and two assists.

Kings' Third-Period Surge Clips Nationals

WINNIPEG (CP) — Defenceman Dale Rolfe and forward Ted Irvine scored in the third period Tuesday night to give Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League a 2-1 victory over Canada's National team in an exhibition game.

Ted Hargreaves opened scoring for Canada in the first period on a good second effort by slapping in his own rebound while sprawled on the ice.

Kings, who appeared off balance in the opening period, pulled together and held out through a fast, hard-checking and scoreless second period before Rolfe tied the game and Irvine added the winner in the final frame.

Nationals pulled goalie Wayne Stephenson with 49 seconds remaining but were unable to score.

Irish Wonder Horse Retires From Racing

LONDON (AP) — Arkle, acclaimed as the world's greatest steeplechaser, will never race again.

He has been retired to the Irish estate in County Kildare of his owner, Ann, Duchess of Westminster.

Ireland's wonder horse won 27 of his 35 races and earned $210,000 in prize money.

Mountain Goes South

MEXICO CITY (CP) — The International Olympic Committee can't go to the mountain so an energetic group of Vancouver promoters is bringing the mountain several thousand miles to the IOC.

En route here, to be shown to the men who will decide upon the site of the 1976 Winter Games, is a model four feet by eight feet of Whistler Mountain, the site proposed by Canada.

Besides the visual presentations, IOC delegates will be told that the British Columbia government is committed to improving the 40-mile Vancouver-to-Garibaldi Road up to Trans-Canada Highway specifications.

"The Pacific Great Eastern Railway is committed to putting in all the sidings necessary to handle 20,000 passengers in 3½ hours and returning them the same day," said Sid Young, one of the delegates.

"If that isn't enough, the provincial government has said it will build an alternate road through Haney, B.C., and Pemberton to provide a belt route."

Young lists capital requirements at $130,000,000, financed on three levels of government. Plans show a 20,000-seat arena with three ice sheets which could be taken apart after the Games and sold to four different communities.

"One of our best arguments is for the advantages of a compact site," Young said. "And our plans show how we will house 10,000 people within a two-mile radius."

The Young delegation was the first on the scene of the 1968 Olympic Games here, but a Montreal group was expected shortly afterward to press Canada's bid for the 1976 Summer Games to be held there.

Maloney Helps Rout Runners

VANCOUVER (CP) — Led by rookies John Gofton and Gerry Sillers and 41-year-old Phil Maloney, Vancouver Canucks opened the Western Hockey League season Tuesday night by trouncing Phoenix Roadrunners 6-1, at Pacific Coliseum.

A crowd of 5,108 fans watched as Maloney, playing in his 21st professional season, got the Canucks away fast by setting up the first four goals, all by his rookie wingers in the first period.

Sillers scored the first two goals after Bob Charlebois had given Roadrunners an early lead.

Bob Barlow scored the only goal of the second period and Ken Block finished off the scoring late in the final 20 minutes.

Canucks, who yesterday announced they had been strengthened by acquisition of former-NHL star Andy Bathgate, dominated play throughout.

They took 47 shots at Rick Charron, who proved quite a stumbling block after the first period, while Roadrunners managed only 26 shots, 13 in the second period, against George Gardner.

FIGHT RESULTS

TOKYO—Elcido Salabaria, 113, Philippines, outpointed Speedy Hayase, 112, Japan, 10.

TAMPA, Fla.—Cleveland Williams, 217, Houston, stopped Moe Harrell, 198, St. Petersburg, Fla., 2.

PAIR BARRED FOR LIFE FROM HARNESS TRACKS

OTTAWA (CP) — Rideau Carleton Raceway has slapped life suspensions from the track on two men and barred three others for one-year terms.

A report following the investigation carried out at the track by officials of the Canadian Trotting Association, the Ontario Racing Commission and track official also recommended that the suspensions be honored at all Canadian and United States tracks.

Hit with the lifetime suspensions were Germain Lemay of Montreal, operator of Lemay Harness Racing Equipment Ltd., and John Paulin, a groom from nearby Aylmer, Que.

Given one-year suspensions were Glorian Malo, a driver from Waterloo, Que., John Brault, a Hull, Que., owner and Claude Sylvestre, a Hull trainer.

CENTRE OF ACTIVITY

In New War, Iceland on Spot

By JOHN LeBLANC

KEFLAVIK, Iceland (CP) — It's a cold war in a cold climate just below the Arctic Circle, but Iceland seethes with military activity just as warmly as the lava that bubbles beneath its volcanoes.

"In the event of war the decisive opening moves at sea would probably be in the northeast Atlantic, and Iceland would be the key," says a briefing officer of the big United States air contingent stationed at this NATO base.

The war would be with Russia, of course, and military forces of that country and the U.S. play an uninterrupted I-spy game against each other in the air and sea around Iceland.

Scarcely a day goes by that Soviet air, surface or underwater surveillance craft are not spotted by patrol planes from this base on Iceland's southwest tip. The Americans counter with constant aerial observation and fighter-interceptor planes on a five-minute alert.

Reporters who stopped off here on a flying visit to ships engaged in NATO's recent Silver Tower exercise at sea got an eye-opener at the way Iceland's role has developed since a small force of British and Canadians landed here to forestall the Nazis during the Second World War.

PRESERVE POACHED

They also got an eyebrow-lifter at the way Russian warcraft have moved in—in apparent strength—on the middle of the Atlantic, generally regarded as the private preserve of the Western countries.

A particularly striking illustration of this was a movie sequence taken from an American plane of a Russian heavy cruiser, about the size of a wartime German pocket battleship, refuelling in routine fashion from a supply ship with the Icelandic coast visible 10 or 12 miles in the background.

In the last year Keflavik-based aircraft have made 220 separate contacts with submarines, undoubtedly Russian, some identified through electronic gear as carrying ballistic missiles. The long-range Russian Bear and Badger reconnaissance planes are often seen close to Iceland, and the Bear is known to have prowled on as far as the offshore waters of Labrador.

Scores of Russian trawlers fish off Iceland. Many are equipped with radar equipment designed for more than fisheries work.

During the Silver Tower exercise to the south and east of Iceland, ships of Canada and other NATO nations were continually under close observation from Russian ships, planes and probably submarines. About 18 surface vessels were counted.

KEEP PUSHING

"There's a definite trend in Russian operations being pushed out greater distances from their shores as they get more and more sophisticated equipment," says Rear Admiral Frank B. Stone, the U.S. Navy commander of NATO's Iceland defence force.

"People in North America would be a little more excited if they knew what the Russians were up to out here," says Capt. Giles Kelly, USN, head of the Silver Tower public relations setup.

Iceland is about 2,500 air miles from Russia, but its position on the map gives it considerably more strategic importance than this suggests. It is astride the sea lanes that the Russian fleet would have to burst through to get into the Atlantic, and it also is on the great-circle route between Europe and North America.

To meet contingencies both ways, the NATO force here is equipped with both anti-submarine planes and fighter-interceptors to take care of air aggressors.

The U.S. Navy's anti-sub patrol plane, the P-3 Orion, is described as its last word in underwater-ship hunters. It flies at 400 miles an hour with a radius of 1,500 miles and the navy says it has "the most effective airborne electronic, sonic and magnetic equipment ever developed."

GAGNON

. . . fills Quebec gap

Bicultural Chairman Named

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean-Louis Gagnon, former managing editor of the Montreal French-language newspaper, La Presse, will replace Andre Laurendeau as co-chairman of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

Announcement of the appointment was made in the Commons Tuesday by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Gagnon, 55, has been serving as a member of the 10-member commission. The other co-chairman is A. Davidson Dunton, president of Ottawa's Carleton University.

The commission has been without a French-speaking co-chairman, since Mr. Laurendeau, editor-in-chief of Montreal Le Devoir, died last spring.

Added to the commission to take Mr. Gagnon's place is Prof. Andre Raynauld, 40, head of the University of Montreal's economics department for nine years until 1967, who has been on leave of absence with the federal finance department.

Mr. Trudeau's announcement was made in response to a question by George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings). Answering a question by Robert Thompson (PC—Red Deer), the prime minister said the commission is continuing its work under the original terms of reference.

World Opinion Shifts to Us, Claims Biafra

By CHARLES TAYLOR
Special to the Times

UMUAHIA, Biafra — World opinion has taken a turn in favor of Biafra, Lt.-Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu, the Biafran head of state, said here on the weekend.

With advances on the battlefield, and more weapons and relief supplies coming through the Nigerian blockade, Biafra's situation was "difficult, but not impossible," Col. Ojukwu added at his first press conference since July. The bearded Biafran leader came straight to the conference from the northern front, where he watched the launching of a Biafran counter-attack to regain the key town of Okigwe less than 40 miles from the capital.

Obviously tired, but apparently in good health, he paused only to change from his camouflaged battle dress into a brown civilian tunic before meeting the press.

COMMON PEOPLE

Talking slowly and softly, he said that common people around the world have recognized the injuries that Biafrans have suffered and are suffering.

"Certain governments not favoring us physically have indicated they are sympathetic," he added.

Asked about the possibility of diplomatic recognition from France, he said that "probably the answer is slightly balanced against recognition at this time" but added that if Biafra's military situation showed a significant improvement in the next six weeks or two months the possibility of French recognition would be enhanced.

In describing Biafra's situation as "difficult, but not impossible," the 34-year-old head of state was at pains not to sound too optimistic, nor to under-estimate the sheer weight of Nigerian troops and Nigerian weapons that are pressing hard on all sides of this gravely shrunken state.

HOPEFUL FACTORS

But he cited the following hopeful factors: "Recent advances in the field, our ability to stave off the enemy's thrust, the knowledge of a certain capacity which could be brought to bear in any emergency, and a feeling one could turn the tables."

While more and more arms and ammunition were being flown to Biafra over the Nigerian blockade, they fell far short of the nation's needs.

"I'm still scouring the face of the earth, trying to get anything I can lay my hands on," Col. Ojukwu said.

Biafra's main needs were infantry weapons, specialized artillery, engineering equipment, much stronger aircraft defense and "a firmer answer" to the British ferret and saladin armored cars.

Manpower was no problem. Biafra had never had less than 50,000 troops in the field and "if I want 100,000 troops today, I only have to say the word and within 72 hours, I will have them."

If Biafra had sufficient weapons, it could probably put three times as many troops in the field as at present, he added.

Col. Ojukwu said that Biafra needed a great deal more relief supplies of food and medicine to relieve the plight of the starving refugees.

"But the relief situation has improved to such an extent that each of the airfields available to Biafra handles more than any other airfield in Africa, barring Johannesburg," he added.

Speaking gently, and more in sorrow than in anger, Col. Ojukwu dismissed the statements of British, Canadian and other foreign observers on the Nigerian side of the battle lines.

NOT SO INEPT

He did not think that Lagos was so inept as to take the observers to the scenes of genocide. Repeating his call for observers also to visit the Biafran side, he said "if anyone wants to see the facts of the matter, since we are the ones who are suffering, it would be probably more logical to look at the situation from the receiving end."

Col. Ojukwu said he hoped that "at least some" of the heads of state to which he appealed last week under the United Nations genocide convention would react.

While he was not satisfied with the response so far, it was too early to expect much official reaction, and he detected "a turn in world sympathy in favor of Biafra."

Two Men, Five Women Hope to Agree by '69

By ROSEMARY SPEIRS

OTTAWA (CP)—The royal commission on the status of women settles down now to preparing its report after a week of national hearings in Ottawa where Canada's labor policies and jails for women were main targets.

Commission Chairman Anne Francis, 50, says she expects to hand her report to the government sometime next year.

In the meantime the two men and five women commissioners will have to hammer out agreement on a flood of recommendations gathered during cross-country hearings that began in Victoria on April 15.

The Ottawa hearings brought severe criticism of the federal labor department's women's bureau, responsible for administration of the female equal pay act.

Both the Canadian Labor Congress and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Canada's largest union, complained to the commission that the bureau is understaffed and inadequate for the tricky job of policing the legislation.

CALLS IT A SOP

Stan Little, president of CUPE, termed the bureau a "sop to women," echoing Mrs. Jock Findlay, former director of the bureau, who during an interview early in the week said that as director she had been put in a "figurehead" position.

The women's bureau, which employed only a stenographer and a clerk, has been without a director since Mrs. Findlay resigned in February. But George Haythorne, deputy minister of labor, promised announcement of a new director next week and said the staff of the bureau will be increased.

The promises didn't satisfy the Canadian Labor Congress, whose president, Donald MacDonald, called for a fair employment commission to "forcibly and immediately" eliminate discrimination against women on the job.

He wanted a large staff of investigators attached to the proposed commission to police the equal pay act. And he wanted changes in the act that would make it difficult for employers to find loopholes for refusing to pay equal wages.

REVIEWS POLICIES

Labor also gave a going-over to its own policies toward women unionists during the week, after Mr. Little led the way with his acknowledgement that females are discriminated against in all sections of the labor movement.

Mr. Little pointed out that although 25 labor organizations in Canada have a majority of female members, their parent body, the CLC, has never had more than one woman on its 30-member executive council.

The CLC also got a scorching from its own vice-president Huguette Plamondon, who told the commissioners "too often women workers are neglected when a labor agreement is negotiated.

"Organized labor has done the biggest job around to improve the lot of women but it is not doing the job it should be," she said.

DISCUSS CORRECTIONS

Although the usual topics, of day-care centres, abortion, divorce, birth control and women in politics proved just as popular in Ottawa as they were across the country, special attention was directed to the plight of female offenders before the law.

Both the Canadian Corrections Association and the Ontario Elizabeth Fry Societies asked for removal from the Criminal Code of vagrancy sections which empower police to pick up and charge prostitutes or homeless persons found wandering.

The voluntary organizations asked for greater use of probation and treatment in place of jail sentences for women offenders, most of whose crimes were the self-destructive type such as alcoholism and drug addition and not violently harmful to society.

In a strongly worded 56-page brief, the corrections association said police should stop giving an arrested woman "the impression she is no longer a woman."

SHOE-SHINE STUDENT PLACED ON PROBATION

VANCOUVER (CP) — An 18-year-old student who was ordered to clean a policeman's shoes while in custody was placed on 18 months probation when he appeared in magistrate's court Monday for sentencing on a car theft charge.

During the hearing of Donn Earl Doe, Constable Harvey David Funk testified he ordered Doe to clean his boots after arresting him.

John Fisk, deputy Vancouver police chief, said later the incident had been investigated and no disciplinary action was planned.

He said the youth had asked for a piece of paper to clean mud from his shoes and the officer commented that the youth should also clean his shoes.

'Countries' Of Alberta, Quebec—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau inadvertently referred to Quebec and Alberta as "these countries" Tuesday in a slip that drew a roar of laughter in the Commons.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Stanfield, who had asked whether the federal-provincial conference on the constitution will be held before Christmas.

Trudeau said he had written a few days ago to provincial premiers telling them most had agreed to a date in early December for the talks, possibly Dec. 8-9.

He added that he wrote slightly different letters to the premiers of Alberta and Quebec "in view of recent developments in those countries."

Amid the laughter, a Conservative MP shouted that he would check the Hansard record of the debate to see whether the slip was corrected.

"For some of you country boys, I think this should be a bit welcome," Trudeau said, referring to the way MPs edit such slips from the record. "I don't correct Hansard but some of you do."

Trudeau wrote to the premiers in early September to set up a date for a constitutional conference.

Since then, however, the death of Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec and the announcement by Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta that he will retire as provincial Social Credit leader have changed the situation.

3 JUVENILES CRASH PILOTLESS PLANE

SWAN RIVER, Man. (CP)—Police in this community 230 miles northwest of Winnipeg said Tuesday three juveniles stole a plane at the local flying club and taxied it down a runway before jumping out.

The $2,400 aircraft took off by itself and flew two miles before crashing in a field south of the community.

The police said, however, that no charges have been laid.

Air Merger Not Considered At Present, Says Prober

OTTAWA (CP) — A merger of Air Canada and Canadian Pacific Airlines remains a future possibility but "is not under active consideraton" at present, James Richardson, Minister without portfolio, told the Commons Tuesday.

A special government committee under Mr. Richardson has been set up by Prime Minister Trudeau to make recommendations about the future of Air Canada, a Crown corporation.

John Diefenbaker, former Conservative prime minister, said Mr. Richardson believed in June that Air Canada and Canadian Pacific should join together. Did he still believe it?

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled the question out of order, saying it is improper to ask a minister whether he has changed his views.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked whether Mr. Richardson's group has received any evidence favoring a merger or heard any urgings that it take place.

MANY PLANS AHEAD

Mr. Richardson said a merger is one "of many alternatives that exist."

The Richardson inquiry group has actually been ordered to review all Canadian air transport policies. But the future of Air Canada is the first subject on its agenda.

There is said to be considerable cabinet sentiment in favor of issuing Air Canada stock for sale to the public and letting the company go its own way in the business world.

The ultimate question facing the group, which has to suggest policy to the Trudeau cabinet, is whether there is enough air traffic within Canada, and to and from Canada, for two major air lines.

Canadian Pacific Airlines is an intergral part of the huge, privately-owned Canadian Pacific transportation system. A pioneer carrier across the Pacific, it has only recently been allowed to enter the transcontinental field in Canada.

Panther Convicted

SEATTLE (AP) — Curtis Harris, a leader in the militant Black Panther organization, was convicted Tuesday of threatening to kill a police officer. Judge James Noe set sentencing for Oct. 18. He also turned down Harris' attempt to file a complaint against police officers who arrested him on the charge, but dismissed a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

8,000 AUSTRALIANS FIGHTING IN VIETNAM

SAIGON (Reuters) — Australia's fighting force in Vietnam has mushroomed from 100 advisers six years ago to nearly 8,000 battle-hardened troops.

New Zealand, the only other Commonwealth country in the war, has 550 men under arms there—from an initial commitment of an artillery battery in mid-1965.

More than half of the Commonwealth troops in Vietnam are based at a former French rubber plantation cut out of steaming jungle about 45 miles southeast of Saigon.

This base, at Nui Dat in Phuoc Tuy province, houses New Zealand's two infantry companies and an artillery battery which are integrated with the 4,000-strong 1st Australian Task Force.

New Zealand's tough infantrymen, gunners and support troops, are all regular soldiers. The Australian task force is made up of national servicemen and regulars.

SCOUR THE BUSH

From the Nui Dat base Australians and New Zealanders—working independently of Americans—scour the surrounding jungle and swampland for Viet Cong guerrillas.

Sometimes they venture from Phuoc Tuy province—their tactical area of responsibility—into the adjacent Bien Hoa province in operations with U.S. and South Vietnamese forces.

Besides the military aspect, the Commonwealth troops also run a civic action program in which soldiers build schools and market places for peasants.

The Australian force also has a team that works in small groups scattered throughout the country to advise the South Vietnamese in military and other matters.

Backing up the military effort are four civilian surgical teams from Australia tending to the medical and dental needs of the South Vietnamese.

RUNS SUPPLIES

About 15 miles south of Nui Dat the first Australian logistics support group runs supply and communications operations on the coast.

The Australian task force relies on air support from two Australian Air Force squadrons.

From Phan Rang, 270 miles northeast of Saigon, Australian pilots fly Canberra jet bombers in day and night bombing raids over South Vietnam, but they never venture into North Vietnam.

Australian Navy pilots operate as part of an American helicopter assault company at the U.S. Bearcat Base, 40 miles east of Saigon.

Australia always has a guided missile destroyer—either the Hobart or Perth—in Vietnamese waters under the command of the U.S. 7th Fleet.

Trustees Accept Formula

By DON VIPOND
Staff Reporter

VANCOUVER — School trustees appear ready to watch the government's new school operating grants formula for a year before taking a stand on it.

They solidly defeated a resolution at their annual meeting here Tuesday which would have urged the government to amend it to give more money to school districts with a history of higher costs.

The formula provides for a basic operating grant based in part on the average costs across the province. In presenting the motion, the association's executive argued it does not allow for district differences in academic standards, population characteristics, geographic features, location and size.

A lengthy debate produced a vote of 226 opposed and 71 in favor of the resolution.

But in a paradoxical move, trustees made it clear they aren't happy with the supply of funds to meet education needs.

They approved a resolution which urged Education Minister Donald Brothers to amend the Public Schools Act so school districts determine operating expenses "on the basis of local educational requirements."

EQUAL PAY

Debate on a total of 44 resolutions concluded Tuesday afternoon.

One of those approved was a joint submission from the Saanich and Lake Cowichan school boards which called for equal pay for all trustees.

At present trustees' pay ranges from $300 to $2,000 annually, depending on the number of pupils in their district.

Those in favor of equal pay argued trustees in a small school district carry just as much responsibility as those in a large one. In fact they frequently took on extra tasks which could not be handled by a small administrative office. The convention agreed.

A Nanaimo resolution which called for dedication for public use of "reasonable portions" of land in new subdivisions also gained favor after being amended to include row housing and apartment house projects.

This is the practice in Ontario where developers must contribute land for school sites and parks.

In approving the idea, trustees sent the resolution to their executive to prepare for a brief on the subject.

A Sooke resolution calling for an increase in federal grants of $250 paid on behalf of pupils living on federal land was also passed. The fee was originally equivalent to the school district's share of the education cost of a pupil but it isn't anymore, Sooke trustees argued.

BOARDING GRANT

One of the hottest debates of the day centred around a resolution which asked government authority for school boards to give additional boarding allowances to parents of students who have to live away from home.

At present boarding allowances are conditional on attendance at a public school and this presents the problem of finding private boarding accommodation.

The proposed change would allow the boarding allowance to be paid where the pupil attended a private school offering boarding accommodation.

Some trustees argued this was subsidizing private schools but they were silenced by an impassioned plea from association vice-president James Campbell of Saturna Island.

The resolution related to difficulties facing parents of just a handful of young people living in isolated locations, he said.

"There are cases where children are being denied anything but a correspondence education," he said. "This is cruel.

"The cost is minimal, the benefits immeasureable and if you have any heart for God's sake approve this resolution."

The trustees did.

Re-examination Of Doctors To Be Studied

KELOWNA (CP) The British Columbia Medical Association Tuesday passed a resolution to "explore the measure of competency" of doctors.

The association's annual convention took the action after Dr. R. W. Bell-Irving of West Vancouver said that "the day of the doctor for all time is almost over."

In an interview later, he said doctors already are subject to strict standards, particularly in their hospital practice, but formal re-examination of qualifications is inevitable because taxpayers will want to be assured their doctors are keeping up with current trends.

He said the states of New York and Oregon already have legislation along the lines of the conditional licences, subject to re-examination, that he forecast for B.C.

CONTESTING Ontario NDP leadership at Kitchener convention Nov. 15-17 will be James Renwick, national president of the party. He will seek to dislodge present leader Donald MacDonald who has led the party from two members elected to 20. Mr. Renwick, 52, is a former corporation lawyer. He is now deputy leader, representing Toronto Riverdale.

More than 1,000,000 new homes have been built in Great Britain since the Labor government took office in October, 1964.

St. Joseph's Hospital Bids Sister Farewell

By PAT DUFOUR

St. Joseph's Hospital witnessed the passing of an era recently when Sister Mary Gregory walked through its corridors on her last tour of duty. For the past 53 years Sister Mary Gregory has been one of the pivots around which hospital life has generated.

Today she rests at Mount St. Angela, not far from the hospital in which she's served in one capacity or another since she was professed as a Sister of St. Ann in 1915.

The well-known Sister now "either 83 or 84" is reluctant to talk of herself but thousands of graduate nurses, who came to know her warmth and understanding when she was director of the hospital's school of nursing, bear witness to the qualities that endeared her to them.

Pressed to speak of herself, Sister Mary Gregory will admit that it was the students that gave her the greatest joy during her years at the hospital. "It was hard work, we never had sufficient staff, but it was well worth-while."

Relaxing a little more she will tell you of the nights that she waited up for students, with all the concern of a mother. "We were responsible to their families for them, and when there was no-one else to do it, I'd wait until they were all in."

The students themselves must have appreciated her solicitude. Many of her graduates have in turn sent their daughters to be enrolled in the school, to be counselled by the Sister who they grew to know as a friend.

Sister Mary Gregory, who was director from 1928 to 1949 and from 1951 until 1954 is herself a graduate of the school. The two years between her tour of service as director were spent at Milwaukee where she earned her bachelor of science in nursing.

It was Sister Mary Gregory who, together with Dr. Higgins, set up the hospital's original X-Ray department. She becamse a registered technican, and later started the X-Ray school, which she ran until 1926.

The versatile Sister, in later years, has been in charge of the hospital's medical library. And, although her working days will no longer be spent within its walls, those using the library will be perpetually reminded of the Sister who directed it for so long. In her honor it has been named the Sister Mary Gregory Medical Library.

Although records prove that Sister Mary Gregory has well earned an opportunity for rest, she is the last to consider herself in this category.

What will she do now?

Quietly she will tell you, "It's not for me to decide. My superiors will know how I will best serve in the future."

Kiwaniannes Hold Party At the Bay

President Mrs. Len Matthews presided at the head table when the Saanich Kiwaniannes held a coffee party Tuesday in the Douglas Room of the Bay.

The buffet table was centred by the blue and gold Kiwanis symbol surrounded by an arrangement of heather, hydrangea and assorted yellow flowers.

Smaller arrangements of yellow flowers centred individual tables and the bake table.

The affair was convened by Mrs. George Etherington, assisted by Mrs. Lou Sutton and Mrs. Harold McGregor.

Mrs. Hugh Neuman and Mrs. Ernie Coleman worked at the home-baking stall which featured breads and rolls as well as pumpkin pies, cookies and tarts.

Mrs. W. Plumpton was in charge of the tickets, assisted by Mrs. R. Knight.

The group's social convener, Mrs. Doug Hobbs led the kitchen detail which kept the buffet table filled with open-face sandwiches and slices of dessert breads.

A door prize of a brushed aluminum cake keeper filled with a layer cake was offered.

The proceeds which amounted to approximately $200 will be used to help crippled children.

Celebrate Founder's Day

Arbutus Toastmistress Club observed Founders Day at its recent meeting held at The Inn. Mrs. A. M. Clarkson gave a short talk on the early history of International Toastmistress Clubs Corporation, and a candle-lighting ceremony was conducted by toastmistress for the evening, Mrs. G. L. Cook.

Others taking part in the ceremony were Mrs. H. Winstone, Mrs. A. D. Wilmot, Mrs. C. C. Warren and Mrs. D. E. Pite.

Mrs. Warren gave a talk on "What Toastmistress can do for Women."

General evaluator, Mrs. Clarkson, awarded the spur to Mrs. Pite and the oscar to Mrs. Cook. Topic mistress Mrs. G. H. Love gave a brief talk and instructed the next person called to begin her talk with the last word she had spoken, each member in turn continuing in this fashion. Mrs. L. R. Hammett who evaluated the topic session commended Mrs. Love for this unusual presentation.

Guests welcomed by the president included Mrs. Ralph Newstead, Mrs. Janey Wright, Mrs. D. A. Shaw, Mrs. John Hvozdanski, Mrs. Michael Mason, Mrs. Joseph Baur, Mrs. H. E. Ker, Mrs. W. E. Enoch, Misss Brenda Sheena, Miss Georgian Pointe and Mrs. Florence Price, as well as the honor guest, Mrs. Warren. It was announced that six of the guests were applying for membership in the club.

Princess Anne Developing New Look

By MARIS ROSS

LONDON (UPI) — Mothers who advise their daughters on what to wear would do well to take a lesson from Queen Elizabeth II.

The case in point is Princess Anne, her 18-year-old daughter.

Poor Princess Anne had to listen to a long list of royal regulations from her mother and the ladies of the court circle.

". . . wear off-the-face hats, dear, so the crowds get a good look at your . . . short skirts are unseemly when people see you climbing in and out of cars . . . shoes have got to be sensible, or your feet will hurt . . . have a big handbag to hold everything . . . fur stoles are the usual thing for the evening."

Result: Princess Anne is accused of wearing matronly clothes, of lacking dress sense, of looking like her mother.

But the huge contrast between her matronly clothes and some of her latest outfits shows she does have dress sense when she is allowed to dress the way she wants to, as a teen-ager who likes mini-skirts and fun accessories.

If she does not break clean away from the royal way of dressing, it won't be for lack of criticism by the press. Their last go-round was on her eighteenth birthday in August.

Princess Anne probably felt rather hurt if she read the New York women's wear daily. It said:

"She's 18 today and nobody thinks she's a pretty girl . . . if I were her mother the first thing I'd do is slim her down . . . she tries to look modern but she doesn't know how."

The article quoted "a royal observer" as saying she needed six months' training from the American-born Duchess of Windsor, her aunt by marriage. The Duchess is 72.

To that, one of the Fleet Street women's editors, Jean Rook of the Daily Sketch, replied: "I personally don't want Anne to look like the immaculate, superbly tasteful, miraculously preserved, unchanging-as-the-rock-of-ages Duchess of Windsor. For me, they can keep wonderful Wally, whom I'd love to see caught off guard in a high wind."

Ann Ryan of the Daily Express suggested she take a few leads from two royal ladies who are younger and nearer home, Princess Alexandra, 31, and the Duchess of Kent, 35.

"I wish," said Miss Ryan, "that her advisers would stop putting her into clothes that add 10 years or more to her age.

"Every time I've looked at a picture of her in those matronly evening dresses with fur stoles, those shapeless coats and suits accessorized with mum-ish shoes, hats and huge carry-all bags, not to mention elbow gloves, my heart-has bled."

The world seems to be getting through to princess Anne.

Since her birthday, she has not been seen much in public because the royal family was taking a long summer vacation at Balmoral castle in the Scottish highlands.

But on a visit to the local church one Sunday, she was spotted wearing a neat, young-style suit with one of the shortest skirts she has appeared in.

Instead of one of those "off the face" royal hats, she had a white bubble hat with a peak pulled jauntily down, the way modern girls wear them.

At a recent dance, she had a flattering full-length gown that was also gay and young, cut simply with a U-neck, high waist and long sleeves, uncluttered by embroidery or frills.

Some of the worst pictures of princess Anne have shown her wearing jeans and jumper, with hair all over the place, while following her favorite pass-time of horse-back riding.

All that is changing as well. She belongs to a team of riders who perform a dressage display called the quadrille. For that they dress up in 18th-century costume — white wig, frock coat, satin breeches, lace cuffs, the lot.

Most mothers, of any age, now can know the thrill of a 2nd Debut by letting an amazing discovery lift their faces out of the aging maze of lines and wrinkles at home the new easy way. It's the Wiesbaden Discovery called CEF 600 and 1200 double strength blended into the new skin lotion called 2nd Debut. Moisture is carried under the wrinkled skin layers to push up and out. Once again skin is smooth, soft and so much younger looking most mothers call it a 2nd Debut. Most drug and department stores feature 2nd Debut. Results are almost immediate.

Penny Prepares For Turkey Feast

By PENNY SAVER

Thanksgiving doesn't loom as large as other holidays. Children begin counting the days to Christmas almost as soon as Easter is over. Easter never catches one by surprise. Even Halloween, which doesn't rate a day off from school, is awaited with baited breath. Yet I have to write memos to remind myself Thanksgiving is on the way. One year, in fact, I forgot so completely that I roused my family early on Thanksgiving morning only to be told somewhat grumpily that they didn't have to go to school. It seems to me one reason for my forgetfulness is that we don't share this holiday with our neighbors to the south. Consequently, there are no reminders sandwiched between my favorite television shows. I hate to admit that these things influence me, but they do.

This year, as you can see, I have reminded myself of Thanksgiving well in advance. I have bought my self a device for lifting turkeys and roasts and promised it will make its debut on Monday. I can hardly wait. It consists of two rack-like pieces held together by a long skewer. The handles wrap around the meat and are used for lifting. The turkey or roast is placed on the rack when it is ready for cooking then the rack is wrapped around it securely. The skewer lets you adjust the size of the device for different sizes of roast. It also lets you take the rack apart and remove it from around the meat after it is safely on the platter. This device costs $2.25.

Aspic Decorations Cut Like Cookies

Some women have a knack for setting a fancy table. I don't. Whenever I go to parties at places where the hostess has this attribute, I drool with envy. Why, even their tossed salads are more attractive than mine. One thing that has always puzzled me is how they make the fancy shapes that often decorate moulded aspics or top hors d'oeuvres. It wasn't until my friend Gladys served an aspic decorated this way that I gained courage to ask how the decorations were made. The secret was a set of metal cutters, much like cookie cutters but on a smaller scale. A set of 12 shapes in a metal storage box is $2.25. The cutter shapes include geometric shapes such as circles and triangles, a leaf shape, crescents, a ruffled square and a pointed oval as well as the symbols for the four suits of playing cards, spade, heart, diamond and club.

No matter which came first, the chicken or the egg, I look at the egg-cup first. When I went to a friend's house for coffee one morning her egg-cups screamed for attention among the still-unwashed breakfast dishes. They were the low, wide kind of egg-cup that even the most haphazard egg-eater cannot knock over. The base is shaped ever-so-slightly toward a pedestal and the sides of the cup itself are round and smooth. The designer chose wood for his medium and an oil finish that shows up the grain to perfection. The result is a practical and modern egg-cup. A set of four is $2.35.

COOKING CAN BE FUN By MARY MOORE

Mousse for a Party

Moore

You girls who have pedestal cake plates will have another occasion for which to use them. Our jellied ham mousse reposed elegantly on Shirley's glass pedestal at a buffet party. Besides its beauty, the flavor was great.

File this carefully for your next party and plan to have some ham held over from a previous meal.

JELLIED HAM MOUSSE
(8-cup mould)

Two and one-half envelopes plain gelatin; ½ cup cold water; 2¾ cups boiling water; 3 chicken cubes; 3 cups diced (⅜" or ½") cooked ham; 1 cup halved green seedless (Thompson) grapes or finely chopped inner celery; ¼ cup chopped onion; ¼ cup green relish; 1 cup mayonnaise; 1 tablespoon angostura bitters; 1 teaspoon salt.

Soak gelatine in cold water five minutes. In a large saucepan add chicken cubes to boiling water and stir until dissolved. Stir in soaked gelatine until dissolved. Remove from heat, cool to room temperature and chill until slightly thickened.

Remove from refrigerator and blend in diced ham, halved grapes or chopped celery, onion, relish, mayonnaise, bitters and salt. Turn into an eight-cup mould. (An eight-cup tall mould results in an attractive tall mousse, especially on a pedestal plate.) Chill until firm.

This turns out easily onto the serving dish if you run a pointed knife around edge, immerse mould in hot water while you count steadily to five. Garnish with tomato wedges, parsley and gherkins.

It's a strange feeling a woman gets when she's changing. A sad feeling.

You might have hot flashes and chilly spells, and feel all out of kilter. It's not nice to feel you're not the woman you used to be. It can be a little frightening. And it isn't any wonder that your feelings get jumbled up.

Well, we have something for the day you need a little comforting. Lydia E. Pinkham Tablets. They're made with gentle ingredients that work to give you a better sense of well-being. A sense of well-being that you might lose when you start changing.

With an old-fashioned problem like this, couldn't you use a good old-fashioned medicine?

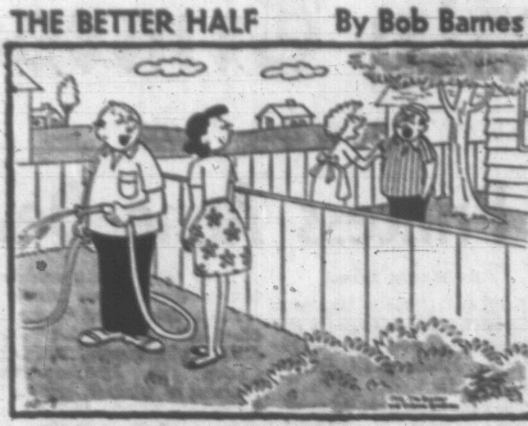
THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes



"To hear THEM talk the only mistake either of them ever made was marrying the other."

DEAR ABBY . . .

Ask for Help, But Little at a Time

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Ron and I have been married for four years. We have three small children, and I think I'm pregnant again.

Ron expects me to wash his hair, manicure his nails (fingers and toes), pick up his dirty clothes, keep the car washed and in running order, and no matter how tired I am, I have to stay up until he's ready to go to bed.

He also expects me to get up before he does so his breakfast will be on the table as soon as he opens his eyes.

I loved him when I married him, but I'm not so sure any more. I think you have the picture. What I want to know is, how do you get a man who expects so much to settle for less? —

"HAD IT" IN CHICAGO

DEAR HAD IT: Don't throw the whole book at him at once. Let him have it a page at a time. Start by telling Ron he's expecting too much. And for a wife who's not "sure" of her "love," you're expecting too often.

DEAR ABBY: This morning a young woman came to my door and said she wanted to talk to me about my husband of three weeks, who I'll call John. I invited her in, and could scarcely believe my ears.

She told me that she and John had lived together for three years, during which time she had his two children out of wedlock.

Then she said she learned only last week that John had married me, so she told him she wanted to break off with him, but he begged her not to, saying his marriage to me was the biggest mistake of his life — that we weren't getting along, and he had asked me for a divorce. (All lies.)

Abby, my whole world has fallen apart. I can't think straight. I am sure this woman is telling the truth because she knows so much about John and me, and now so many things I never understood before seem to fall into place.

Should I tell John what I know? Or should I pack up and leave without saying anything? He is so persuasive, I'm afraid he might talk me into staying. I'm all torn up inside. Please help me.

BRIDE OF THREE WEEKS

DEAR BRIDE: Tell John about your caller and give him a chance to speak his piece. If his story doesn't match hers, ask him to repeat it in her presence. If he's lying and you want to end your marriage, your chances for an annulment appear excellent.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Avoid Old Age Disabilities Through Physical Exercise

Lowman

Physical fitness is a bonus at any age. It is a necessity in order to enjoy the older years fully. Yet many people think of lack of energy, stiff joints and indigestion, as a natural part of aging.

Much of the disability of older age can be avoided with regular physical exercise. The only way to stay active is to be active. Pampering older people by waiting on them and making things extremely easy for them may be the worst thing we could do for them. They should reach and bend and stretch and walk. They should keep moving.

I am not thinking of thoughtfulness or concern, but rather of making life too easy for them physically. Muscles shrink and grow soft if they are not used. Many organs of the body function better when stimulated by exercise. Activity is beneficial to the heart and lungs and blood vessels, all of which are prime factors in health as the years pass.

Those who exercise regularly are less likely to have a heart attack or to suffer from one of the vascular diseases. If a coronary does occur, it is apt not to be so severe. Moving the joints in sensible exercise may delay or banish the threat of arthritis. Stretching exercises keep the muscles flexible. These will help you skip the muscle tightness which many older persons experience.

What if you have neglected exercise and are already middle-aged or more? You can still improve your physical fitness. You will have to start very slowly and increase your activity gradually. To do otherwise would not only be discouraging but downright dangerous, but don't give in to "Rockingchairitis"!

The following exercise will stretch the muscles of the arms and legs and will also tone the abdominal muscles. Lie on the floor on your back with your legs straight and your arms resting on the floor by your sides. Move your arms and legs out along the floor to a "spreadagle" position. Move the arms and legs back to starting position. Drag the arms and legs along the floor; do not lift them from the floor.

It isn't always the wife in the family who needs to reduce. Husbands can be overweight, too. In her booklet, "Tubby Hubby Diet," Josephine Lowman gives you helpful suggestions for making the reducing time more pleasant for both the husband and the rest of the family. For your copy, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Canada to Use Rockets to Measure Eclipse of Sun in 1970

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian scientists will use rockets launched from Nova Scotia's southeast coast to measure upper atmosphere changes during the 1970 eclipse of the sun, the National Research Council announced today.

Four Canadian-built Black Brant III rockets will be launched in a southerly direction from a site in the area of Port Dufferin. Rockets and payload of scientific instruments will come down about 45 miles to sea.

The launchings will be the first of sounding rockets fired from an eastern Canadian launch site. Other upper atmosphere research rockets are fired from NRC's research range at Churchill, Man., from Cold Lake, Alta., and from a site at Resolute on Cornwallis Island in the Canadian arctic.

The scientists want to know what happens to the atmosphere 100 miles up when the sun's radiation is cut off by the moon during the elipse March 7, 1970.

The moon will black out the sun for a 75-mile-wide path covering half Nova Scotia and extending well out to sea. The eclipse shadow will move along the east coast of the province, across Cape Breton island and on to Newfoundland.

Measurements recorded by the rockets' instrument payload will be radioed to a ground receiving and recording station at the launch site.

Dr. R. S. Rettie, head of NRC's space research facilities branch, heads a team of scientists who are in Halifax today to make arrangements for the launch site.

Work on the site will begin next summer, including installation of telephone and power lines, construction of concrete launch pads and erection of temporary building for rocket preparation, instrument checks, radio telemetry reception and launch control.

Be sure of THE VERY BEST for your

Thanksgiving

81,000 Voters Urged to Back Hospital Plan

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis today appealed to the 81,000 owner-electors in the regional district to endorse the $9.3 million Oct. 26 hospital referendum.

The referendum needs a 60 per cent majority of all votes cast to pass.

Mayor Curtis, who is also chairman of the Regional Hospital District, said passage of the referendum was essential to the well-being of all residents in the Greater Victoria area.

"Hospitals know no boundaries," Mayor Curtis added. "We must look upon the capital regional district as one hospital entity."

The regional hospital district was formed little less than a year ago and is charged with capital construction of new hospitals and the renovation and updating of existing hospitals.

"Hospitals are just too expensive for one municipality to finance," Mayor Curtis said. "Independently, member municipalities would not have the borrowing power of the larger area. As a regional district we can not only borrow more money but we can do so at lower interest rates."

Members of the regional hospital district board are Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, North Saanich, Sidney and Central Saanich.

Electoral districts represented on the board are Colwood, Langford, Metchosin, Sooke, Salt Spring Island, View Royal, Sooke and the Outer Gulf Islands.

Total population of the area comprising the district is 235,000.

'Defeat Means Delays'

Central Saanich Mayor Gordon Lee urged residents of the northern Saanich peninsula to support the 9.3 million hospital construction referendum on Oct. 26.

The mayor's appeal was unanimously endorsed by members of council.

"It will be a tragedy if the referendum is defeated," he said. "It would delay the hospital construction program for a year, perhaps more."

The mayor noted there was some opposition to the referendum because the regional hospital district board had made no commitments for the construction of a new hospital on the peninsula.

Residents in Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney petitioned the government in August for a new hospital to replace Rest Haven Hospital in Sidney.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark at the time favored the construction of a 100-bed extended care unit, plus a 50 bed acute care unit, to be built in School District 63 area.

But the board to date has refused to commit itself and has submitted no detail construction program.

"It's true the board is asking for a carte blanche to allocate the construction funds as it sees fit," said the mayor. "But my feeling is it can't ignore the need for a new hospital on the peninsula."

As the government was footing 60 per cent of the construction grants, he felt it would also have a say in the construction program.

"The minister tacitly approved the construction of a new hospital on the peninsula as a pilot scheme," he added. "I can't see him doing an about-face."

Oak Bay Delays Zone Change

A zoning change to permit an 11-storey apartment building for Oak Bay was delayed by council for two weeks Monday night.

Two councillors—Ald. Scott Wallace and Ald. Ian Horne—were absent from the meeting and a final vote was put off until they return from holidays.

The change, if passed, would permit a higher building than now permitted by the seven-storey freeze in Oak Bay. It was requested in July by developer Gordon Lovitt for a site at 1120 Beach Drive, for an 11-storey building with penthouse.

Mr. Lovitt had planned a high-rise apartment house for several years on the land, just north of the Victoria Golf Club near Deal Street.

In 1963 Oak Bay ratepayers were successful in forcing a seven-floor limit on apartment buildings into effect.

Early in September, ratepayers of the Deal Street area again told council they did not want a high building near their homes. Mr. Lovitt had already constructed another apartment building in the area about six years ago.

Council has delayed a final vote on the zoning change since the public hearing a month ago, waiting until every member is present. Mayor Fred Hawes three months ago said he would like to see the building constructed to help broaden Oak Bay's tax base.

Liz Taylor Has Las Vegas Shipped Over to Paris

By BOB THOMAS

PARIS (AP) — Why would an American film company come to Paris to make a movie about Las Vegas?

"To please the lady," explains director George Stevens.

When the lady in question is Elizabeth Taylor, you can understand why 20th Century-Fox is anxious to please her. Besides paying $2,000,000 for her services, the company sent Stevens, producer Fred Kohlmar and various technicians to film The Only Game in Town at the Boulogne studios here.

French technicians have erected a reproduction of a Las Vegas motel on a movie stage. In the background is an amazingly accurate miniature of the Vegas Strip, with casino signs glittering in neon.

Kohlmar explained the essential reason for filming here:

TAXES WILL BE LESS

"Elizabeth has the peculiarity of not wanting to leave her husband. And since he is making a film (The Staircase) in Paris, she wants to be here. So we shoot in Paris."

A further reason may be to avoid American taxes. Kohlmar said the matter never came up. Miss Taylor will join the company for three weeks of filming in the real Las Vegas, but that may not affect her tax status.

To add to Miss Taylor's pleasure, Fox has decorated her studio dressing room at a reported cost of $30,000. The same was done to please her co-star, Frank Sinatra. But when Miss Taylor's recent operation delayed the start of the film, Sinatra bowed out. His replacement was Warren Beatty.

The withdrawal of Sinatra from The Only Game in Town prevented a confrontation that Hollywood had been anticipating with relish. Sinatra is known to some of his fellow workers as "one-take Charlie," being notoriously impatient with repeating his dialogue. Stevens is among the most meticulous of directors and has been known to order 30 or more takes of the same scene.

HAPPY WITH BEATTY

"I didn't expect any problems with Frank," said Stevens. "He is aware of his responsibilities and was prepared to do three, four or five takes or whatever was necessary. But listen—I'm not fond of a lot of takes myself."

The director expressed disappointment at Sinatra's withdrawal, but was delighted that Beatty chose The Only Game in Town for his first film since Bonnie and Clyde. Beatty himself is a strong-minded actor, and some observers are expecting sparks between him and the no-nonsense Stevens.

But no difficulty is anticipated between Miss Taylor and Stevens, who directed her in two of her best films, A Place in the Sun and Giant.

BRITISH movie star David Hemmings doesn't believe he is an example of the modern youth. Hemmings, who skyrocketed to fame in Blow Up is currently starring in Charge of the Light Brigade and says that his ideal is the Renaissance man.

Schools Without Votes?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia School Trustees Association Tuesday asked the provincial government to end the requirement for municipal referendums for school capital costs.

In a resolution adopted by a large majority, the association asked the government to amend the Public Schools Act to provide that approved shareable capital expenditures be permitted without referendums.

The association also asked Premier W. A. C. Bennett to reverse his decision exempting from taxation B.C. Hydro and Power Authority property on the Peace and Columbia River systems.

Trustees passed resolutions calling for increased grants for school bus transportation.

A school building system of pre-fabricated, interchangeable components including structure, air conditioning, partitions and lighting drew tentative approval.

Delegates voted to ask the government to continue and expand a study being made by a University of B.C. architecture professor on new methods in school construction.

At a seminar delegates were told that under an integrated school building system, units could be produced to specifications and used anywhere in Canada.

Court Precedent

MELBOURNE (AP) — A jury acquitted 21-year-old Australian laborer Edward Hannell of a murder charge on ground of insanity today after a psychiatrist testified that the man had an abnormal chromosome in his body cells.

A legal expert said it was the first time chromosome abnormality was used in a defence argument in an Australian court.

Quads Die

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters) — Quadruplets, two boys and two girls, born to the wife of an unemployed Argentine worker Monday, died during the night, six hours after birth, it was announced Tuesday.

Aging Ship Towed Safely to Port

TREPASSEY, Nfld. (CP) — The Clyde Valley, once a gun-runner for Northern Ireland, was towed safely to port here early today by a fishing dragger and a Canadian coast guard ship.

The 82-year-old vessel, headed for Belfast to become a floating museum when her engines quit Tuesday off Cape Race, Nfld., arrived here about 3 a.m. NDT, her skipper said in an interview. The Clyde Valley left Sydney Saturday.

Capt. William Agnew, 66, who flew to Canada to command the Clyde Valley on her last transatlantic crossing, said there were no major problems encountered with the tow from about 30 miles at sea to this southern shore port 60 miles from St. John's.

"We still don't know what the engine trouble is," he said.

The coast guard ship Montmorency, out of St. John's, went to the Clyde Valley's aid Tuesday. That night, in 30-knot gales and 15-foot seas, a 1,000-foot towline was attached and the Montmorency dragged the ancient vessel toward sheltered water near shore.

Around midnight, the fishing trawler Zaley, owned by Adriana Ltd. of St. John's, took over the tow and Montmorency returned to normal work.

Built in 1886 and believed to be the oldest iron-hulled vessel afloat, the Clyde Valley broke a British naval blockade to land guns at Ulster in 1914, winning the undying affection of Northern Irish patriots.

Shelve N-Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the United States Senate have decided not to bring the nuclear non-proliferation treaty to a vote in this session of Congress, informed sources say. Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield has not made a public announcement, but he is said to have abandoned any possibility of seeking ratification this year.

Concert May Restore Record Playing

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A premiere event took place at noon Tuesday in the MacLaurin Building lecture theatre under the banner of the University of Victoria School of Fine Arts music division.

Presentation of the Victoria Chamber Orchestra was also the first of a series of Tuesday noon concerts that will be held throughout the semester.

It cannot be considered in the light of a debut for the chamber orchestra because it is with only one or two exceptions a major portion of the Victoria Symphony string section.

Only differences are that this ensemble is sponsored by the music division, that its resident conductors are Hugh McLean and Dr. Dinah Henkirie and it has Jack Kessler as concertmaster.

Of course its members also happen to be, in several instances, faculty members of the music division and the affiliated Conservatory of Music and students of both institutions.

The concert, squeezed into a week in which the musicians had already played two symphony concerts, was obviously meagrely prepared. It is my understanding that there had been only one rehearsal.

This I only learned afterward but it did much to explain the uncertainties that were apparent in performance, the tentative feeling of many entries, the travelled sound of non-co-ordination and the sense one had that inner parts were moving on their own.

Of course it is not possible to knit together a firm ensemble in the best of circumstances much under six months, and that with constant rehearsal.

But it would have been eminently more satisfactory all round surely — and I include in that the student and citizen audience that filled the auditorium as well as the artists involved—to have met Hugh McLean as orchestra conductor in conditions more favorable to him.

Mr. McLean has an outstanding reputation as a fine Canadian organist, harpsichordist and choir conductor. But whatever he had in mind pertaining to Tuesday's music and the orchestra came off, if at all, only sketchily.

The music selected was interesting and quite pleasantly rare, with the exception perhaps of the Dvorak Serenade in E. If the orchestra had plodded less the Lully suite of seven short extracts from LeBourgeois Gentilhomme would have been delightful.

The Sibelius Canzonetta is music one would like to hear again under better circumstances. Closest to a successful performance was the Samuel Barber Adagio with its flowing contrapuntal dialogue among the strings.

Severest sufferer from the inadequate preparation was the Dvorak, in which there were some really desperate moments of floundering.

If the objective is to allow university students to hear rare music performed live, then I am afraid that many, more astute than they are often given credit for, will be driven back to the record player unless the quality of the live effort can be improved.

Steven and Ida Staryk Compare Rare Violins

Artist Chooses Violin To Suit Each Selection

By AUDREY JOHNSON

"It is not possible to find in one violin all the qualities one seeks," says Steven Staryk, tucking away in beds of silk and velvet the two virtually priceless instruments that have travelled with him to Victoria.

Both will be heard tonight when Victoria Symphony's visiting artist appears in recital at McPherson Playhouse.

Some violins, he explained, have a darker, mellower tone than other equally fine instruments, and certain music is better served by one than the other.

"One would wish to play Bach, for example, on the darker-toned fiddle.

"Violinists are usually divided into two camps on the subject. For instance, Francescatti and Milstein are unalterably pro-Stradivarius; Stern and Heifetz, pro-Guarnerius. Kreisler, on the other hand, had no bias either way but played on both."

The greatly gifted Canadian artist-virtuoso who has an impressive reputation in the United States as well as in Europe, delighted symphony audiences with his performance of the Tchaikowsky Concerto, Sunday and Monday.

He will team with Robin Wood for tonight's recital, playing among other things, Beethoven and Schumann sonatas and a number of pieces from the virtuoso repertoire.

WIFE PRESENT

Traveling with him in his present swing across Canada is his lovely blonde wife Ida.

Mrs. Staryk is also a violinist—in fact the two met when Steven Staryk was concertmaster of the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra of which she was a member.

One of the two violins he is using—his own—is a Del Gesu Guarnerius ex-Vieuxtemps, ex-Papini, dated 1739. The other is one he is trying out with a view to purchase and it belongs to the famed Wurlitzer collection. It is an ex-Rode Stradivarius, dated 1733.

Mr. Staryk retains his Canadian citizenship although at the present time "my base" as he puts it, is in Ohio where he is head of the string department at Oberlin College.

After leaving Victoria he will be doing a recital and broadcast for CBC at the University of British Columbia and pre-recording a performance of the Paganini Concerto No. 1 for CBC.

TOUR OUTLINE

This will be followed by concerts in Hamilton and St. John's, Nfld., then in mid-December he leaves for a European tour which will cover Ireland, England, Holland, Germany and Switzerland.

In early summer he will be in Montreal where he will be one of the panel of distinguished adjudicators judging the International Violin Competition which draws entrants from all over the world.

In the course of his career which began 12 years ago, when Sir Thomas Beecham made him concertmaster and soloist with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, Mr. Staryk has also made a number of recordings, on HMV in England, RCA in Canada and Baroque and Everest in the States.

He says he thoroughly enjoys teaching which he feels is a creative application of his art. In performance he confesses to actually preferring recital work over the concerto because there is more freedom and the artist himself is in full control.

"Still, the very fact that you don't control all the elements in a concerto performance makes it an exciting and challenging experience," he admits.

He had something important to say about the circumstances under which the Victoria Symphony Orchestra has to prepare and present concerts.

Pointing out that virtually everything an orchestra is going to achieve is set before the performance, he comments: "It is a terrible situation when an orchestra has to rehearse under entirely different acoustical conditions than obtain in the actual concert hall.

"It comes next to being impossible, with an hour or so work-out in the hall prior to the concert, to make smooth and full adjustment to the changed conditions."

Perhaps Mr. Staryk should be persuaded to return to Victoria before he leaves the province to talk with city council about a wider concept of usage for a convention centre.

Researchers Probe Village's Heartbeats

OLD CROW, Y.T. (CP) — Because the heartbeat rate is a good indication of physical fitness, a special study was carried out on the Indian people of this community 1,300 miles northwest of Edmonton.

The information obtained from the Indians of this most northerly settlement in the Yukon Territory will be useful for comparison with fitness measurements of people leading sedentary lives in cities.

A team of United States researchers monitored the heartbeats of 24 residents of this settlement where 250 Loucheux Indians live 500 miles north of Whitehorse.

The natives were wired for sound, with two electrodes and a tiny radio transmitter, and urged to go about their daily routines.

Each subject's transmitter operated on a different frequency, allowing the researchers from the University of Alaska at Fairbanks to monitor any one of them with a twist of a dial.

Dr. Keizo Shiraki of Kyoto, Japan, a visiting professor of physiology at the university, said the heartbeat rate is a good indicator because "a trained athlete can perform strenuous exercise and still exhibit a low heart rate, while someone in poor condition develops a high rate by simply climbing a flight of stairs."

The natives involved, ranging in age from 7 to 60, kept a log of their activities to aid the university team in evaluating the heart data.

The researchers were primarily concerned with the physiological adaptation of human beings and other animals to Arctic and sub-Arctic environments.

GREEKS SENT BACK TO DIE?

OTTAWA (CP)—Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) told the Commons on Tuesday that Greeks claiming political refuge in Canada are being deported despite their objections that they face death if sent back to their homeland.

Mr. McCleave was ruled out of order when he attempted to question Prime Minister Trudeau on the subject.

The prime minister noted that Immigration Minister MacEachen will be in the Commons Wednesday and suggested the question might be asked then.

Nicholson's Comments Still Echoing Here

Minister Without Portfolio P. A. Gaglardi vigorously championed Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson while Opposition Leader Robert Strachan gave backhanded support to Premier Bennett today.

They were both commenting on Mr. Nicholson's action Sunday in publicly urging the government to accept and implement two B.C. School Trustee Association resolutions on educational policy.

In his first public reprimand to a representative of the Queen, Premier Bennett Monday accused Mr. Nicholson of exceeding his jurisdiction by making the remarks in public.

When reporters asked Mr. Gaglardi Monday for his opinion of the remarks, the former highways minister said he felt that Mr. Nicholson had "every right" to speak his mind.

'SHOULD LISTEN'

"The government should be willing to listen to recommendations from anyone," he added.

Mr. Gaglardi said in a democracy every citizen has the right to express an opinion and this includes lieutenant-governors although, after prodding, he admitted he couldn't recall a similar incident in the past.

However, Mr. Gaglardi said that while he was sure Mr. Nicholson meant well, his suggestion for providing penalty clauses against slow work by school construction contractors would only add more cost to building schools and the idea should be rejected.

Premier Bennett, who followed Mr. Gaglardi into a cabinet meeting, told reporters he would not elaborate on his earlier reprimand and said he did not intend to take the matter up personally with Mr. Nicholson nor promote the incident into an election issue.

Informed of Mr. Gaglardi's position and asked for comment, Mr. Bennett only replied "Nice to hear from you, my friend," to the enquirer and closed the cabinet door behind himself.

'REALLY SHOULDN'T'

This morning, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan said that Mr. Nicholson "really shouldn't make public statements on government policy."

But he strongly qualified his support of Mr. Bennett's interpretation that protocol had been violated by saying he couldn't blame Mr. Nicholson's motives and urged him to continue pressing his opinions on the government in private.

"In view of the government's well-known attitude toward education," the NDP leader said in a telephone interview from Nanaimo, "the lieutenant-governor was a little unwise in indicating support for any necessary improvement.

"But, at the same time, as the first citizen of the province, he surely must have an interest in every aspect of provincial affairs.

"I suppose it (Mr. Nicholson's remarks) hit Mr. Bennett in a rather vulnerable spot.

"But I hope the lieutenant governor will follow through on his public expression by urging privately to his government—and after all, it is his government—the necessity for changing some of these policies."

Senior Citizens Enthuse Minister

The B.C. Special Welfare Department's first conference of senior citizen counsellors wound up Tuesday with Minister Without Portfolio Isabel Dawson deeply enthused.

"It's a tremendous success," she said of the two-day meeting which brought members from senior citizen groups from various parts of the province to the Legislative Building.

Mrs. Dawson said the conference had confirmed there is a wide "knowledge gap" between professional workers such as citizens who need their advice.

"But it can be bridged by this sort of two-way communication link," she said. "We may have more conferences like this, either here or out in the regions."

The senior citizens attending were nominated by their respective associations as volunteer counsellors to association members.

They met with a variety of professional representatives to learn how best to use private and public agencies for such services as legal, real estate, welfare, and health advice.

During a series of workshops, the volunteer counsellors also told the professional representatives the sort of help most frequently needed by senior citizens who often are alone or confused by fundamental changes in society.

Local Delegates At Niagara Falls

Twenty Victoria real estate agents are among 1,200 delegates to the 25th annual conference of Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards this week at Niagara Falls.

One of them, N. L. Ross, of Ker and Stephenson Ltd., received membership in the Canadian Institute of Realtors, meeting concurrently with CAREB.

Another local agent, Mrs. D. R. McLeod, of Mears and Whyte Oak Bay Realty, also was granted institute membership, indicating completion of a three-year study course and acceptable business experience.

Municipality Okays Planning Merger

Central Saanich Monday became the first municipality on south Vancouver Island to approve a capital region district board proposal to take over the functions of the capital region planning board.

Council endorsed the proposal with one dissident vote cast by Ald. Margaret Salt after Mayor Gordon Lee said the planning board's present functions would be taken over unchanged by the district board, under the proposed terms of the merger.

The merger must be approved by all seven participating councils before the regional board can take over the planning functions.

If one council opts out of the proposed merger, the planning board will continue as before.

"It won't make any difference to the smaller municipalities," the mayor said "but I expect strong opposition from Saanich and Victoria as they each have extensive planning staffs."

MAJOR OBJECTION

He said the "bogey" would be raised by some municipalities that the transfer of planning to the regional board would empower it to dictate planning to the various municipalities.

"I helped prepare the terms of the agreement," he said. "In no way would the district board interfere with the detailed planning of individual municipalities."

He said it would have no more powers than the existing capital planning board.

"Under the terms of the agreement, its powers are limited to planning in general for the whole of the capital region," he added. "It would have no say, for example, on where apartments or motels should go."

WAITING FOR REPORT

Ald. Salt voted against the proposal on the ground that council should study the terms of the merger further.

North Saanich Reeve J. B. Cumming said council was waiting on a solicitor's report before taking action on the matter.

Mayor Arthur Freeman of Sidney said the proposal had not yet been discussed by council.

"We will probably get around to it by the end of the month," he said. "I don't know how the aldermen feel about it."

Himalayan Landslides Kill 57

CALCUTTA (AP) — Two major landslides have killed at least 57 persons in the Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim, the United News of India news agency said Tuesday.

The agency said the landslides occurred last Friday as a result of heavy rain that claimed an even greater toll in India.

Sikkim, whose queen is American-born Hope Cooke Namgyal, was still cut off from India because of heavy damaged roads. A telephone link, however, was restored.

The agency said 32 were buried alive when a huge mass of earth and trees tumbled down on barracks housing Tibetan refugees 10 miles from Gantok, the capital.

Another landslide killed 25 at an army camp.

Flood Toll May Top 1,000 Dead

DARJEELING, India (Reuters) — At least 464 persons are known to have died in devastating floods and landslides in North Bengal. Reports from affected areas indicate the final death toll may top 1,000.

Four days of torrential rain left thousands marooned and homeless. In the inundated areas of Darjeeling, Kalimpong and Kurseong, hundreds are missing and many villages were washed away.

At least 30 persons were reported killed at the town of Mekhliganj, near the Assam border, which was under eight feet of water.

The 7,000-square-mile area bordered by Nepal, Sikkim, Bhutan and East Pakistan was virtually cut off from the rest of India.

Roads, railway lines, telecommunications and oil pipelines running to the Barauni refinery in Bihar were seriously disrupted.

9 IN MEMORIAM

ROBERT—Alvin Joseph. In memory of a dear husband and father, died October 9, 1967.

There's nothing left for me
Of days that used to be
But just a memory among my souvenirs.
Some letters tied with blue,
A photograph or two,
I see a rose from you among my souvenirs.
A few tokens left within my treasure chest.
And though they do their best to bring me consolation,
I count them all apart, and as the teardrops start
I find a broken heart among my souvenirs.
—From his loving wife and daughters Michelle and Pamela.

WILSON—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Walter J. W. Wilson, who passed beyond sight on October 9, 1959.
And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since and lost awhile.
—Kathleen and family.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Today's hand was played almost 40 years ago. South still winces when reminded of it.

The event was the Life Masters' Individual. This event has long since been relegated to a minor role because the top players don't like to play in it. Somehow or other an individual brings out the worst in everyone. Thus, South's four-heart call was a rather bad bid. Three no-trump would have been far better but in an individual there is a really strong tendency not to let your partner play the dummy.

Anyway, South did bid four hearts and the way the cards lie it should have brought him a top score.

He won the spade lead with dummy's ace and promptly finessed his jack of hearts. If West had risen with the queen he would have collected a spade trick and South would have made five odd. Since the rest of the field was in three no-trump, making four or five, diamonds making six, he would have had his top but West produced the deuce of hearts instead of the queen.

South entered dummy with the ace of diamonds and took a second heart finesse. This time West won the trick. Then West cashed the queen of spades and shifted to his last diamond. South won that trick but the rest of the diamond suit was about as useless as an ice machine at the North Pole. He had to go down two.

Why does South still wince when he is reminded of this hand?

It seems that he congratulated West on his magnificent play. Instead of accepting the accolade, West replied, "Thanks very much but I didn't really make a good play. I was really surprised when I found that I had played the deuce and not the queen on that first heart lead."

Reform Policies 'Still On'

By MARK MEREDITH

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Fears that liberalization policies were dealt a final blow at a Moscow summit last week eased today after Czechoslovak Communist leaders said they will not return to conditions existing before January when the reforms were introduced.

They also denied in a communique there were plans to change party leaders. But they resolved at the same time to "further strength" the management of the press media in a "clear-cut socialist spirit."

The communique was issued Tuesday night by the 21-member ruling party presidium after it met to discuss the results of the Moscow talks between Russian and Czechoslovak leaders.

Russia demanded more restriction on liberalization reforms here and although the presidium announcement echoed much of a communique issued after the Moscow summit, observers said it did not bear out the first pessimistic appraisals.

The presidium said in its communique it wished to deny reports, "usually spread by Western sources," that after the Moscow negotiations there were talks on changes in top posts of the party or state.

BACK "CORRECT" POLICY

But the party leaders backed "correct personnel policy" by which workers in state and party bodies "have the confidence of the people and firmly stand on the principles of socialism and proletarian internationalism."

The communique said Czechoslovak development lay in its alliance with Russia and other socialist countries—"from this must proceed all measures in political, economic, cultural and military relations."

Observers said much of Tuesday night's statement had the ring of reform plans which Czechoslovak Communist leaders have been talking about since January when party leader Alexander Dubcek took over from authoritarian Antonin Novotny.

The Moscow talks produced new tough Soviet demands to reach "normalization"—the stage Russia requires before pulling back occupation troops which invaded Czechoslovakia Aug. 20.

The Czechoslovak Communist leaders said Tuesday night in no case would a return to pre-January conditions be allowed.

They recommended a formulation of all post-January policies which "successfully passed the test of practical life and become values in the life of the party and society."

'Vote For Me'; Grits Already Strong Enough

By ED GOULD

GANGES — The issue in the Nanaimo by-election is whether the people want to "add to the already swollen Liberal ranks" or strengthen the opposition, national NDP leader Tommy Douglas said here Tuesday.

He asked people to vote for him regardless of political affiliations "because good government depends on good opposition".

He cited as an example of good opposition the recent first-hand investigation of the Biafran situation by NDP-er David MacDonald and Conservative Andrew Brewin.

Mr. Douglas is seeking election in the far-flung riding after his defeat in Burnaby-Coquitlam in the general election. Date of the by-election hasn't been set.

UNDECIDED

Mr. Douglas said he had not made up his mind about whether to stay on until 1971 as leader of the party as requested.

But he said a failure to be elected in the Nanaimo-the Islands by-election would "have a definite bearing on my decision".

Mr. Douglas said Prime Minister Trudeau is "quite properly involved in constitutional matters, biculturalism and bilingualism and in legislation affecting homosexuality and abortion."

But, he said, "the cost of living, lack of home financing available to 70 per cent of our people and other bread and butter issues must not be overlooked."

Mr. Douglas said he was defeated in Burnaby-Coquitlam by former B.C. Provincial leader Ray Perrault because not enough people voted.

"We were defeated by the people who stayed home," he said.

Mr. Douglas will visit Galiano, Mayne and Pender Islands and return to a public meeting here Thursday. He is on a month-long tour of the riding.

Need a Home? Just Telephone This Computer

By GERALD CLARKSON

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Home hunters in Canada's metropolitan areas may soon be able to find the house of their choice in the right price range by phoning a computer in Detroit for a list of properties.

A spokesman for the Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards said Tuesday the system could be in operation in some cities by early next year.

The way the computer would work was demonstrated at the association's annual conference by John Jenning, president of Realtron Corp. of Detroit, whose real estate computer has been adopted by the U.S. National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Although the 85 Canadian real estate boards are not all expected to join at once, a spokesman thought that Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver and other large centres would probably agree first.

The computer would be an extension of the existing multiple listing service, which duplicates the details of houses for sale among real estate brokers' offices.

CAN DIAL NEEDS

Using the computer instead of a duplicated list, a real estate salesman anywhere in Canada could dial his clients' requirements on a special "touch-tone" telephone, which connects with Detroit by the regular telephone service.

The computer then provides the address of a suitable property in the market.

The reply should accommodate every request ranging from the number of rooms to the amount of down payment, plus any feature such as a swimming pool or extra kitchen space that the customer wants.

In the United States, the service costs a real estate firm $47 a month regardless of the number of queries put to the computer.

Realtron Corp. said the charges would be similar in Canada.

William C. Haas, president of the U.S. Institute of Real Estate Management, told a conference lunch that the United States urgently needs something like Transport Minister Hellyer's inquiry into urban and housing problems.

HOPES FOR ACTION

He said the inquiry is "doing a tremendous job for Canada, and I certainly hope that suitable action will be forthcoming when it is over."

He said Mr. Hellyer was right in his speech Monday when he maintained that housing should be looked at in the context of the next 25 years.

Mr. Haas recommended that investors take the opportunity now to acquire rent-yielding properties with a minimum of down payment.

But he said a successful investment on these lines depends on hiring professional management to ensure that the rents are increased in time to pay for rising operating costs.

For the professional property manager, he said, there is a new and exciting market in advising many recently-merged corporations who have bought real estate as an investment.

TUG FIRM BLAMED IN BARGE MISHAP

OTTAWA (CP) — The supreme Court of Canada has found the Vancouver Tug Boat Co. Ltd. responsible for the capsizing of one of its barges while it was being loaded with wood chips at the Tahsis Co. Ltd. plant on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

In a three-to two decision, the high court over-ruled a judgment of the British Columbia Court of Appeal and re-established the decision of the trial judge which found the tug boat company at fault in the 1962 mishap.

The Vancouver Tug Boat Co. at the time was supplying docks and barges to transport wood chips from the Tahsis plant to the St. Regis paper mill in Tacoma, Wash.

The B.C. Appeal Court accepted the tug boat company's argument that Tahsis employees caused the barge to capsize through their negligence in loading it.

But Mr. Justice Louis-Philippe Pigeon, writing the majority reasons for the Supreme Court, said it had been clearly established that the tug boat company put the barge in service without ascertaining its stability characteristics.

"The result of so trying to establish the characteristics of the barge while loading was that it capsized."

Curling Rink Contract Let By Racquet Club

The contract for the construction of a curling rink addition to Victoria Racquet Club's sports complex has been awarded to Burns and Dutton Construction Co., it was anounced today.

The price was not announced.

The rink will complete the second major phase of the Racquet club's development. Facilities already in use include tennis, badminton and squash courts, a swimming pool, and a skating rink which, up to now, has been shared by the curlers.

The addition will include extra locker rooms and space for future construction of three more squash courts.

'Scrap Indian Affairs Branch'

A Duncan community development worker Tuesday advocated the abolition of the Indian Affairs department.

"It should be scrapped and Indians given their independence," George Manuel told a University of Victoria audience.

He was a speaker at the second of a series of discussions on The Contemporary Indian. The next lecture will be on Oct. 23.

Mr. Manuel noted that the Indian affairs department is a $120,000,000 business.

"You are the people who pay for it," he said. "They employ 3,300 people, and only about 300 of them are Indians. We are creating a pretty nice business for other people."

He felt if the $120,000,000 were given to the bands it could be put to better use.

"Indians must get involved and battle for services for Indian people," he said.

$400,000 Tug Order To North Vancouver

Island Tug and Barge today announced the awarding of a $400,000 contract to a North Vancouver shipyard for the construction of a 74-foot tug.

The new vessel—to be built by Bel-Aire Shipyard Ltd.—is expected to be launched in May.

Among technical innovations in the vessel will be a controllable pitch propeller, allowing the craft to reverse its course without gears. The prop will be set in a ring—known as a Kort nozzle—which takes the place of a conventional rudder.

Designed by Robert Allan Ltd., the vessel will have a 22 foot 6 inch beam and a draft of 10 feet 3 inches. Power will be supplied by an 850 h.p. Caterpillar main engine.

The maximum thrust of the ship will exceed 20,000 pounds—about 25 per cent more than is developed by conventional systems.

The tug has been specially designed to meet service requirements of log towing and scow operations which require a high degree of manoeuverability.

The five-man crew will be housed above the main deck. In addition to wheelhouse controls, the tug will have two remote steering positions.

New construction is part of a phasing-out program currently under way in Island Tug's operation which will see older tugs disposed of as they become obsolete.

Recently the Island Champion and the Sirmac were sold to private individuals.

Other tugs will be built in the next few years as part of the program.

REGIONAL COLLEGE CRITICISM REJECTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Education Minister Donald Brothers has brushed aside criticism describing the province's regional college program "the laughing stock of the nation."

He told a news conference at the B.C. School Trustees Association convention that development of regional colleges is flying along at a tremendous rate.

He was replying to criticism by Frank Beinder, president of the BCSTA who said the government was shirking its responsibility by not showing stronger leadership in college planning and financing.

The regional college plan shows no sign of falling apart, Mr. Brothers said.

Police Avert RC-Protestant Donnybrook

BELFAST (AP) — Police averted a clash between Roman Catholic and Protestant demonstrators in this Northern Ireland capital today by persuading the Catholics to change the route of a mass protest march by 1,500 Queen's University students.

The Protestants, led by Rev. Ian Paisley, had threatened a counter-demonstration in Shaftesbury Square to prevent the Catholic students from entering Belfast's Protestant working-class quarter.

The Queen's students marched to protest alleged political discrimination against Roman Catholics and what they called police brutality in Londonderry, where 96 persons were injured in weekend demonstrations.

Roman Catholic nationalists want North Ireland's six counties joined with the Irish Republic to the south. They have scheduled a token strike Friday and another big demonstration in Londonderry on Saturday.

William Craig, minister of home affairs, said the Londonderry demonstration will be banned. The authorities permitted the Catholic students to march here today on condition they changed their route, but banned Paisley's counter-demonstration.

The Protestant minister then led 200 supporters to city hall, where he told 2,000 bystanders Premier Terence O'Neil should be ousted for not prosecuting Catholic activists.

HOME GARDEN

Fresh Lettuce All Year

By HILDA BEASTALL

For a gardener who likes to eat green lettuce every day in winter, it pays to have a small supply always in the growing stage.

There is no other way to get it, for delicately crisp leafy lettuce does not keep indefinitely in storage as do the hard-headed paler kinds.

According to growing facilities available in the garden, it is wise to have, say, three varieties for experimenting.

Hilda

Grand Rapids, early evergreen and the English variety Stanstead Park are three winter kinds to choose from, with buttercrunch for the fall into winter and early spring sowings. The latter is my own choice for texture and flavor whenever I can manage to keep it coming along.

All will grow here in cool weather, and with written records kept for a couple of years a gardener would quite easily develop skill in raising a continuous supply.

Lettuce seed is viable for five years at least, often longer for good strains, so that one small packet of each of three varieties could last an average family for five years.

During that period, definite preferences would no doubt appear for certain varieties so that more of those would be needed.

Sowing in a seed box or shallow pot now, and kept in either an unheated greenhouse or a glass covered coldframe, will give nice plants to set out in the coldframe bed.

Keep the cover on for colder nights and off for all the milder weather to get results.

Be sure the soil has a thin (one-eighth-inch) layer of sand on the surface if there is rich compost below. Care with watering (if it is needed) will prevent damping-off and other fungus rots.

YOUR HEALTH

Cause of Backache Hard to Find

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

I just read the Back Pain Association in London says backache causes the loss of five million work days a year. The great difficulty, of course, is to find out what the cause is and where it is.

Alvarez

It can be an arthritis in the joints between the vertebrae; it can be an irritation of the muscles of the back with a virus; it can be a rupture of a so-called disc between two of the spinal bones; it rarely can be due to one or more little tumors in the muscles or bones of the back.

Often the doctor can be pretty sure the cause is a ruptured disc if one day the pain came suddenly; if the person walks with a list over to one side, or if there is pain running down the sciatic nerve at the back of the thigh. Sometimes I strongly suspect a ruptured disc when the person comes in on crutches or in a wheelchair.

Once in my life, some 30 years ago, one afternoon I was seized with a very severe, almost paralyzing pain in my back. What I had is often appropriately called "the Devil's Grip." It is due to an infection with what is called the Coxsackie virus. It cleared up in six weeks or so.

If I ever get a severe backache which shows no signs of quieting down, I will go to a big clinic where I can be studied by an X-ray man, a clinician, an orthopedist, a neurologist, an expert on arthritis, and an expert on operating on ruptured discs. It might take all of them to discover the cause and to decide whether to operate.

Sometimes a neurologist can find in one lower leg signs showing nerve fibres coming out of the spinal cord are being pressed on, probably by material that came out of a ruptured disc. A disc is a rubbery cushion found between each two vertebras (bones that make up the spine).

Sometimes a backache is due to a fall or some other injury.

* * *

I was just reading a test of a combined live virus vaccine against measles, mumps, and German measles (rubella), can now be given in a single injection. This was just reported by Dr. Maurice R. Hilleman of the Merck Institute for Therapeutic Research in West Point, Penn.

With this vaccine, in almost every case the person becomes immune to the three diseases. It is to be hoped these diseases can now be wiped out, so children will no longer have to suffer from them. Many mothers have felt inclined to say, "Why worry about them?

"All children have to have them, and they don't do any harm." But that is wrong. We know today a considerable percentage of children who have ordinary measles get a mild brain fever, and some of them are left for life with a crippled brain. A small percentage of the older boys who have had mumps are left with shrunken testes, and this is very sad. Also, we know today how terribly dangerous it is for a woman in her first six weeks of pregnancy to get German measles. Her child can be born deaf or blind or mentally or nervously crippled in some way.

It looks now as if we can easily wipe out these diseases from the country, if only mothers will love their children enough to bring them to a clinic to have them vaccinated. Probably in many cities the board of health will be doing the work without charge.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Rich Gold Mine Sold For $25 in Booze

By BOB BOWMAN

How would you like to find a gold mine? Dr. Charles Camsell, one of Canada's greatest geological surveyors, once told this writer that it is still possible to be lucky and uncover gold in some remote part of Canada.

That is what happened to Benny Hollinger Oct. 9, 1909. Thomas Geddes and George Bannerman of St. Thomas, Ont., started a rush to the Porcupine area of northern Ontario when they discovered gold in July, 1909. They too had acted on a lucky hunch.

Benny Hollinger borrowed $45 from John McMahon of Haileybury and went prospecting although he knew little about it. On October 9, 1909, he found three feet of gold jutting from some moss and that was the beginning of the famous Hollinger mine that has produced gold worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

WEPT IN SALOONS

Another prospector who should have been lucky was "Sandy" McIntyre. His real name was Oliphant but he changed it when he fled from Scotland to avoid paying alimony to his wife.

McIntyre stumbled across the gold that became the McIntyre mine and has been one of Canada's leading producers. Unfortunately, McIntyre had a thirst for liquor and sold his shares for $25 so he could buy some booze. He spent the rest of his life weeping in saloons.

Geddes was unlucky. He was killed in a forest fire in the Porcupine area two years after his discovery.

Other events on Oct. 9:

1682—Frontenac was recalled to France owing to disagreements at Quebec.

1811—First Selkirk settlers for Red River landed at York Factory, Hudson Bay.

1820—Cape Breton was annexed to Nova Scotia for second time.

1838—Lord Durham resigned as Governor of Canada.

1873—Sir John A. Macdonald answered bribery charges.

1877—Railway locomotive "Countess of Dufferin" arrived at St. Boniface, Man.

1897—Sir Clifford Sifton, minister of the interior, acted quickly to save Yukon from being occupied by U.S.

1899—Soulanges Canal opened near Montreal.

1918—Canadian troops fought in decisive battle of Cambrai.

1961—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt opened Memorial University at St. John's, Newfoundland.

1963—Canada and U.S.A. agreed to store nuclear missiles in Newfoundland.

Commuter Drivers Vote to Strike

MONTREAL (CP)—Drivers of Greater Montreal's largest privately-owned commuter bus line Tuesday voted in favor of a strike that could affect as many as 10,000 daily commuters if their current negotiation demands are not met.

The drivers of the line—a subsidiary of Provincial Transport Co.—want an increased salary schedule, improved working and security conditions and a work week reduced from 50 to 40 hours.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Sandra Elstration, age 11, of Somerville, Massachusetts, for her question:

Can the world climate really change?

Our earth has celebrated at least four billion birthdays. It is a very changeable planet, at least on its restless surface of land and sea, and in the atmosphere above. Through the ages, its features have been remodelled and its climate changed many, many times.

There is ample evidence to prove that large areas of North America once were covered by vast glaciers a mile or more thick. They were, of course, children of a long Ice Age during which the warmth of summer was unable to melt all the icy snows of the wintry seasons. For this to happen, the climate of Northern America and other areas of the globe must have been colder than it is in modern times. Scientists say that such Ice Age glaciers could form if our summer seasons were just a few degrees cooler, just cool enough to allow some of the winter snow to accumulate on the ground from season to season.

A change of this sort would be a major change in the global climate, affecting plant and animal life on the land and perhaps also in the seas. Geological evidence in the rocky ground and the silty deposits around the seas prove that the earth has suffered through several Ice Ages, all caused by changes in the world climate. Other evidence in the rocks records more pleasant chapters of the past. A lot of this evidence is brought to light by streams that have cut down through lower and lower levels of older rocks that once paved the surface.

Earth scientists can figure the dates of these buried old layers back through millions of years. In the Dakotas, they found alligator fossils embedded on rocks deposited some 50 million years ago. Farther north in Alaska, the fossilized remains of magnolias and elms were embedded in rocks of a similar era. These animals and plants can survive only in warm and semi-tropical climates. Obviously our wintry north once enjoyed a warm climate through most of the year. There is evidence that other major areas of the globe also enjoyed a summery climate at this time.

Plants Wiped Out

The earth's long, changeable history falls naturally into a series of eras and periods. Each chapter brought a change, sometimes a major change, in the world climate. There were hot and cold spells, dry and moist spells, often lasting millions of years.

The Mesozoic Era opened about 180 million years ago with a widespread arid climate. This was followed by a semi-arid spell and then a mild, moist spell. During the more than 100 million years of this era, the dinosaurs advanced from small reptile ancestors to their monstrous heyday and then departed. We do not as yet know what wiped them out. But plant life changed with the changing climates and some experts suggest that their favorite plant food was choked out and replaced by grasses that they could not chew.

* * *

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Debbie Metz, age 11, of Worcester, Pennsylvania, for his question:

How did the word "politics" originate?

The word "politics" dates back to the ancient Greeks who had such noble ideas about civilized government. It is derived from Greek words meaning the citizens, their state and the things that rightfully belong to them. Though we use "politics" as either a singular or a plural word, its basic meaning has not changed from what the noble-minded Greeks intended it to be. Basically it is the skills, the art and the science of government. In its proper sense, politics included the highest judgment and the most unselfish wisdom of which mankind is capable. Every citizen senses these virtues as necessary to make government of the people workable.

Very often you hear people use the word "politics" with overtones of anger and distrust. This is not because the word has lost its true meaning, but rather because of human nature. Political office brings power and power attracts rascals bent on misusing it to suit themselves. Twisted politics of this sort indeed deserves our distrust. But remember, in our system of democracy the citizens elect their politicians. When "politics" loses its true and noble meaning, voters have failed to use their honest good sense by electing less than the very best men and women to represent them.

PEERING at the remaining bell in the chapel tower at Fairbridge Farm School, caretaker J. K. Bulcock (inset) prepares to strike a bong with his hammer. Thieves have taken the tower's second bell—which had been operated with a pull rope. The bell in the inset is hooked up to the tower clock and was one of Victoria's earliest fire alarms. Built in 1876, the clock and bell stood near Fort Camosun on the corner of Government and Fort in the capital. It was installed in the school near Duncan in 1940.

Century-Old Church Bell Vanishes

DUNCAN — The tale can be told, but the bell can't. Fairbridge Chapel's bell is stolen.

Caretaker J. K. Bulcock, whose job includes counting the bells in the chapel tower at the now-unused Fairbridge Farm School, last week noticed that where there used to be two bells, there now is only one.

The one remaining tolls the hours for the tower clock. The other called the faithful to worship.

The stolen bell, cast in England more than 100 years ago but installed in Fairbridge chapel only in 1963, weighed more than 100 pounds. It came to the school about 1940 and spent 23 years in a packing case.

OPENED IN 1936

Fairbridge Farm School, four miles south of Duncan was established in 1936 as a home for under-privileged British children. Until 1948, it offered farm training and many children were evacuated there during the Second World War.

Little used since then, it is now up for sale.

The church has no permanent congregation but is used on special occasions by members of the local Anglican and Lutheran congregations.

Chief, Firemen Rebel Over Equipment Lack

By MORGAN MacGREGOR

CAMPBELL RIVER — Sixteen rebellious Willow Point firemen led by Chief Clyde Malhon Tuesday night asked for amalgamation with Campbell River fire department.

They charged at a public meeting their equipment is dangerously inadequate and the department run by trustees who are "almost dictators."

The trustees will not release funds to buy equipment, they said.

The Willow Point fire department in the southern part of the municipality was formed six months ago by water board chairman Ken Forde and two trustees. Ratepayers at the time strongly protested the establishment of a fire department without consulting them.

Chief Malhon said "we have received very little co-operation regarding our request for more equipment and replacement of damaged equipment.

"My men don't have fire-fighting boots or smoke masks. We have a truck that works and one that is barely operable.

"We have been unofficially threatened with dismissal for calling this meeting tonight, but we will continue to answer fire calls unless we are prevented by the trustees."

Ratepayer Larry Bundey told the meeting he has asked permission from the water comptroller in Victoria to hold a plebiscite. Ratepayers would be asked if they want to merge the department with Campbell River or continue going it alone.

"This situation would never have occurred if we had had an opportunity to vote on a fire department. Other municipalities have amalgamated their services. What's wrong with us?" he asked.

Willow Point trustees said they had no statement to make but a ratepayers meeting is planned for next week.

'Distorted Importance' Given School Construction Costs

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff Reporter

VANCOUVER — The provincial government has distorted the importance of school building costs which represent only a fraction of the tax bill for education.

This is the view of the new president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association, elected by acclamation at the annual convention here Tuesday.

James Campbell, 50 of Saturna Island, succeeds Frank Bender of Trail as leader of school boards from the province's 83 school districts.

Mr. Campbell classifies his occupation as farmer. He raises cattle and sheep on an 800-acre farm on Saturna, the southernmost of the Canadian Gulf Islands. He has been a trustee on the Gulf Islands school board for 10 years. For the past three years he has been on the association's executive and was vice-president before winning the top post.

In an interview just prior to his election he summarized his view of the current education scene this way:

"I think the government has given distorted importance to capital cost when it is really only about 10 per cent of the total cost of education.

"By doing so it has affected unfavorably the capability of school districts to operate schools efficiently."

He sees the main issue facing the trustees' association in the coming year as the continuing dispute with the government on the priority position of education.

EDUCATION PARTY

In simple terms, the battle for more money.

"We are the education party," he says.

CAMPBELL
. . . new trustees' head

Trustees have a special role as advocates for education.

How does he see the BCSTA tackling the job?

"The approach has been dictated by the actions of this convention. It has expressed itself strongly and positively and the new executive will be reflecting the temper of the membership."

This suggests a militant stand because Monday night trustees passed unprecedented censure motion against the provincial government for its continued freeze on construction of school gymnasiums and activity rooms.

In his early years as trustee Mr. Campbell earned a name as an outspoken and aggressive spokesman in association affairs but more recently the image has mellowed to show a growing diplomacy.

It was evident Tuesday when he was asked to comment on the new education minister's speech the day before.

"I think Mr. Brothers was forced by circumstances into a defensive position and I hope anything he may have said can be subject to modification as the evidence reveals itself."

Another area which will be interesting to watch is trustee participation in shaping curriculum. At the moment there is practically none but the new president wants to change this.

"We the community should be deciding many more of the things that are taught in the schools. Curriculum has fallen into the hands of technicians."

B.C. Help Sought To Stop Flooding

DUNCAN — Mayor Jim Quaife of Duncan and Ald. George Whittaker of North Cowichan were in Victoria today to seek government aid for a subdivision flood control scheme.

The two-man delegation was to see housing commissioner J. Everett Brown.

The joint councils decided on the delegation at an in-camera meeting Monday evening.

The Arbutus Avenue and Cedar Place section of Centennial eights subdivision in Duncan has been flooded for several winters.

Flooding has been particularly serious the past two years and residents have pestered city council for action.

Mayor Quaife said Tuesday: "We need federal-provincial help to put in a 24-inch storm drain from the subdivision to the Cowichan River."

He said the cost of the project has been estimated at $35,000.

Mayor Quaife said an approach was being made to the senior governments because the subdivision was originally a federal-provincial scheme.

He suggested that the provincial government might contribute 25 per cent of the cost and the federal authorities the balance although the city and municipality were willing to pay a share.

Mayor Quaife said: "If we don't get a promise of assistance at the first meeting we will keep going back until we do get some action."

IN PRAISE OF:

Young Pairs Who Get Up And Go

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

There's a trait I admire very much among young marrieds in their twenties and early thirties. That is the ability to pull up stakes at a moment's notice in one part of the country and move to another with no hesitation and no qualms that it is not for the best.

Some do know they are going to better positions. Others are just taking a chance.

These last are the ones I admire most. They have stars in their eyes. They shrug off the suggestion that the gamble may not pay off. And if they land on their feet they accept it easily and go on their way smiling.

I'm thinking at this moment of Mrs. Roger Bruce ("just call me Frances").

We met last week at one of these cosy klatches arranged by public relations people to introduce a new product for one or other of their clients.

This time it was peanut butter. Frances Bruce had written most of the blurbs about the product and she was on hand to help put it across.

* * *

Twelve months ago, she and her husband, married a little over two years, were living in Montreal.

Both had good positions. They had a comfortable place to live. To all intents and purposes they were settled for the foreseeable future.

Of course, like many young people today, they did not intend to stay in one place forever.

"We had plans ... big plans, "Frances told me. These included coming out to the Pacific Coast (eventually) and making a new home.

"It was all very much in the future," this vivacious young woman said.

* * *

Then came a Sunday morning on the edge of winter. The Bruces were sitting over late morning coffee. Talking as they often did about the Pacific Coast which Frances knew but Roger had never seen.

Outside it was cold and raw with sleeting rain rapidly turning to snow. At that moment Montreal seemed very, very big and extremely impersonal.

Suddenly, Frances looked at her husband and said a little breathlessly, "let's go now."

Roger put down his coffee cup. Looked at Frances.

He said—"let's."

It was as quick as that.

They gave up their good jobs. Packed their belongings. Came to British Columbia and settled in Vancouver.

* * *

Frances' words were punctuated with happy laughter as she finished her story.

"We've both got work in Vancouver now. A place to live. And Roger is sold on the Pacific Coast. He says he's here to stay."

That's what I mean by pulling up stakes at a moment's notice in one place and taking a chance in another.

I admire young people who can do it. Perhaps I envy them a little, too.

* * *

I did tell you Mrs. Bruce was here to publicize a new peanut butter mix. In the party were also two of the most attractive human squirrels I've ever encountered. Blonde Carolyn McDermott and brunette Phyllis Binnie, this year's "Miss Vernon."

They wore short, short brown velvet tunics with huge bushy tails made of yards and yards of matching tulle.

The new blend (I'm sure you've guessed the brand from their costumes) is what they label as "sophisticated."

It's a combination of the popular peanut butter youngsters love with crunchy bacon-flavored bits. These taste exactly like bacon but actually are nutritive soya bean with hickory flavoring.

Frances Bruce told me "this is a blend that will bridge the generation gap and serve a market which for years has yearned to swallow pride along with a big mouthful of their childhood favorite."

Then she piloted me over to a buffet table where the new peanut butter blend was presented in a number of mixes—in hors d'ouevres, soup, sandwich fillings, hamburgers and even meat sauce.

Finally she picked up some stuffed celery sticks and said: "Try these. We've mixed peanut butter with horseradish. And . . . what do you know . . . it was Rober who suggested this combination. He tried it out first . . . and he loved it!"

White Collar Civil Servants 'Recognized'

The federal government is finally beginning to treat professional employees and blue-collar workers differently, a bargainer for professional civil servants said here Tuesday night.

An unprecedented contract negotiated Sept. 30 for federally-employed veterinarians established that working conditions for the two groups should be distinct, said Claude Heywood, a research associate with the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada.

Professional employees of the government, as distinct from blue-collar workers, have never had a negotiated contract before.

DOOR OPENED

Collective bargaining legislation last March which permitted contract negotiations for federal civil servants opened the field for the veterinarians.

Mr. Heywood was in Victoria to speak to the local branch of the Institute to explain the contract.

The basic changes in working conditions were to hours and holiday time, he said. Veterinarians will no longer have to sign attendance sheets every morning, as non-professional workers do.

The distinction made by bargainers was that professionals "are not clock-punchers."

They also achieved a two-year shorter span to maximum annual vacation periods, eligibility for 30 days sick leave from the day they start work to a maximum of 300 days after 20 years of employment and educational leave with a guaranteed income.

EDUCATION LEAVE

Other federal workers take 20 years to reach maximum vacation periods and accumulate sick leave at the rate of one and one-quarter days each month.

The veterinarians receive up to one year for education leave at not less than half pay. They have to work for the government for two years afterwards. Before the contract, there was no wage guarantee during such leave, Mr. Heywood said.

The group also got an equalized work week set at 37.5 hours. Some had worked 40 hours per week, but will now get overtime pay for time worked over the maximum.

The contract ends next June 30, to coincide with the normal reclassification date common to veterinarians in the past. It gave the group 8 per cent retroactive pay to July 1, 1967 and another seven per cent retroactive to July 1, 1968.

"We didn't expect it to be a marvelous contract. But one establishing a few principles and getting our foot in the door" Mr. Heywood said.

"We are not trying to set the professionals up on a pedestal. But we think that such people as those with a university degree should have different conditions and rules of working than do blue-collar workers.

"We would eventually like to get away from the rigid industrial type of bargaining and get to something less formal."

The institute is concentrating now on establishing basic contracts for other professional groups, including meteorologists, architects, pharmacists, chemists and medical personnel working for the federal government.

Terrorist Guilty

MONTREAL — Charles Gagnon, avowed member of the terrorist Front de Liberation Quebecois, Tuesday was found guilty in Quebec Superior Court on a charge of conspiracy in an attempted holdup at a northend movie theatre Aug. 27, 1966. Gagnon, 28, a former professor at the University of Montreal, said he will appeal the decision.

Before the Magistrate

A man fined $250 for dangerous driving "might as well have been piloting an explosive charge of some kind," Magistrate William Ostler said Tuesday.

Kenneth Dubois, 2763 Jacklin, was ordered to post a $250 six-month good behavior bond. He was also fined $25 for not having a driver's licence and $10 for failing to register his vehicle in this province.

Court was told he was seen driving 60 miles per hour in a 40 mile per hour zone Monday on the Trans-Canada Highway. When chased by Saanich police he increased his speed to 80 until stopped later.

Police said his car had no dashboard and the right rear tire was bald. Dubois told them he was in a hurry to get home because it was his anniversary.

"This car should not be on the highway obviously," said Magistrate Ostler, "and neither should you if you're that type of driver."

Dubois was ordered to attend the showing of the Saanich safety film program Wednesday, prohibited from driving for three months and ordered not to drive his car until it passed the motor vehicle inspection test.

Catherine Kirk, 218 Brian, was fined $100 after pleading guilty to shoplifting $25.71 worth of clothing from the Bay, Sept. 26.

She said she had been emotionally upset that day and a friend who had shoplifted for 19 years without being caught told her it was easy.

Magistrate Ostler said there were a great number of women who feel it is not an offence if they can get away with it.

He said the stores would have to employ hundreds of detectives to catch all the women who have their bags bulging with loot.

Eldon Knott, 81 Howe, was fined $400 after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Before pleading, Mr. Knott said he couldn't understand because he didn't think he was impaired.

Court was told he was observed driving in an erratic manner on Fort Street Monday. He gave a breathalyzer reading of .24.

Magistrate Ostler said it appeared that not only was Knott impaired but he was intoxicated.

Edgar Marshall, 307 Montreal, was fined $100 following conviction on a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency. The offence involved a five-year-old girl, court was told.

Residents Have Planning Role

Voluntary associations make "distinct contributions" to society but they cannot be taken for granted.

This point was made Tuesday by Dr. H. R. Baker of Saskatoon, immediate past president of the Community Planning Association of Canada which is meeting here.

"They fulfill basic human needs of self-expression, power or protection, security, creativity and self-assertion through individual or collective action," he said.

"They diversify power and influence. They may hasten or delay change in our society, depending on the interests involved. We do many things through voluntary action in Canada that would be done only by government in many other parts of the world."

Dr. Baker spoke during a panel discussion on Human Values in Citizen Participation.

"In many ways, and for many reasons, the viability of voluntary associations is being threatened today. Thus we must strive to understand their nature, characteristics, objectives, support and the knowledge, skills and attitudes of their members," he said.

SPECIALISTS

Dr. Baker said today's power relations are increasingly conducted by specialists, highly professionalized staffs whose background, training and experience separate them from others.

He also said problems are being solved increasingly through political process and through public and private administrative structures," "posing an enormous challenge to the traditions of voluntary citizen associations."

And he warned that as community groups grow, define executive powers, hire paid staff and promote membership communication problems develop between different levels, volunteer work declines and "the membership is increasingly removed from the leadership of the organization."

Dr. Baker reported on the results of a questionnaire among 4,852 members of CPAC. Twenty-five per cent replied and 1,120 answers were included in the analysis.

PROBE RESULT

The results showed:

- More than half the respondents live in large cities;
- More than half were university graduates and almost two-thirds had attended university;
- More than half were under 45 years;
- More than half were professionals;
- The largest single group was self-employed with government employees ranking second.

Personal concern for planning and increased personal knowledge were the most significant influential factors making persons become members of CPAC.

The CPAC members were asked to state which groups they considered most influential in community planning.

The result showed this order: advisory planning boards; municipal councils; boards of trade and chambers of commerce; government or professional associations; service clubs; local ratepayers associations; real estate boards; school and parks boards; church and welfare agencies.

'Too Much Talking, Too Little Action'

Too much time is spent studying problems and too little time is used for action, the Community Planning Association of Canada was told at a dinner here Tuesday night.

"So much time is spent on studies that there is no time to push the buttons for solutions," said B.C. Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

"A citizen may be forced to get all his information from the press, and that could be disastrous, or from some politician."

He was speaking on Roadblocks to Citizen Participation at the dinner, sponsored by the B.C. government.

Mr. Campbell said the response in government offices to a citizen's problem can be such that "he may never enter a government office again."

'OVERSTATED'

Then there was the overstated case.

A man he knew told him that the reason one case was overstated was that "no one gets through the communications barrier without doing so."

Mr. Campbell warned that this could result in citizens never responding to "the real cry of wolf."

Then there was the traffic-television symptom. After battling traffic to get home from work, the man turned on his television and "pulled his house around him," keeping him from citizen participation.

And then there was the "disease of unfulfilled expectations, one which is prevalent in this country and the one to the south."

The public was buoyed up by slogans such as Great Society and Just Society.

"After taking a hot emotional bath, the citizen is soon treated to the cold shower of failures—in housing, in planning, boundaries of communities, not coming to grips with transit."

'Small Town Boy' Chides City Slickers

A Prince Rupert alderman attacked the "upper middle class ivory-tower outlook" at the Community Planning Association of Canada convention Tuesday.

Ald. V. B. Ciccone criticized the association's failure to reach the mass of the people following a detailed report by Dr. H. R. Baker, immediate past president of CPAC.

He also took aim at frequent sniping at "politicians" which he said was prevalent in discussions. It seemed to him that more stress was placed on the mechanics of running the organization than on human values.

He said he was a small-town boy, a non-professional and a politician, and he wondered if he had come all the way from Prince Rupert just to validate his membership in another club.

"When, if ever, are we going to get down to the nuts and bolts of planning," he asked.

Local Flyers On Airport Tour

Members of the Victoria section of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association will tour the rescue co-ordination centre at Jericho Beach in Vancouver and the new Vancouver International Airport facilities Oct. 20.

A charter bus will leave Victoria at 10 a.m. and return at 9:15 p.m. Interested persons are asked to contact Roy Parrett at 477-2841 or 382-6411 before Oct. 15.

The tour is part of a continuing program designed to aquaint local flyers with rescue services in the province.

Two Universities Studying Region

SEATTLE (AP)—A joint study of the urban coastal region of Washington and British Columbia will be conducted by the universities of British Columbia and Washington, officials of the latter school said Tuesday.

Effects of metropolitan population expansion and economic growth in the Seattle and Vancouver areas is one of the subjects to be explored.

Dr. Robert W. Collier of UBC will direct the joint venture.

Uvic Editor Named By Acclamation

A second-year student at the University of Victoria has been elected by acclamation to the Alma Mater Society's academic affairs chair.

Bob Higinbotham, editor of the Uvic anti-calendar and student guidebook, will sit on the executive council of the student government's representative assembly.

There are 28 candidates for one other council position and 16 assembly seats. Elections take place Friday on the campus.

COUPLE MAKES PROFIT BY SELLING FAMILY

VALENCIA, Spain (Reuters)—A Spanish couple were arrested at Puerto de Sagunto near here and accused of selling their infant children to childless couples, police said today.

Police said Emiliano Rodriguez, 35, and his wife Antonia, 26, sold their three-year-old daughter Maria de Los Angeles to one couple for 800 pesetas ($12) down, with promise of another payment later of 5,000 pesetas ($72).

They also sold their 18-month-old daughter Maria Rafaela for 1,400 pesetas ($19.20) and their six-month-old son for 500 pesetas ($7.20), police said.

Mill Strikers 'Determined'

Striking shingle workers who walked off the job in two Victoria shingle mills Monday and Tuesday seem "determined" to stand by their demands their spokesman said.

William Bell of Victoria, president of the shingle weavers division of the carpenters union said the 150 workers who walked out at McCarter Shingle Co. Ltd. and Smith Cedar Products Ltd., have been "quite dissatisfied" with contract negotiatings. They have been going on since April.

Gordon Elworthy, a director of the McCarter Company said the strikes seemed wildcat to him.

E. T. Staley of Victoria, president of the B.C. Federation of Labor said the strikes were legal. The union gave 48 hour strike notice Friday.

Mr. Elworthy said contract negotiations between his mill, Smith Cedar, and union officials had been called off "in good faith" Monday to investigate a wildcat strike in a Vancouver mill. The mill, Hunting-Merritt also is involved in the three-company negotiations.

He said men at the McCarter mill walked off work at 7:30 p.m. Monday and the men at Smith Cedar followed suit Tuesday morning.

WILDCAT?

"We were going to meet with union officials again when the Vancouver situation was straightened out," Mr. Elworthy said. "But the next thing I knew our company was struck. This seems to be a three-company wildcat strike but I don't know for sure."

H. A. Smith, of Smith Cedar Products had "no comment" to make this morning.

"Workers at the Victoria mills gave 48 hour strike notice," said Mr. Staley. "It's not their fault that the Forest Industrial Relations (which handles company negotiations) demanded settlement of the Vancouver problem before negotiations be carried on in Vicatoria."

John Billings, president of FIR, said this morning, "We are just waiting for a call from the union to get back to negotiating."

Resumption of negotiations will be discussed at a general membership meeting of the Victoria Labor Council this afternoon.

Mill workers are demanding an hourly pay scale be set up in numerous jobs where men are now paid by piece work. They also demand a wage increase.

"Unless both sides start to negotiate and soon, we could be in for a long and difficult strike," Mr. Staley said.

Community Services List Out

Copies of a new and revised directory of community services is now available through the Community Welfare Council of Greater Victoria.

It contains a complete listing of the services and resources provided in the lower Vancouver Island area of some 120 public and private agencies in the health, welfare, recreation and youth guidance fields.

It's a revision of an earlier publication issued by the welfare council two years ago.

The directory lists all services, the title of the agency's chief executive, its address and telephone number, office hours where applicable, a summary of the services provided, area served, plus sources of operating funds.

Emergency services are also listed.

Orders should be sent to the Welfare Council, No. 307-885 Fort Street. Price is $1.50 each.

Mr. Cross is one of three Canadians who are licensed to judge international competitions. The other two are located in Vancouver.

3 Injured In Motorbike Accidents

Two separate accidents involving motorcycles Tuesday night sent three persons to area hospitals.

In "fairly good" condition in St. Joseph's Hospital is Donald Lamontagne, 19, of 2632 Douglas. He suffered multiple cuts to his legs, ankles and feet.

Police said his motorcycle, northbound on Douglas at 10:04 p.m. went out of control at Queens, mounted the curb, hit a boulevard tree and continued north on the sidewalk hitting a building. It travelled another 100 feet stopping against the side of a car on Field Street at Douglas police said.

Driver of the car was identified as Elizabeth Welch, 723 Field.

Shortly after midnight police said a motorcycle driven east on Fort Street went out of control and hit a power pole on the south side.

Driver was identified as Barry Robbins, 19, of 826 Seymour. His passenger was Gale Jones, 16, of 1684 Lansdowne. Royal Jubilee Hospital officials said both were treated for cuts and bruises and later released.

A man seriously injured in an accident which took the life of his wife early Sunday is still in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital. Robert Schofield, 37, of 404 Superior, suffered chest injuries in the two car crash.

Angler Fined For Exceeding Catch Limit

John Martinoe, 2081 Carrick, was fined $50 Tuesday in Sooke magistrate's court after pleading guilty to having more than four salmon in his possession at one time.

The fine was imposed by Magistrate Eugene Murphy who told the accused there was no excuse for the offence as the Fisheries Act regulations were explicit.

Court was told Martinoe had four dressed coho in his boat and four in his car trunk.

Totally New System Urged For Auto Insurance in B.C.

—AP Wirephoto

OUSTED Peruvian president Fernando Belaude Terry arrived in New York this morning after an unsuccessful attempt Tuesday to return to Lima. Police at the Buenos Aires airport forcibly detained the ousted president (right), from boarding a Lima-bound plane. He was rushed from the airport but later allowed to return to take a flight to New York. He said upon his arrival in the United States that he hoped to lead a movement to fight the army officers who ousted him last week.

'Full Role' Pledged Rebuilding Nigeria

By KEN PRITCHARD

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Sharp today declared Canada's intention "to play a full part" in providing relief immediately needed in Nigeria and in reconstruction when peace comes to the strife-torn African country.

He also said the Canadian United Nations delegation "acknowledges and fully understands" the Organization of African Unity request that world governments not take any action which might jeopardize the unity, territorial integrity and peace of Nigeria.

Sharp, delivering for the first time Canada's keynote speech in the General Assembly, also branded the Soviet-bloc invasion of Czechoslovakia as "naked power politics"; called for progress toward world disarmament, and announced a 25-per-cent increase in Canada's contribution to the United Nations Development Program.

Sharp did not ask for UN action to bring about a ceasefire in Nigeria, despite pressure from some Canadians on the Trudeau government to take such a step.

The Liberal government has been on record as opposing any political intervention in the country where the Ibo tribe is fighting an apparently losing battle for secession from the Nigerian federation.

On Tuesday Sharp rejected appeals here from two opposition MPs that Canada sponsor a UN resolution on Biafra. The appeals were made by David MacDonald, Conservative member for Egmont, and Andrew Brewin, NDP member for Toronto Greenwood, who last week spent 36 hours in Biafra on an unofficial fact-finding mission.

The external affairs minister bore down hard on Canada's willingness to relieve suffering in the country where the United Nations Children's Fund at the end of September estimated between 8,000 and 10,000 persons a day were dying of malnutrition and disease.

Canada has given the International Red Cross $1,000,000, and substantial contributions have been made by Canadian voluntary agencies. As was announced in Ottawa Tuesday, Canada is providing Hercules aircraft and crews to help the Red Cross deliver relief supplies to areas held both by Nigerian and Biafran forces. Nigeria has agreed not to interfere with the flights to Biafra's diminishing territory.

In his general remarks, Sharp asked the 125 members to work

'LBJ Has Time To Help Talks'

PARIS (AP) — Ambassador Xuan Thuy of North Vietnam said today U.S. President Johnson "still has enough time and power" to open the way to a Vietnamese peace by halting attacks on North Vietnam.

North Vietnam's chief delegate spoke at the 25th session of the peace conference.

The meeting ended with U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman telling correspondents the American position has in no way been changed and that today "we made no progress at all."

Harriman told Thuy the United States is willing "to move far and fast" toward peace the minute "your government gives us reason to believe it is also prepared to act."

Canada Sending Planes To Carry Aid to Biafra

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Two Canadian air force Hercules transport planes are tentatively scheduled to leave here Thursday to fly relief supplies into Biafra for the International Red Cross.

But whether they will ever reach there is in doubt, informed sources say. Biafra had no suitable airfield left to accommodate the big planes and they might be able to get no farther than Nigeria.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced in the Commons Tuesday that Canada has obtained Nigerian permission to fly food into shrinking Biafra for the Red Cross. Nigeria reportedly had previously withheld such permission.

Mr. Trudeau said the agreement was worked out by External Affairs Minister Sharp and Nigerian officials in New York. Mr. Sharp is attending the United Nations general assembly.

Under the agreement, Canada will lend planes and crews to the Red Cross to mount a relief airlift into secessionist Biafra, locked in civil war with Nigeria for more than a year.

Previously, the Canadian government had offered the Red Cross one Hercules transport and crew but for flights within Nigerian-controlled territory only.

Mr. Trudeau said he believes the Nigerian change of heart about flights into Biafra might have resulted from Nigeria's desire to show it is not bent on genocide.

Opposition Leader Stanfield said the Canadian government has belatedly discovered that Nigeria had no objection to Canadian relief planes operating in any area affected by the civil war.

He added in an interview on the CBC television program Twenty Million Questions that the agreement with Nigeria appeared to him not so much a matter of negotiation as one of discovering the position of the Nigerian government.

This should have been done weeks ago, Mr. Stanfield said.

Meanwhile, the Commons external affairs committee began urgent meetings on how Canada could get aid to Biafra.

Scheduled to testify this afternoon are two MPs who were in Biafra last week—Andrew Brewin, NDP member for Toronto Greenwood, and David MacDonald, Conservative member for Egmont.

They said Tuesday in New York they had failed to convince Mr. Sharp that Canada should sponsor a UN resolution calling for an immediate ceasefire in Nigeria's civil war.

REPORT HIGHLIGHTS

Total abolition of the present system of third-party liability insurance on vehicles including statutory scrapping of civil court suits to determine proportions of damage pay-out on the basis of blame for an accident;

Establishment of a government-supervised system of compulsory "driver insurance," replacing automobile insurance, on "no fault" basis;

Underwriting continued by private insurance companies with government moves encouraging more effective competition but, if the industry balks at the new scheme, government to go into insurance business directly;

Insurance pay-out of death and injury benefits automatically and usually within one week of an accident regardless of whose fault it was;

No civil litigation over blame — any culpable driving causing the accident to be punished solely through police court actions and insurance to cover damages of the insured only not a third party;

A compulsory "basic" insurance policy to be required as a condition of obtaining a driver's licence — hence each driver in a family or a firm to have his own insurance policy;

An estimated 86 per cent of all B.C. drivers to qualify for cheapest premium — $16.76 a year — of the compulsory basic policy;

Basic policy to provide $20,000 death and $50 a week disability insurance for driver and his dependents no matter where or how they come to harm on a B.C. road;

A special fund to cover persons who do not have a driver in the household so that every British Columbian, and visitor to the province, automatically is covered by the basic death and disability benefits whether in a car, riding a bike or walking across the road;

Basic benefits go with British Columbians wherever they may be on the North American continent—but B.C. drivers going out of province will have to take out regular third-party liability insurance when driving a car beyond provincial borders if they want protection against damage suits elsewhere;

Supplementary policies for more death and injury benefit and coverage of collision damage repairs to insured's own vehicle to be made available on normal basis with voluntary purchase of policies by drivers who want more than the basic coverage;

But even the voluntary supplementary policies to make pay-out on a "no fault" basis to eliminate litigation;

Basic compulsory policy to cost a maximum of $16.76 to $26.48—depending on driver's record as determined by the new Motor Vehicles Branch "penalty point" system;

Premiums for basic policy to be set by a new three-man B.C. Automobile Insurance Board which also will hear appeals against insurance company actions, keep statistics on drivers and make recommendations to government on changes in plan;

An independent safety research laboratory to be operated by the board, and with it a special fund to cover non-subscribers financed through increase of less than a cent to the present 13-cents-per-gallon gasoline tax and 15-cents-per-gallon diesel fuel tax;

Minimum driver age stepped up from 16 to 18 years of age but 16-18 group may get licence if approved driving school course is completed satisfactorily;

Eventually, all persons applying for first B.C. driver's licence to be required first to pass a driving school course;

Drivers licences to be renewed annually instead of every five years as at present with both licence and compulsory basic insurance issued on individual's birthdate;

More than one accident to increase driver's record of penalty points, changing category of his licence and his insurance premium;

Commercial drivers and motorcyclists to be treated the same as private automobile drivers.

Saigon Coup Fails

SAIGON (AP)—A coup against the South Vietnamese government of President Nguyen Van Thieu was thwarted Tuesday night, a reliable government source said today.

Other informed sources said several ranking South Vietnamese marine officers, ranging from majors to colonels, had been arrested.

The disclosure of the coup attempt follows by hours an announcement that South Vietnamese armed forces were placed on full alert Tuesday afternoon.

The high government source said: "You can expect a lot of people to be arrested in the next few days, all as a result of the coup attempt that failed."

This source said details of the coup attempt were still incomplete and it was not yet known who was behind it or how widespread it was.

OFFICERS HELD

The fact that several marine officers were arrested could indicate the involvement of Lt.-Gen. Le Nguyen Khang, the marine commandant and a close political ally of Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, the president's political rival. This could not be confirmed. Khang's whereabouts were not known.

Marine units in the Saigon area recently were replaced by Rangers at the order of Thieu, reports said, because he feared a coup of Khang.

Since he became president last October, Thieu has been consolidating his power, mostly at the expense of Ky. As part of this, Thieu stripped Khang of his posts of 3rd Corps commander and commander of the capital military district.

Compensation Guaranteed; Lawsuits Out

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

British Columbia's present system of auto insurance should not be revised; it should be scrapped and a totally new system set up in its place.

This is the revolutionary conclusion of the Wootton Royal Commission on Automobile Insurance after 30 months of exhaustive hearings, intensive research spanning four continents and expenditure of more than $300,000 in public funds.

The other two members of the commission headed by Mr. Justice R. A. B. Wootton were Dr. Peter Lusztig, an economist in the commerce department at the University of British Columbia, and C. E. S. Walls, then executive director of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture and a member of the Carter Commission on Taxation.

Its report, completed July 30 and released today, came to the conclusion that the entire present system of auto insurance is based on the wrong principle.

With breath-taking courage and aplomb, it recommended the whole elaborate edifice of complicated rate structuring and civil court precedents on accident suits be thrown out.

System 'Would Be Unique'

To replace it, a system which would be unique in the western world should be ushered through the legislature, the commission recommended, in order to:

- Give motorists a better and fairer break on the relationship of premiums to benefits;
- Eliminate the injustices, economic losses and worries involved in long delays because of court calendars plugged with lawsuits;
- Guarantee that every man, woman and child walking, bicycling or riding in a vehicle on the province's roads is covered for death and injury compensation in the event of an accident no matter whose fault.

In addition, the commission suggested, its proposal would give a realistic hope of cutting down the rate of traffic accidents where the present system has proved a total failure.

The commission also concluded that a momentary lapse in the concentration needed for driving on today's congested highways doesn't automatically constitute negligence and therefore the system of suing in court for recovery of damages on the basis of who is to blame for an accident is unsound and hopelessly inadequate in assuring compensation to all.

The most dramatic consequence of this conclusion is a recommendation that all traffic accident insurance benefits be paid out on a "no-fault" basis which would completely eliminate the delays, inadequacies and costs of lawsuits which are the hallmark of the present system.

Elimination Of All Lawsuits

The elimination of lawsuits would be effected by a statutory prohibition against going to court to recover damages from "the other guy" in an accident even if he was to blame.

A similar prohibition already exists in the Workmen's Compensation Act under which a workman cannot normally sue his employer for more money if he is covered by WCA benefits.

With a universal, mandatory "self-insurance" scheme, the commission said, the need for lawsuits to obtain compensation doesn't arise and it eliminates the bad double jeopardy that now exists under which civil as well as police court penalties can hit the same person for one accident.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, who released the report at 4 p.m. today, said with feeling that "the report does represent an imaginative and revolutionary approach to the problems of auto insurance."

Perhaps intending an oblique warning to the private auto insurance industry — criticized on several grounds by the commission — he continued:

"Whether one agrees with the recommendations in the report or not, I think everyone will agree this commission has done a tremendous amount of work and their recommendations are worthy of serious consideration."

Mr. Peterson said cabinet has not had a chance to study or discuss the report and the unusually far-reaching implications will have to be studied in great detail by several branches of government, because of the immense changes in law that would be involved in implementation.

Need Time To Study Report

He stressed that it was out of the question to even hint whether the report would be implemented in whole or part because the government simply didn't know yet.

But if it is acted upon, here are some of the major changes which will occur in the average B.C. motorists' world.

He will:

Renew his driver licence annually instead of every five years and, in order to get it, will have to purchase a compulsory "basic" insurance policy covering himself and his household with a $20,000 death benefit and a $50-a-week disability payment, for as long as warranted, including life;

Every year, before his birthday, get a driver licence application form from the government — colored according to his driving record based on the new penalty points for traffic regulation violations or multiplicity of accidents — which he will take to his regular private insurance agent for a statutory certificate corres-

One opening of the British Columbia Legislative Assembly is much like another. The party swords are sheathed, or almost so. There are reunions and greetings, brilliant pageantry, frothy hats and crowded galleries. Most years, one or two of the polished brown desks on the floor of the House will have new faces behind them.

These belong to freshman members whose entry to the red-carpeted cockpit was won in election or byelection.

Among the legislature's new boys at the 1963 opening was a young neurologist whose name woke an echo. McGeer. Dr. Patrick L. McGeer. He had taken one of the two Vancouver-Point Grey seats the previous December, and as seen from the press gallery, he looked more like a new-fledged university graduate than an MLA.

But he was a nephew of Gerald Gratton McGeer, unquenchable Vancouver mayor of the depression years, who gave his town a new city hall and took his tough red Irish mug to Ottawa as MP and later as a senator.

In his earlier years, Gerry McGeer had been a provincial member, and a rambunctious one. Perhaps some of his Irish had rubbed off on his spectacled nephew.

★

It had, and the proof was not long in coming. Opening day fuss and feathers over, legislators turned to their speeches. Pat McGeer's turn came. He rose, to the round of desk-slapping that greets a new member's maiden effort.

From the start it was apparent that he meant to do more than merely chase the devil around a stump. He took aim at Attorney-General Robert Bonner, who had regained the other Vancouver-Point Grey seat for Social Credit, and loosed shaft after shaft.

The performance, as I noted at the time, reminded me of a hound-pup rushing in on a cougar. The House held no more formidable opponent in debate than Mr. Bonner. With cold precision, the A-G proceeded to give the newcomer a verbal bloodying.

It was plain, however, that the cocky little Liberal group had gained a sturdy recruit, and one worth keeping an eye on.

Pat McGeer fitted well into Liberal leader Ray Perrault's commando of redhot individualists. He might lead with his chin rather too frequently, as shrewd Gordon Gibson once observed to me, but he gained stature with each session.

I suspect that even then, Ray Perrault saw qualities of leadership in him.

Ray, a man in whom kindness and dogged courage are blended, told me once by an alder fire that he would hold the B.C. leadership of his party only until the 'right' man appeared to take it over.

If Pat McGeer is that man—if he can indeed lead B.C. Liberalism to its promised land—let Ray Perrault be remembered as the durable foot-slogger who brought his people through the wilderness.

★

Everyone in any way connected with a legislative session emerges from it bone-weary. Once when a session was well along, Pat McGeer, his house leader, and a couple of newsmen decided that a forenoon on a golf course would have a tonic effect.

Pat, a golfer, had his own clubs. The rest of us rented equipment at a local course, stowed light refreshment in our bags, and struggled forth on a bright spring morning.

The newsmen's performance is better overlooked. Ray Perrault played a canny game. It was plain from the first tee, however, that our fourth brought the same approach to golf that he did to politics.

He played with controlled exuberance. He drove hard, and lacking competition elsewhere, he competed against himself.

Now a veteran of the house and provincial Liberal leader at 41, Dr. Patrick L. McGeer faces the entrenched and wily Goliath of B.C. politics.

It's a stern challenge, but I venture to think that he is up to it.

Uvic Faculty, Board Adopt Academic Freedom Policy

Document Details Tenure Provisions

The University of Victoria has adopted a new statement on academic freedom and tenure.

The Faculty Association ratified the document at a general meeting Tuesday. Its contents, previously approved by the Board of Governors, now become university policy.

Procedures are spelled out for the appointment, promotion and dismissal of faculty members, and for decision-making on contract renewals and the granting of tenure.

The document is the product of a special committee named last year after a crisis developed over the non-renewal of contracts for three popular and controversial teachers.

Tenure is described in the document as "the most important step in the relations between the university and the faculty member"—a traditional guarantee of permanent employment, subject only to formal dismissal proceedings "for cause."

It is designed to protect academic freedom from outside pressures, where faculty have proved their worth as scholars and shown high responsibility in their teaching.

The document says granting of tenure must be considered for each full-time academic appointee within his first five years of university service. Any rank above that of lecturer may carry tenure.

GET ONE YEAR

When a decision is made during a final contract year not to grant tenure or offer reappointment, faculty will be entitled to a one-year terminal appointment.

Decisions, made on the recommendation of committees drawn from the individual's own teaching area, will be subject to appeal to an all-university review committee.

The committee will consist of five members elected annually — three from the faculty of Arts and Science, one from the Faculty of Education, and one from the School of Fine Arts.

The document also provides for hearings in cases involving dismissal. These will be handled by a three-man group to be known as the standing arbitration committee, selected each year by the university president and the president of the faculty Association from faculties outside the university.

All teaching appointments, the document states, "term or tenured, are entitled to academic freedom."

This is defined in part as "the right of a faculty member, free from the threat of institutional reprisals and without regard to outside influence, to teach, investigate, publish and speculate without deference to prescribed doctrine, to participate in the formulation of academic policies, and to criticize the university."

'AS HE SEES IT'

The responsibilities that must accompany academic freedom are outlined in a statement on professional ethics. Included is the duty of a professor "to seek and to state the truth as he sees it," to encourage the free pursuit of learning in his students, and to respect and defend the rights of his associates.

Dr. James E. Hendrickson, president of the Faculty Association, described the tenure document as "the product of many months—even years—of work by numerous colleagues."

Dr. Hendrickson and Dean R. T. Wallace, the university's acting president, agreed that the document would vitally affect every faculty member and spur university development.

Skipper Pleads Not Guilty To All Charges

By JOHN SLINGER

Three charges of negligence today were read against Cmdr. Norman S. Jackson, skipper of HMCS Saskatchewan, a destroyer-escort damaged September 8 in a collision with a submerged rock in Active Pass.

Cmdr. Jackson was paraded before a court martial convened in the wardroom at CFB Esquimalt. He pleaded not guilty.

In the grey, packed courtroom, Cmdr. Jackson, a heavy-set ruddy-face 42 year old, unbuckled his ceremonial sword and ritually placed it on a green-draped table before the court.

In the collision, Saskatchewan's hull and propellers were badly damaged and the ship required $15,000 temporary repairs to continue in service.

The court president, Capt. Frederick C. Frewer, Esquimalt base commander, and his four-man court, heard charges that Cmdr. Jackson "negligently hazarded" the ship, "negligently suffered to be hazarded" the ship and "negligently performed a military duty imposed upon him."

TRIED ON ALL

Cmdr. H. C. Ferne of Ottawa, the judge advocate, told the court that although the second charge is laid as an alternative to the first, Cmdr. Jackson will be tried on all three.

Particulars of the first two charges are identical.

They state that between 10:30 and 11 a.m., on passage from Vancouver to Esquimalt, the accused "failed to take adequate precaution to ensure the safe approach to and transit of Active Pass."

The third charge states that on Sept. 7 or 8, the accused "failed to exercise adequate supervision of the preparation and execution of the passage plan ..."

It says such supervision "was his duty as captain to do."

Defence counsel is Cmdr. J. L. Henderson of Ottawa.

The court martial is expected to last several days.

FIRE-FIGHTING TRIO PRESENTING AWARDS

Miss Fire Prevention—15-year-old Elaine Wurban—is carrying the 1968 Fire Prevention message to local residents during Fire Prevention Week.

She and her attendants, Marlene Olson and Lorraine Hobbs, are presenting awards to some of the 1,000 students competing in an essay, slogan and poster contest sponsored by the Department of National Defence Fire Department at the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt.

They presented 66 awards to students at John Stubbs Memorial School, Belmont Park, Tuesday, when entertainment was provided by Jerry Gosley and accordionist Al Denoni.

Today they presented awards at the Canadian Services College, Royal Roads. Thursday at 2 p.m. they will make presentations at the Ammunition Depot, Rocky Point; Friday at 2 p.m. they will visit Metchosin elementary school.

Accused Known To Theft Victim

A 21-year-old Toronto man charged with theft of a car from Melvin R. Butler at 4580 Sumner Place was formerly a guest in his home, it was stated in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday.

Peter Simpson is on trial in Assize Court for robbery, breaking and entering and car theft on May 10 last.

Mr. Butler, a seaman, testified that Simpson and another man were overnight guests in his home last April. He said the accused had seen firearms in his home, which were stolen on the night of May 10-11.

Simpson is charged with breaking, entering and theft from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Monty Aldous, 4580 Sumner Place; theft of a car belonging to Mrs. Aldous' son, Butler; and theft from Raymond Victor Moorhouse, an employee of Ernie's Fine Foods.

He is the only survivor of a car crash that killed two other men May 11 when the car slammed into a tree at View Royal while being chased by Esquimalt police.

When the trial resumed today, Mrs. Aldous testified that two rifles, two pistols, a pair of binoculars and several bottles of liquor were stolen from her home between May 10 and 11 last.

Mrs. Aldous said she and her husband left their home on Friday, May 10, and returned Saturday afternoon, May 11.

The house had been broken into and a number of articles stolen.

Two revolvers were produced in court and Mrs. Aldous said one was identical with one owned by her son, Butler.

"Can you positively identify it as your son's property?" asked defence counsel David Skillings. "Are there any special marks on it that you recognize?"

"No," Mrs. Aldous replied, "but it looks the same."

Earlier, Mrs. Aldous testified that her son owned a Chevrolet convertible very similar to the car which crashed at View Royal. She said the car disappeared from in front of their home during their visit to Vancouver.

Crown prosecutor Louis Lindholm said three men, masked with sweaters, held up a male employee at Ernie's Fine Foods on May 10 and escaped with $150.

A similar sum was recovered from the car after it crashed into a tree.

When the trial opened Monday, Simpson conducted his own defence because he said he could not get free legal aid.

But on Tuesday, Mr. Skillings appeared for the defence. Crown prosecutor Lindholm said Mr. Skilling has been retained on behalf of the accused by the attorney-general's department at the request of Mr. Justice J. S. Aikens.

The trial continued this afternoon.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you tell me what year the Uplands (Oak Bay) was developed, who were the owners and who put the restrictions there?—E.C.F.

A. The old Uplands Farm, a 500-acre section of land south of Cadboro Bay and fronting on the sea, was first owned by the Hudson's Bay Company. A Times article of Feb. 28, 1907 records the sale of this "delightful tract" to J. H. Oldfield and W. H. Gardner of Winnipeg for development as a residential area. The sale was made by C. C. Chipman, chief commissioner for the company in Winnipeg. The initial plan was for a subdivision in which the original owners would have certain policy-making powers. It was not until 1935 that statute law gave power over the area to the municipality of Oak Bay. Any restrictions, therefore, prior to 1935 were placed on the land by the owners at the time.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve [illegible] or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

'Dear Student' Letters Dashed Off by Premier

Premier W. A. C. Bennett has sent letters to 1,400 students at Centennial High School in Coquitlam defending his government's school construction policy.

The letters, costing $70 in postage, are in reply to 1,600 letters Centennial students brought to Education Minister Brothers Sept. 30, urging the government to release funds for 10 new school sites.

The students were also critical of overcrowding which forced 4,200 in the Coquitlam School District on shift classes.

Mr. Bennett's letters were to arrive at the school today, a day after his announcement that the government is releasing $421,000 for the purchase of six school sites in the district.

He said in the letters:

"Before dealing specifically with the situation with regard to classrooms in Coquitlam, I would like to remind you that we are living in a highly inflationary period in which it is difficult to obtain money and extremely difficult to obtain it at a reasonable rate."

Of 731 classrooms approved for construction in B.C., Mr. Bennett said 146 or 20 per cent were in Coquitlam district.

"The shift system is not necessarily bad," the premier said.

TEACHERS SUPPORT GOVERNMENT CENSURE

Tom Hutchison, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, has announced support of the B.C. School Trustees Association in its censure of the provincial government for failing to lift the freeze on school construction.

Mr. Hutchison said the implications of the freeze were recognized last Easter when the teachers agreed to a $3 assessment to pay for a campaign aimed at informing the public on the effects of the government's education finance policies.

"We have been attempting ever since then to let the public know of the implications of the freeze and we heartily commend the action of the trustees," he said.

Mr. Hutchison said he was pleased the government released $422,000 for school site acquisition in Coquitlam, a Vancouver suburb, but said "it was a pity that teachers and the school board had to involve public pressure to bring government attention to an obvious educational need."

AMBASSADOR IN TOWN

Ireland Struggles To Slacken Exodus

Ireland is trying to keep her men at home.

More than 2,000 Irishmen emigrated to Canada in 1967 and a similar number entered the United States.

"That is too many for our own good," says Hon. William Warnock, Ireland's ambassador to Canada, now visiting Victoria for the first time.

"We are striving to give our men the kind of living standards that will keep them home," Mr. Warnock said, "and by 1970 we hope emigration will be reduced to a mere trickle.

"Our industries have increased tremendously over the past 20 years and there is much more incentive for Irishmen to marry and settle down in their native land.

"Historically, Ireland was a poor country and our men had good reason to seek opportunities abroad."

The Irish ambassador and Mrs. Warnock were entertained at lunch at Government House today by Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John Nicholson.

This afternoon, Mr. Warnock called on Premier Bennett at the Legislative Buildings.

'USEFUL CONTACTS'

"My purpose is to make useful contacts with the B.C. government and leaders of industry with a view to improving balance of our trade with Canada."

In 1967 Ireland bought $5,100,000 worth of goods from Canada, while Canada bought $1,800,000 from Ireland. Her chief Canadian imports are lumber, paper, wheat and aluminum. Canada imports Irish textiles, surgical goods, glass and footwear.

Ireland is also importing an increasing number of tourists from Canada.

"I haven't seen the figure yet," Mr. Warnock said, "but this could be a record year for our tourist industry. We encourage visitors to Britain and Europe to stop off at Shannon Airport (near Limerick) and tour Ireland before resuming their journey.

"The best way to do this is to hire a car, and our car rentals have increased enormously over the past two years."

Mr. and Mrs. Warnock will attend a reception given by Irish immigrants in Vancouver Thursday. They return to Ottawa Sunday.

Majority Drink in Grade 12 At Oak Bay High, Panel Told

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The majority of Grade 12 students at one Victoria school drink and have been drunk, a panel discussion was told Tuesday.

Two-thirds of the boys and one-third of the girls gave yes answers to these questions in a survey while five per cent "said they weren't sure," reported student Pat Wolfe.

He was speaking at a panel entitled Youth and Adult Viewpoints on Human Values Today organized by the annual convention of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

The survey was taken among Grade 12 students at Oak Bay senior secondary school.

Other results showed that 60 per cent believe in God, 12 per cent have taken drugs and 10 per cent of them would take drugs again.

Mr. Wolfe said, however, that the RCMP has a list of 150 students at Oak Bay High who have taken drugs "and that's 20 per cent."

Ninety per cent thought students should have more say in education and 85 per cent believe there is a generation gap and it will probably continue.

Thirty per cent said violence could be justified and 35 per cent said they thought free love "was all right, it was good."

He added that "the males were more daring, females were more cautious."

Another panelist, Bruce Fryer of Mount Douglas Senior Secondary School wondered if the results of the survey are accurate.

"The poll might not be taken too seriously by the kids," he said. "Will young people show true values in a test like that?"

A graduate student at the University of Victoria, Elizabeth Meiken, reported the results of a survey she did among 150 high school students in Courtenay and 150 high school students in Victoria.

Describing the results as "not startling," she said in both areas scenery and outdoor recreation were the two aspects which high school students tended to value most.

Next came people, and youth tended to like old buildings. Many valued the cleanliness of air, land and water. They found Victoria streets "very clean" and felt there are areas in the Inner Harbor and Esquimalt which need urban renewal.

In an adult panel later in the day, a Vancouver teacher urged the development of a sense of involvement among high school students.

Charles Bryfogle, who teaches social studies at Sir William Churchill Secondary School, said that for every committed and interested person there are 10 who are not.

The reason people don't generally become involved as adults is because they feel incompetent "so they do nothing and leave it to the politicians," he said.

High school students can deal with issues and problems and most of them won't go on to universities.

"Students have points of view and these should be brought out in secondary schools," he said.

"If they know how to do it at high school, a good many will carry it on later."

. . . AUTO INSURANCE

pending to the color and saying he has bought the compulsory "basic" insurance policy from the firm;

The premium cost of the basic insurance will be a government-controlled maximum (this insurance agent can cut the price if he wishes but not exceed it) of $26.76 for a white licence (three penalty points or less), green licence $22.36 (up to five penalty points), yellow licence $22.91 (up to seven points) and red licence $26.48 (over seven points).

This policy would give him and non-subscriber members of his household a $20,000 death benefit and a $50-a-week disability payment for as long as necessary in case of injury by a traffic accident. The benefits would apply to housewives, unemployed and children (at reduced scales for those under 18) as well as to workers.

Will Not Cover Property Damage

It would not cover medical, hospital or income losses if these already are provided through B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, medicare plans and Workmen's Compensation.

It would not cover property damage or liability to other persons in the accident because everyone would be responsible for insuring his own self, nor harm to third parties.

But each driver in the family would have to take out a separate insurance policy, including wife and any children 18 or over.

The minimum age for a driver's licence would be raised from the present 16 to 18, but those in the 16 to 18-year group could qualify on graduation from an approved driving school. And all first-time applicants for a B.C. licence would start out at the green licence stage.

This insurance policy would go with the driver wherever he went on the continent as a motorist — no matter whose car he used — or a bicyclist or a pedestrian. Other non-subscribers in his household would be similarly covered.

He would pay a fraction of a cent more per gallon in gasoline or diesel fuel tax (currently 13 and 15 cents respectively) to finance a fund which would provide the same benefits for other British Columbians who do not have a driver in the household and therefore no policy protection.

This means that car-less persons and families would also be covered for the $20,000 death benefit and $50-weekly disability allowance if involved in a traffic mishap in B.C. The same coverage would extend to visitors inside the province's boundaries.

Special Fund For Research

The special fund also would finance an independent research laboratory under a government agency which would try to develop and test techniques, principles, equipment and regulations that could reduce accidents.

A motorist—such as a professional man—who would not be satisfied with a $20,000 ceiling on death benefit for his survivors could purchase voluntarily a supplementary policy over and above the basic minimum. This also would be self-insurance too, not coverage for liability to damages caused to a third party.

He could also buy a policy, voluntarily, to cover his own automobile repair costs in event of an accident.

But a B.C. car driver beyond the province's boundaries — unless other provinces adopt the same scheme — would have to be covered by the present third-party liability policies to protect the owner in case the car was in an accident in an area where the traditional insurance approach was used.

Otherwise, he could be sued directly to pay out of his own pocket any judgment found against him in a civil court outside British Columbia.

But inside the province, if the commission's recommendations are implemented, the aftermath of a traffic accident would be totally changed.

Here's what would happen:

Any Victim Can Make Application

Any victims — bereaved or injured — of the mishap, regardless of how it happened or who was to blame, could apply within a maximum of 60 days for the automatic benefits under the compulsory "basic" insurance covering everyone.

There would be no lawsuits to determine who did what wrong in the split seconds before impact and therefore who should pay what proportion of the claimed damages to whom.

The whole argument over blame would only occur in a court if criminal charges laid. There would not be a civil trial.

Instead, after a waiting period of one week, the insurance benefits would be paid out immediately directly to the persons covered, by their own insurance company.

In the case of death, the pay-out would be $20,000 to the legal survivor if the victim was 18 years old or over; $15,000 if he was 16 or 17, $10,000 if he was 12 to 15, $5,000 if he was 10 or 11, $3,000 if he was 6 to 9, and $1,000 if he was five or less.

If the victim also had been insured for the voluntary supplementary benefits, the survivor would also be paid immediately these benefits — again regardless of blame and without law suit.

$50 A Week Compensation

These benefits would apply whether the dead person had a driver's licence (and was consequently insurance subscriber) or not, and whether or not he was killed while driving, riding or walking on the road.

If a person was injured to the point they could not carry on normal activities — whether a lumberjack, housewife, retired person or a grade-school pupil — they would (again after a one-week wait) begin collecting the $50 a week disability until they returned to normal. Coverage would go on for life if necessary.

However, persons injured in a traffic accident during working hours would draw workmen's compensation allowances instead, if they applied.

Medical and hospital expenses would be covered, too, but by the usual agencies wherever they applied. Visitors and others who might not qualify for BCHIS or medicare would then be covered out of the special fund financed by gas tax.

The weekly disability allowances also would be scaled down for the under-18 group. The allowances would be $40, $25, $20, $15 and $10 for the corresponding age groups in the death benefit scale.

Aside from any criminal charges that might arise, the drivers involved in the accident would have it recorded on their driving records.

No Penalty Points For First

There would be no penalty points put on a driver's record for one accident, but any repetition within a five-year period would result in a scaled-up number of penalty points according to the number of accidents.

These penalty points, combined with reported "violations" of traffic regulations (under the experimental system now underway in Greater Victoria by which moving traffic offences result in violation reports to the motor vehicles branch rather than traffic charges) would decide what color licence the motorist would have the following year.

A driver's record would change—for the better or for the worse—depending on his actual record on the road.

The commission pointed out that the present system under which insurance premiums are used to penalize drivers involved in accidents (without regard to their record of traffic violations) is not working and never should have been used as a method of ruling bad drivers off the road.

A new government agency known as the B.C. Automobile Insurance Board would supervise the compulsory insurance plan, hear appeals from subscribers unsatisfied with their treatment by insurance companies, keep traffic records and operate the safety research laboratory.

The board would be composed of a civil servant as chairman, another cabinet appointee who had special qualifications but no connection with either the civil service or insurance industry, and a third member nominated by the insurance industry.

McCarthy Won't Back Humphrey

The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Sen. Eugene McCarthy refused to endorse the Democratic presidential ticket Tuesday nigt and told his audience that the party unity was no more acceptable today than it was a year ago.

The Minnesota Democrat, who lost the nomination to Vice-President Humphrey, chose a fund-raising dinner for New York Senate candidate Paul O'Dwyer to break the political silence he had maintained since the Chicago convention.

"The call goes up now for party unity," McCarthy told 1,500 guests at the New York Hilton Hotel, "but this is the same thing urged on us a year ago when we first began to challenge . . .

NOTHING CHANGED

"I see no reason why if the cry for unity then was not acceptable, it's any more acceptable today," he said, sending a large section of his audience to its feet.

McCarthy's long-awaited position statement was a blow to the Humphrey camp, which over the last few weeks have painstakingly nudged toward the peace position in the hope of retaining disaffected followers of McCarthy and the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Humphrey's Vietnam speech in Salt Lake City last week, in which he indicated he was more receptive to the idea of a bombing pause, was interpreted as a direct bid to peace-movement Democrats and independents.

THREE CONDITIONS

But McCarthy did not buy this. Instead, he set up three conditions, which he implied if accepted by Humphrey might win his support.

He stated them in his speech Tuesday night as:

Acceptance of a new government in South Vietnam. "We're not to be satisfied with a declared intention of free elections sometime in the future," he said, "but a clear presentation that we have to be willing to accept a new government in Vietnam because that's what the war's been about."

- Draft reform in the United States that would spread the responsibility of "moral judgment" over the entire population. He was vague but seemed to be referring to system that would select its draftees more equitably and give youths the right to refuse induction on the basis of moral opposition to the Vietnam war.
- Reform of the Democratic party "so that we shall not have another Chicago."

Soviet Trial Opens

MOSCOW (Reuters)—Pavel Litvinov, physicist grandson of Maxim Litvinov, Stalin's long-time foreign minister, went on trial today for publicly protesting the Soviet-led occupation of Czechoslovakia. Also on trial were four other protesters — including Larisa Daniel, wife of imprisoned author Yuli Daniel. They were arrested after a brief demonstration in Red Square Aug. 25.

Fire Scare At Empress

Smoke from a welding operation that drifted into the Empress Hotel early today caused a fire scare that turned out to be a false alarm.

Hotel officials said welding took place around the outside of the conservatory shortly after 10 o'clock but no flames broke out. Victoria fire department attended and checked the area for sparks, wetting down several places.

Shooting of Jaywalker Sparks Racial Violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — A neighborhood still bearing the scars of last April's riots was hit by a brief but violent racial disorder Tuesday night after a white policeman killed a Negro man he had stopped for jaywalking.

Helmeted police moved in quickly to saturate the slum neighborhood after word spread rapidly on the streets that Elijah Bennett, 22, had been "shot for jaywalking."

Moving from corner to corner in shotgun-armed cars, they fired tear gas to disperse crowds of 250 persons or less in a half-dozen-block area.

This is an area that was hit by riots following the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Tuesday's damage was confined to one fire-gutted three-storey auto supply store, and two dozen or so smashed windows, notably those in the showroom of an automobile display room.

By midnight, the streets had been cleared of all but a few stone-throwers. Only one arrest was reported.

Acting Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson said the policeman, David A. Roberts, was riding his motorcycle to the scene of an accident when he saw a truck stopped blowing its horn at a man crossing in front of it.

When he reached the curb, Wilson said, Roberts asked the man to stop but he kept walking. The patrolman then parked his motorcycle and walked up to the man, the acting chief said, telling him "Sir, I want to talk to you."

At that point, Wilson related, the man struck Roberts in the shoulder, still saying nothing, then pummelled the policeman's face and mouth. Roberts, feeling he was losing consciousness, drew his pistol and fired once, the acting chief said.

Condition Critical

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) —The smallest of the five surviving Thorns sextuplets had an intestinal obstruction removed by surgery Tuesday night and was reported in critical condition.

Lynn Thorns, whose inability to digest mother's milk had worried doctors since her birth a week ago, was operated on at Birmingham Children's Hospital.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, OCT. 9, 1968—PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

One opening of the British Columbia Legislative Assembly is much like another. The party swords are sheathed, or almost so. There are reunions and greetings, brilliant pageantry, frothy hats and crowded galleries. Most years, one or two of the polished brown desks on the floor of the House will have new faces behind them.

These belong to freshman members whose entry to the red-carpeted cockpit was won in election or byelection.

Among the legislature's new boys at the 1963 opening was a young neurologist whose name woke an echo: McGeer. Dr. Patrick L. McGeer. He had taken one of the two Vancouver-Point Grey seats the previous December, and as seen from the press gallery, he looked more like a new-fledged university graduate than an MLA.

But he was a nephew of Gerald Gratton McGeer, unquenchable Vancouver mayor of the depression years, who gave his town a new city hall and took his tough red Irish mug to Ottawa as MP and later as a senator.

In his earlier years, Gerry McGeer had been a provincial member, and a rambunctious one. Perhaps some of his Irish had rubbed off on his spectacled nephew.

★

It had, and the proof was not long in coming. Opening day fuss and feathers over, legislators turned to their speeches. Pat McGeer's turn came. He rose, to the round of desk-slapping that greets a new member's maiden effort.

From the start it was apparent that he meant to do more than merely chase the devil around a stump. He took aim at Attorney-General Robert Bonner, who had regained the other Vancouver-Point Grey seat for Social Credit, and loosed shaft after shaft.

The performance, as I noted at the time, reminded me of a hound-pup rushing in on a cougar. The House held no more formidable opponent in debate than Mr. Bonner. With cold precision, the A-G proceeded to give the newcomer a verbal bloodying.

It was plain, however, that the cocky little Liberal group had gained a sturdy recruit, and one worth keeping an eye on.

Pat McGeer fitted well into Liberal leader Ray Perrault's commando of redhot individualists. He might lead with his chin rather too frequently, as shrewd Gordon Gibson once observed to me, but he gained stature with each session.

I suspect that even then, Ray Perrault saw qualities of leadership in him.

Ray, a man in whom kindness and dogged courage are blended, told me once by an alder fire that he would hold the B.C. leadership of his party only until the 'right' man appeared to take it over.

If Pat McGeer is that man—if he can indeed lead B.C. Liberalism to its promised land—let Ray Perrault be remembered as the durable foot-slogger who brought his people through the wilderness.

★

Everyone in any way connected with a legislative session emerges from it bone-weary. Once when a session was well along, Pat McGeer, his house leader, and a couple of newsmen decided that a forenoon on a golf course would have a tonic effect.

Pat, a golfer, had his own clubs. The rest of us rented equipment at a local course, stowed light refreshment in our bags, and straggled forth on a bright spring morning.

The newsmen's performance is better overlooked. Ray Perrault played a canny game. It was plain from the first tee, however, that our fourth brought the same approach to golf that he did to politics.

He played with controlled exuberance. He drove hard, and lacking competition elsewhere, he competed against himself.

Now a veteran of the house and provincial Liberal leader at 41, Dr. Patrick L. McGeer faces the entrenched and wily Goliath of B.C. politics.

It's a stern challenge, but I venture to think that he is up to it.

'Dear Student' Letters Dashed Off by Premier

Premier W. A. C. Bennett has sent letters to 1,400 students at Centennial High School in Coquitlam defending his government's school construction policy.

The letters, costing $70 in postage, are in reply to 1,600 letters Centennial students brought to Education Minister Brothers Sept. 30, urging the government to release funds for 10 new school sites.

The students were also critical of overcrowding which forced 4,200 in the Coquitlam School District on shift classes.

Mr. Bennett's letters were to arrive at the school today, a day after his announcement that the government is releasing $421,000 for the purchase of six school sites in the district.

He said in the letters:

"Before dealing specifically with the situation with regard to classrooms in Coquitlam, I would like to remind you that we are living in a highly inflationary period in which it is difficult to obtain money and extremely difficult to obtain it at a reasonable rate."

Of 731 classrooms approved for construction in B.C., Mr. Bennett said 146 or 20 per cent were in Coquitlam district.

"The shift system is not necessarily bad," the premier said.

TEACHERS SUPPORT GOVERNMENT CENSURE

Tom Hutchison, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, has announced support of the B.C. School Trustees Association in its censure of the provincial government for failing to lift the freeze on school construction.

Mr. Hutchison said the implications of the freeze were recognized last Easter when the teachers agreed to a $3 assessment to pay for a campaign aimed at informing the public on the effects of the government's education finance policies.

"We have been attempting ever since then to let the public know of the implications of the freeze and we heartily commend the action of the trustees," he said.

Mr. Hutchison said he was pleased the government released $422,000 for school site acquisition in Coquitlam, a Vancouver suburb, but said "it was a pity that teachers and the school board had to involve public pressure to bring government attention to an obvious educational need."

AMBASSADOR IN TOWN

Ireland Struggles To Slacken Exodus

Ireland is trying to keep her men at home.

More than 2,000 Irishmen emigrated to Canada in 1967 and a similar number entered the United States.

"That is too many for our own good," says Hon. William Warnock, Ireland's ambassador to Canada, now visiting Victoria for the first time.

"We are striving to give our men the kind of living standards that will keep them home," Mr. Warnock said, "and by 1970 we hope emigration will be reduced to a mere trickle.

"Our industries have increased tremendously over the past 20 years and there is much more incentive for Irishmen to marry and settle down in their native land.

"Historically, Ireland was a poor country and our men had good reason to seek opportunities abroad."

The Irish ambassador and Mrs. Warnock were entertained at lunch at Government House today by Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John Nicholson.

This afternoon Mr. Warnock called on Premier Bennett at the Legislative Buildings.

'USEFUL CONTACTS'

"My purpose is to make useful contacts with the B.C. government and leaders of industry with a view to improving balance of our trade with Canada."

In 1967 Ireland bought $5,300,000 worth of goods from Canada, while Canada bought $1,800,000 from Ireland. Her chief Canadian imports are lumber, paper, wheat and aluminum. Canada imports Irish textiles, surgical goods, glass and footwear.

Ireland is also importing an increasing number of tourists from Canada.

"I haven't seen the figure yet," Mr. Warnock said, "but this could be a record year for our tourist industry. We encourage visitors to Britain and Europe to stop off at Shannon Airport (near Limerick) and tour Ireland before resuming their journey.

"The best way to do this is to hire a car, and our car rentals have increased enormously over the past two years."

Mr. and Mrs. Warnock will attend a reception given by Irish immigrants in Vancouver Thursday. They return to Ottawa Sunday.

The community Planning Association of Canada Tuesday made Mayor Hugh Stephen an honorary life member of the organization.

Mayor Stephen, active in planning long before he entered civic politics, accepted the life membership at a banquet at the Empress Hotel.

Uvic Faculty, Board Adopt Academic Freedom Policy

Document Details Tenure Provisions

The University of Victoria has adopted a new statement on academic freedom and tenure.

The Faculty Association ratified the document at a general meeting Tuesday. Its contents, previously approved by the Board of Governors, now become university policy.

Procedures are spelled out for the appointment, promotion and dismissal of faculty members, and for decision-making on contract renewals and the granting of tenure.

The document is the product of a special committee named last year after a crisis developed over the non-renewal of contracts for three popular and controversial teachers.

Tenure is described in the document as "the most important step in the relations between the university and the faculty member"—a traditional guarantee of permanent employment, subject only to formal dismissal proceedings "for cause."

It is designed to protect academic freedom from outside pressures, where faculty have proved their worth as scholars and shown high responsibility in their teaching.

The document says granting of tenure must be considered for each full-time academic appointee within his first five years of university service. Any rank above that of lecturer may carry tenure.

GET ONE YEAR

When a decision is made during a final contract year not to grant tenure or offer reappointment, faculty will be entitled to a one-year terminal appointment.

Decisions, made on the recommendation of committees drawn from the individual's own teaching area, will be subject to appeal to an all-university review committee.

The committee will consist of five members elected annually — three from the faculty of Arts and Science, one from the Faculty of Education, and one from the School of Fine Arts.

The document also provides for hearings in cases involving dismissal. These will be handled by a three-man group to be known as the standing arbitration committee, selected each year by the university president and the president of the faculty Association from faculties outside the university.

All teaching appointments, the document states, "term or tenured, are entitled to academic freedom."

This is defined in part as "the right of a faculty member, free from the threat of institutional reprisals and without regard to outside influence, to teach, investigate, publish and speculate without deference to prescribed doctrine, to participate in the formulation of academic policies, and to criticize the university."

'AS HE SEES IT'

The responsibilities that must accompany academic freedom are outlined in a statement on professional ethics. Included is the duty of a professor "to seek and to state the truth as he sees it," to encourage the free pursuit of learning in his students, and to respect and defend the rights of his associates.

Dr. James E. Hendrickson, president of the Faculty Association, described the tenure document as "the product of many months—even years—of work by numerous colleagues."

Dr. Hendrickson and Dean R. T. Wallace, the university's acting president, agreed that the document would vitally affect every faculty member and spur university development.

Skipper Pleads Not Guilty To All Charges

By JOHN SLINGER

Three charges of negligence today were read against Cmdr. Norman S. Jackson, skipper of HMCS Saskatchewan, a destroyer-escort damaged September 8 in a collision with a submerged rock in Active Pass.

Cmdr. Jackson was paraded before a court martial convened in the wardroom at CFB Esquimalt. He pleaded not guilty.

In the grey, packed courtroom, Cmdr. Jackson, a heavy-set ruddy-face 42 year old, unbuckled his ceremonial sword and ritually placed it on a green-draped table before the court.

In the collision, Saskatchewan's hull and propellers were badly damaged and the ship required $15,000 temporary repairs to continue in service.

The court president, Capt. Frederick C. Frewer, Esquimalt base commander, and his four-man court, heard charges that Cmdr. Jackson "negligently hazarded" the ship, "negligently suffered to be hazarded" the ship and "negligently performed a military duty imposed upon him."

TRIED ON ALL

Cmdr. H. C. Ferne of Ottawa, the judge advocate, told the court that although the second charge is laid as an alternative to the first, Cmdr. Jackson will be tried on all three.

Particulars of the first two charges are identical.

They state that between 10:30 and 11 a.m., on passage from Vancouver to Esquimalt, the accused "failed to take adequate precaution to ensure the safe approach to and transit of Active Pass."

The third charge states that on Sept. 7 or 8, the accused "failed to exercise adequate supervision of the preparation and execution of the passage plan . . ."

It says such supervision "was his duty as captain to do."

Defence counsel is Cmdr. J. L. Henderson of Ottawa.

The court martial is expected to last several days.

FIRE-FIGHTING TRIO PRESENTING AWARDS

Miss Fire Prevention—15-year-old Elaine Wurban—is carrying the 1968 Fire Prevention message to local residents during Fire Prevention Week.

She and her attendants, Marlene Olson and Lorraine Hobbs, are presenting awards to some of the 1,800 students competing in an essay, slogan and poster contest sponsored by the Department of National Defence Fire Department at the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt.

They presented 66 awards to students at John Stubbs Memorial School, Belmont Park, Tuesday, when entertainment was provided by Jerry Gosley and accordionist Al Demoni.

Today they presented awards at the Canadian Services College, Royal Roads. Thursday at 2 p.m. they will make presentations at the Ammunition Depot, Rocky Point; Friday at 2 p.m. they will visit Metchosin elementary school.

Accused Known To Theft Victim

A 21-year-old Toronto man charged with theft of a car from Melvin R. Butler at 4590 Sumner Place was formerly a guest in his home, it was stated in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday.

Peter Simpson is on trial in Assize Court for robbery, breaking and entering and car theft on May 10 last.

Mr. Butler, a seaman, testified that Simpson and another man were overnight guests in his home last April. He said the accused had seen firearms in his home, which were stolen on the night of May 10-11.

Simpson is charged with breaking, entering and theft from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Monty Aldous, 4590 Sumner Place; theft of a car belonging to Mrs. Aldous' son, Butler; and theft from Raymond Victor Moorhouse, an employee of Ernies' Fine Foods.

He is the only survivor of a car crash that killed two other men May 11 when the car slammed into a tree at View Royal while being chased by Esquimalt police.

When the trial resumed today, Mrs. Aldous, testified that two rifles, two pistols, a pair of binoculars and several bottles of liquor were stolen from her home between May 10 and 11 last.

Mrs. Aldous said she and her husband left their home on Friday, May 10, and returned Saturday afternoon, May 11.

The house had been broken into and a number of articles stolen.

Two revolvers were produced in court and Mrs. Aldous said one was identical with one owned by her son, Butler.

"Can you positively identify it as your son's property?" asked defence counsel David Stillings. "Are there any special marks on it that you recognize?"

"No," Mrs. Aldous replied, "but it looks the same."

Earlier, Mrs. Aldous testified that her son owned a Chevrolet convertible very similar to the car which crashed at View Royal. She said the car disappeared from in front of their home during their visit to Vancouver.

Crown prosecutor Louis Lindholm said three men, masked with sweaters, held up a male employee at Ernie's Fine Foods on May 10 and escaped with $150.

A similar sum was recovered from the car after it crashed into a tree.

When the trial opened Monday, Simpson conducted his own defence because he said he could not get free legal aid.

But on Tuesday, Mr. Stillings appeared for the defence. Crown prosecutor Lindholm said Mr. Stilling has been retained on behalf of the accused by the attorney-general's department at the request of Mr. Justice J. S. Aikens.

The trial continued this afternoon.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you tell me what year the Uplands (Oak Bay) was developed, who were the owners and who put the restrictions there?—E.C.F.

A. The old Uplands Farm, a 500-acre section of land south of Cadboro Bay and fronting on the sea, was first owned by the Hudson's Bay Company. A Times article of Feb. 28, 1907 records the sale of this "delightful tract" to J. H. Oldfield and W. H. Gardner of Winnipeg for development as a residential area. The sale was made by C. C. Chipman, chief commissioner for the company in Winnipeg. The initial plan was for a subdivision in which the original owners would have certain policy-making powers. It was not until 1935 that statute law gave power over the area to the municipality of Oak Bay. Any restrictions, therefore, prior to 1935 were placed on the land by the owners at the time.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve crossword puzzles or legal problems, nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. [illegible]

Majority Drink in Grade 12 At Oak Bay High, Panel Told

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The majority of Grade 12 students at one Victoria school drink and have been drunk, a panel discussion was told Tuesday.

Two-thirds of the boys and one-third of the girls gave yes answers to these questions in a survey while five per cent "said they weren't sure," reported student Pat Wolfe.

He was speaking at a panel entitled Youth and Adult Viewpoints on Human Values Today organized by the annual convention of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

The survey was taken among Grade 12 students at Oak Bay senior secondary school.

Other results showed that 60 per cent believe in God, 12 per cent have taken drugs and 20 per cent of them would take drugs again.

Mr. Wolfe said, however, that the RCMP has a list of 180 students at Oak Bay High who have taken drugs "and that's 20 per cent."

Ninety per cent thought students should have more say in education and 85 per cent believe there is a generation gap and it will probably continue.

Thirty per cent said violence could be justified and 35 per cent said they thought free love "was all right, it was good."

He added that "the males were more daring, females were more cautious."

Another panelist, Bruce Fryer of Mount Douglas Senior Secondary School wondered if the results of the survey are accurate.

"The poll might not be taken too seriously by the kids," he said. "Will young people show true values in a test like that?"

A graduate student at the University of Victoria, Elizabeth Meikle, reported the results of a survey she did among 150 high school students in Courtenay and 150 high school students in Victoria.

Describing the results as "not startling," she said in both areas scenery and outdoor recreation were the two aspects which high school students tended to value most.

Next came people, and youth tended to like old buildings. Many valued the cleanliness of air, land and water. They found Victoria streets "very clean" and felt there are areas in the Inner Harbor and Esquimalt which need urban renewal.

In an adult panel later in the day, a Vancouver teacher urged the development of a sense of involvement among high school students.

Charles Bryfogle, who teaches social studies at Sir William Churchill Secondary School, said that for every committed and interested person there are 10 who are not.

The reason people don't generally become involved as adults is because they feel incompetent "so they do nothing and leave it to the politicians," he said.

High school students can deal with issues and problems and most of them won't go on to universities.

"Students have points of view and these should be brought out in secondary schools," he said. "If they know how to do it at high school, a good many will carry it on later."

Richardson Resigns 13 Directorships

OTTAWA (CP) — James Richardson, minister without portfolio, resigned 13 company directorships on being sworn into the Privy Council July 6, a Commons return showed this week.

The return was tabled in reply to a question by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre).

Mr. Richardson, Liberal MP for Winnipeg South, resigned as director of the following companies and corporations:

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Hudson's Bay Company, The Investors Group, Investors Mutual of Canada Ltd., Investors Growth Fund Ltd., Investors International Fund Ltd., Investors Syndicate Ltd., Provincial Mutual Fund Ltd., International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., Canadian Pacific Railway Ltd., United Canadian Shares Ltd., Canadian Indemnity Ltd., James Richardson and Sons Ltd. and its associated companies.

DROPS FOUR POSTS

Don Jamieson, minister of defence production and Commons member for Newfoundland's Burin-Burgeo riding, resigned four directorships: Newfoundland Broadcasting Co. Ltd., CTV Television Network Ltd., CANET Holdings Ltd. and Bavarian Brewing Co. Ltd.

Robert Andras, another minister without portfolio and MP for Port Arthur, still holds directorships in four firms, the reply shows. They are Gibson Motors 1962 Ltd., Gibson Lease and Rentals Ltd., Andras-Hague Ltd., and Strathwin Ltd., all of Port Arthur.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Oilseeds offers drew little support and commercial interest today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange in a light trade and erratic price pattern.

Flax and rapeseed was mostly a local and commission house action with rapeseed running into a fairly heavy volume of hedge selling.

Rye drew good interest by exporters and 20,000 bushels were sold to Japan.

Oats and barley received a small domestic shipper operation.

Total futures trading volume Tuesday: flax 1,234,000 bushels, rapeseed 221,000 and rye 88,000.

Gold War Increases

LONDON (Reuters) — Gold dealers stepped up the bullion price war this week following failure to reach international agreement on South Africa's future gold sales policy.

When dealings opened they added 50 cents an ounce to Friday morning's rate, bringing it up to $39.80 (U.S.)—4.80 an ounce above the official price. Business was brisk, one London dealer said.

The rate also was increased in Zurich, Switzerland and Beirut, Lebanon.

Negotiations in Washington for a [illegible] agreement ended without [illegible] agreement last week. The [illegible] price battle now centres on the free market.

Since establishment of a two-tier price system in London last April, the free market price has been consistently above the $35 official rate.

SEEKS HIGHER PRICE

The United States would like to see the free market price drop to around $35, while South Africa, the world's largest gold producer, wants to see it rise. South Africa thinks this would give a high price for that part of its production sold on the free market and would also put pressure on the U.S. to concede an increase in the official price.

When it looked as though an agreement between the U.S. and South Africa was likely last week, gold hoarders, both investors and speculators, became somewhat frightened and the free market rate here slumped to $38.30—its lowest level since mid-July.

Calgary Plans Big Airport

CALGARY (CP) — Construction of a $30 million international airport on the northeastern edge of the city will start in 1971, Mayor Jack Leslie said Tuesday, after a meeting with department of transport officials.

The new terminal, to be located about 1 mile northeast of the existing one, should be completed by 1973. Construction plans should be completed in a year, the mayor said.

The new airport will be designed to handle the 4.5 million passengers a year expected by 1986. The present terminal, now undergoing temporary renovations, handles 700,000 passengers annually.

Department of transport officials said a new north-south runway would be constructed to handle increased traffic and another east-west strip is also expected.

A satellite airport, for training aircraft, has also been proposed, the mayor said. It will likely be constructed northwest of the city and would be opened prior to the new terminal.

Imperial Offer To Slater Fails

MONTREAL (CP) — Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada Tuesday night confirmed reports that it made an unsuccessful $23 million offer to Slater Steel Industries Ltd. for its controlling interest in Salada Foods Ltd.

An Imperial spokesman said "the matter is closed." The $23 million offer was "the maximum amount assigned to the value of Salada."

The bid for 1,326,569 common shares of the food company—50 per cent of the outstanding common stock—worked out to $17.34 a share and was made by Imperial's wholly-owned subsidiary, Innotron International Ltd.

Wilson Cites Two Principles

GIBRALTAR (AP) — British Prime Minister Wilson predicted today that if he can win approval o two major principles from Premier Ian Smith of Rhodesia it will not be difficult to reach agreement on a return the conference — before Smith's breakaway African colony.

Wilson met with correspondents aboard the Royal Navy warship Fearless—the site for the conference—before Smiths arrival. He listed the two principles as:

—Unimpeded progress toward majority rule for the blacks who are ruled by a white minority.

—Guarantees that no future Rhodesian constitution will contain any mechanism that would allow Smith's regime to restrict black rights at a later date.

"The really important question is guarantees of the first and second principles," Wilson said. "If we can get them, a return to constitutional rule will not be difficult."

GOVERNMENT ILLEGAL

The Wilson government regards as illegal the Smith regime which unilaterally declared independence from Britain in November, 1965.

Before leaving Rhodesia, Smith declared he is committed to preventing black rule "within my lifetime."

Wilson said the talks will be "aimed at discovering whether it would be possible to arrive at a settlement of the Rhodesia problem which would be acceptable to both sides."

towards strengthening the UN's authority.

"Our yardstick ought to be the capacity of the UN to perform the functions which are its proper responsibility and on which there can be at any time a reasonable measure of agreement."

In condemning the Soviet Union and four Warsaw pact allies for occupying Czechoslovakia, Sharp declared:

"No international order can exist on the self-appointed right of any government or group of governments to impose their policies on other sovereign states by force."

The Commonwealth to which Canada belongs, Sharp noted, takes for granted the freedom of its members to develop ties with any other states, regardless of ideology.

"The concern of the members of the UN for Czechoslovakia, its leaders and its people will inevitably continue until the soil of that country is once again free of foreign troops."

Sharp said Canada sees no merit in Soviet claims of "an alleged unilateral right of intervention" in West Germany, where the Kremlin recently claimed to detect increasing signs of Nazi resurgence and a trend toward revenge-seeking.

'FIND ARMS RACE'

But Europe's problems must not stop the world from pressing for an end to the arms race, said Sharp.

"Progress on this front will benefit all nations, including Czechoslovakia."

Sharp suggested a return to the old League of Nations idea of publicizing statistics about weapons and other armament types transferred between states.

He said Canada had noted with approval indications that the Soviet Union favors under certain conditions "the implementation of measures for regional disarmament and reduction of armaments in various parts of the world, including the Middle East."

The minister reaffirmed Canada's support for the Nov. 22, 1967, Security Council resolution calling for peace in the Middle East based on Israel's withdrawal from occupied Arab lands and Arab suspension of their long-standing state of war with Israel.

A solution to the Palestine refugee problem will only be feasible, Sharp said, in the context of an Arab-Israeli settlement.

Sharp called for increased tangible support to the UN Relief and Works Agency, responsible for the refugees. Canada this year had maintained its voluntary pledge of food and cash valued at $1,200,000, and in addition made the equivalent of $850,000 in special donations.

PROMISES INCREASES

The minister said Canada will increase by 25 per cent its contribution next year to the United Nations Development Program and also make "significant increases" in its gifts to the UN Children's Fund and the UN high commissioner for refugees.

"There is no hiding the fact that the level of international assistance to developing countries is inadequate," he said. Canada would increase its aid program year by year to reach the goal of one per cent of gross national product as quickly as possible.

The first development decade had shown some achievements and taught valuable lessons—including the one that improvement of agricultural techniques is critical to the drive to eliminate poverty, ignorance and disease.

On the eve of the second development decade, Sharp noted, Canada's Lester B. Pearson, former prime minister, is heading a World Bank commission which is charting a long-term path for development assistance and related trade policies.

Other points made by the External Affairs Minister:

—Canada continues to believe the United States must halt all bombing of North Vietnam as a first step to peace in Vietnam and that North Vietnam must demonstrate willingness to contribute to a general military de-escalation.

—Canada, which is exploring the prospects of establishing diplomatic relations with mainland China, continues to believe Peking should be in the UN, with Formosa, seat of National China, also represented.

—The UN's capacity to act as an agency to control conflicts and mediate disputes must be strengthened.

—Canada plans to establish an institution "devoted to the practical application of science and technology to the fundamental social and economic problems of development."

—The UN must find some and the Portuguese colonies in South-West Africa, Rhodesia and the Portuguese coloniesin Africa.

No Action Taken On Rink Offer

NORTH COWICHAN — Municipal council has simply "received and filed" a letter from Duncan Recreations Ltd which offered to sell the former James Street curling rink for $80,000.

The company letter said: "The loss to the community of a building for recreational use would be unfortunate."

The old curling rink has not been in use for several months.

Mayor Donald Morton said council should certainly do nothing until after the $850,000 recreation bylaw vote Oct. 26 for a swimming pool and community centre building.

Great Game Played By Many

The British Columbia Royal Commission Report on Automobile Insurance calls for stricter federal government moves to enforce minimum automobile standards in the Canadian automobile industry.

The report released today states that "accidents has become the order of the day upon the highways of the world."

The modern traffic pattern is likened to "a great game played by many players when rules may be constantly broken, without any wicked intent and that consequently it must rest with the player to protect himself and those with him."

MUST PAY

"The motorist is the player and now he must make himself responsible to pay damages following an accident in which he is a party, whether it may be established that he was in any way negligent or not.

"He must now, as he does so frequently, enter upon the highway at his own immediate risk, which he must assume, and for which it is not unjust that he should be made responsible for his own injuries and losses."

The report states that the severity of the accident most often results from lack of safety features in the vehicle.

"It is questionable if any research by British Columbia on safety factors to be embodied in new automobiles would result in automobile manufacturers catering to this relatively restricted market."

"This is a responsibility of the federal government."

The report urged the B.C. representatives on the Canadian government specifications board to "insist that more active demands be made by this body regarding the minimum safety requirements allowable in new cars for sale in Canada."

NOBEL PRIZE for contributions to the cause of peace was awarded today to Rene Cassin, 81, French writer and president of the European Court of Human Rights. The $70,000 award was for his work in writing the United Nations Declaration On Human Rights. It was the first peace prize award since 1965.

STUDENTS TAKE OVER COLLEGE

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 200 students between the ages of 18 and 20 continued to occupy Lionel-Groulx College in suburban Ste. Therese-de-Blainville today to back up demands for reforms within the school.

The occupation of the vocational and a professional college began Tuesday afternoon and students remained in the building throughout the night.

Buses carrying students to the college arrived as usual for morning sessions.

Students moved in and out of the school at will but teachers and persons not having a student card were kept out by students guarding the entrances.

'Price Competition Eliminated'

Sask. Scheme Draws Praise From Probers

The Wootton royal commission on British Columbia automobile insurance said Wednesday the Saskatchewan government insurance plan compares favorably with plans promised by private industry.

"There can be no doubt that under the Saskatchewan scheme there is a considerable economic recovery," the report said.

"The commissioners have drawn the conclusion that, whatever may be its shortages or defects, the Saskatchewan scheme has succeeded in assuring the people of that province a modest scheme of no-fault insurance.

"The commissioners have drawn the conclusion that the insurance rates and coverages required and offered by the Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office compare favorably with similar insurance coverages promised by the industry."

LOWER THAN B.C.

The commission found adjusters' fees in Saskatchewan considerably lower than in B.C. and concluded that the claims cost to the B.C. industry could be lower.

It found that Saskatchewan's experimentation with the no-fault system could make settlements far quicker than under existing B.C. conditions.

But the commission stopped well short of recommending a government - administered insurance plan in B.C., saying:

"The 1946 social and economic environment of Saskatchewan, which was significant in the introduction of the very workable government plan of automobile insurance, is quite different from that which exists in British Columbia today."

One of the complaints of the Wootton royal commission in a report released today is that "motorists are paying roughly $1.60 for each $1 of settlements paid by automobile insurers."

The report on automobile insurance in British Columbia concluded that the current system of insurance protection in the "mayhem-upon-wheels" is unnecessarily expensive to administer.

The commission also queried some of the mechanics of private insurance, noting that in B.C. at least, the Insurance Bureau of Canada has "eliminated price competition" over a large segment of the industry.

However, the three-man commission under Mr. Justice R. A. B. Wootton of the supreme court of B.C. levelled most of its criticism at the existing insurance system rather than specific insurance company practices.

The report said that "without doubt, the sizeable sums presently being spent to provide protection do not represent an effective, much less optimum, use of such moneys."

The more serious the injury or damage, the less realistic settlements were, the commission found.

"Clearly the greatest burdens are being borne by those more seriously afflicted.

Reviewing premium rates and rate increases levied in B.C. in the four - year period ending Jan. 1, 1967, the commission said.

"While the recent need for certain rate increases in British Columbia cannot be denied, rate variations actually imposed lacked justification.

"Faulty judgment and inadequacies in rate - making techniques, to a considerable degree avoidable, resulted in erratic pricing of automobile insurance. The commissioners believe that in the presence of more vigorous competition such a situation would not prevail."

The report criticized the profit structure of private insurance companies, but the criticism was oblique and no direct criticism of excessive profits were levelled at specific companies.

In fact, said the report, "the studies of the commission have not shown guilt or improper conduct which would warrant government taking over a business which was initially pioneered at considerable risk."

Tipsy Pedestrians Blamed

Nine pedestrians impaired by alcohol were killed as a result of collisions with motor vehicles in British Columbia in 1966, the Wootton royal commission on automobile insurance said in its report released today.

Another 24 pedestrians were injured due to impairment.

"Further study is needed on all the implications with respect to the drinking driver, but at the same time the problem of drinking pedestrians who are at fault in causing automobile accidents cannot be ignored," the report states.

Drugs also should be viewed with concern as a cause of accidents.

"The use of drugs refers not only to such as LSD or heroin but also to simple drugs in common use such as antihistamines, tranquilizers or barbiturates."

The report praised B.C.'s recently-implemented roadside 24-hour suspension of the licences of suspected drinking drivers, but recommended more information be made available to drivers as to how much drinking can lead to impairment.

"Further study might be given to suggestions that spot broadcasts on television be utilized; that a poster be placed in a prominent position in all cocktail lounges and beer parlors; or that a special label be attached to all bottles sold through the B.C. liquor control board."

Reinstatement Bid

A spokesman for Cambri Mining and Development Ltd. said Tuesday steps have been taken to have the firm reinstated as a registered company.

The Vancouver Stock Exchange was told Monday by the British Columbia Securities Commission to halt Cambri trading because it was struck from the register of Companies Sept. 19 for failing to file notice of annual meetings.

The spokesman for Cambri said the company had held annual meetings since its incorporation in December, 1965, but failed to report them.

He said the company has successfully applied to a judge of the B.C. Supreme Court for reinstatement.

Oil Statement Taken

The Vancouver Stock Exchange said Tuesday it has accepted a filing statement of Northlode Explorations dealing with its oil exploration plans in California.

The exchange Friday ordered the Vancouver-based company to file the statement by noon Monday following a Los Angeles news release which said Northlode had acquired San Juan Capistrano basin property with a $353 million potential.

Exchange president Jack Van Luven said Northlode, which has an 85.5 per cent interest in the property, submitted an engineering report to support the claim that the property contains 113,000,000 barrels of recoverable oil.

Calgary Plans Big Airport

CALGARY (CP) — Construction of a $20 million international airport on the northeastern edge of the city will start in 1971, Maor Jack Leslie said Tuesday, after a meeting with department of transport officials.

The new terminal, to be located about 1 mile northeast of the existing one, should be completed by 1973. Construction plans should be completed in a year, the mayor said.

The new airport will be designed to handle the 4.5 million passengers a year expected by 1986. The present terminal, now undergoing temporary renovations, handles 700,000 passengers annually.

Department of transport officials said a new north-south runway would be constructed to handle increased traffic and another east-west strip is also expected.

A satellite airport, for training aircraft, has also been proposed, the mayor said. It will likely be constructed northwest of the city and would be opened prior to the new terminal.

Richardson Resigns 13 Directorships

OTTAWA (CP) — James Richardson, minister without portfolio, resigned 13 company directorships on being sworn into the Privy Council July 6, a Commons return showed this week.

The return was tabled in reply to a question by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre).

Mr. Richardson, Liberal MP for Winnipeg South, resigned as director of the following companies and corporations:

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Hudson's Bay Company, The Investors Group, Investors Mutual of Canada Ltd., Investors Growth Fund Ltd., Investors International Fund Ltd., Investors Syndicate Ltd., Provindent Mutual Fund Ltd., International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., Canadian Pacific Railway Ltd., United Canadian Shares Ltd., Canadian indemnity Ltd., James Richardson and Sons Ltd. and its associated companies.

DROPS FOUR POSTS

Don Jamieson, minister of defence production and Commons member for Newfoundland's Burin-Burgeo riding, resigned four directorships: Newfoundland Broadcasting Co. Ltd., CTV Television Network Ltd., CANET Holdings Ltd. and Bavarian Brewing Co. Ltd.

Robert Andras, another minister without portfolio and MP for Port Arthur, still holds directorships in four firms, the reply shows. They are Gibson Motors 1962 Ltd., Gibson Lease and Rentals Ltd., Andras-Hague Ltd., and Strathwin Ltd., all of Port Arthur.

Gold War Increases

LONDON (Reuters) — Gold dealers stepped up the bullion price war this week following failure to reach international agreement on South Africa's future gold sales policy.

When dealings opened they added 90 cents an ounce to Friday morning's rate, bringing it up to $39.80 (U.S.)—4.80 an ounce above the official price. Business was brisk, one London dealer said.

The rate also was increased in Zurich, Switzerland and Beirut, Lebanon.

Negotiations in Washington for a policy agreement ended without a settlement last week. The gold price battle now centres on the free market.

Since establishment of a two-tier price system in London last April, the free market price has been consistently above the $35 official rate.

SEEKS HIGHER PRICE

The United States would like to see the free market price drop to around $35, while South Africa, the world's largest gold producer, wants to see it rise. South Africa thinks this would give a high price for that part of its production sold on the free market and would also put pressure on the U.S. to concede an increase in the official price.

When it looked as though an agreement between the U.S. and South Africa was likely last week, gold hoarders, both investors and speculators, became somewhat frightened and the free market rate here slumped to $38.30—its lowest level since mid-July.

Imperial Offer To Slater Fails

MONTREAL (CP) — Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada Tuesday night confirmed reports that it made an unsuccessful $23 million offer to Slater Steel Industries Ltd. for its controlling interest in Salada Foods Ltd.

An Imperial spokesman said "the matter is closed." The $23 million offer was "the maximum amount assigned to the value of Salada."

The bid for 1,326,569 common shares of the food company—30 per cent of the outstanding common stock—worked out to $17.34 a share and was made by Imperial's wholly-owned subsidiary, Innotron International Ltd.
